WPA Orders 700,000 Cut From Rolls In 3 Months

April Reduction Won't Exceed 200,000, Says Col. Harrington

Trade and Defense

CONCLUSION of Senate fighting over the reciprocal trade agreements program and consideration of defense appropriations face Congress this week. Page 2.

Green Alarmed

By the Associated Press

The Works Projects Administration announced yesterday the approximately 700,000 persons would be dropped from its rolls within the next three months.

Col. F. C. Harrington, WPA commissioner, said the cuts were necessary to keep work relief within the expenditures authorized by Congress.

He said the reductions would be made gradually to cushion the shock to local relief organizations. The April curtailment, he said, probably would not exceed 200,000.

The American Federation of Labor at the same time estimated that the total of unemployed in February was 10,572,000, a figure which President William Green said showed that "employment gains of last fall have not been lost."

The February figure was a reduction of 613,000 from the same month a year ago and slightly lower than the 10,656,000 estimated by the A. F. L. for January of this year.

Living Standard Falls

Alarmed by a serious "new departure" in the composite life of the Nation, Green warned that the United States living standard has dropped by 7.5 per cent since 1929.

He declared it important that the "true national situation" of unemployment and income be made clear. Taking issue with incomplete interpretation of Government statistics, he said that, although 1939 income in goods and services equaled that of 1929, the American population has increased in this interim from 121,526,000 to 131,180,000.

"In other words," he said, in a statement prepared for the Federationist, union organ, "our 1939 income had to feed, clothe house and serve nearly 10,000,000 more people. Because of this population increase, the income we produced in 1939 provided 7.5 per cent less for each person than the same income had provided ten years ago.

"That means that our national living standard is lower by just this amount. This decrease in living standard is a new departure in the United States. In the past we have increased our living standards by leaps and bounds.

States "Real Issue"

"Economic health and full employment require that we keep on creating wealth and raising the national income of goods and services for each person as we have done in the past."

The "real issue," which Green said he could not permit to be clouded by published statements of others, he described as follows:

"Nearly four-fifths of all American families—23,000,000 families—are living at income levels below $2,000 a year which is minimum for health and efficiency. We cannot accept a production level too low to lift these millions out of their poverty."

WPA enrollment stood at 2,311,500 on March 20. Officials said they expected to work it down to about 1,500,000 by June 30.

The forthcoming reductions, they said, will be comparatively drastic because WPA has been carrying through the last few months almost as many relief workers as it carried during the 1938-39 fiscal year when it had an appropriation of $2,225,000,000.

Secret Is Out

ADELAIDE MOFFETT

WILLIAM P. BUCKNER, JR.

By International News Service

New York, March 31.—Adelaide Moffett, society singer, and William P. Buckner, jr., playboy convicted in the Philippine bond swindle, were married February 8 in Danville, Va., the beautiful bride admitted tonight.

Word of the wedding came as no surprise to cafe society. For the past two months—in fact until the very day last week when Buckner entered the Federal House of Detention to begin serving his 18-month prison sentence—they have been daily luncheon companions at the smart spots and nightly companions at the hot spots.

Tonight, as Buckner sat in the Federal detention pen awaiting transfer to Lewisburg (Pa.) prison tomorrow, his secret bride, questioned while dining at the Stork Club with her sister, Ruth, Warren Johnson and Mr. and Mrs. Richard Berlin, finally admitted they had slipped away on February 8 to the Virginia town near the North Carolina border where they were married.

Buckner, often photographed with and oftener reported engaged to beautiful Loretta Young, was convicted of devising a scheme to defraud holders of Philippine Railroad Company bonds.

Nazis Move To Save Food Supply Line

Budapest Guaranty Sought to Thwart Threat of Allied Blockade in Balkans

By the Associated Press

Budapest, March 31.—The German minister of agriculture, Walther R. Darre, is expected here Tuesday, it was reported today, to hold conferences with Yugoslav, Hungarian and Italian ministers of agriculture and push the Reich's campaign to assure a continued flow of foodstuffs, oil and raw materials.

Although Darre is coming ostensibly to visit Budapest's agricultural fair, it was said his real purpose is to push Germany's case in the face of an expected stiffening of the Allies' economic warfare on this flank of the Reich.

First Step in Campaign

With the Allies expected to start a huge economic and diplomatic offensive in southeastern Europe to make their blockade more effective, foreign observers said Darre probably would seek to clinch Hungarian and Yugoslav agricultural exports for the Reich as a first step in a Nazi campaign of resistance.

Britain has called her diplomatic representatives in the Balkans to London for a conference, and Gen. Maxime Weygand, commander in chief of French forces in the Near East, is in Paris for conferences with the government.

Quick Nazi action to sew up southeastern Europe's exports was seen by foreign observers as especially necessary in view of persistent reports in authoritative diplomatic quarters in the Balkans that Turkey has agreed to let the French and British fleets pass through the Dardanelles to clamp on a Black Sea blockade.

(The British foreign office denied such permission had been asked or given. Foreign office officials in Paris likewise said they could not confirm the report.)

Would Block Soviet Oil

Such a blockade presumably would be instituted to stop the flow of Russian oil, most of which comes by ship across the Black Sea, to Germany.

The exact significance of Weygand's Paris visit was not immediately apparent, although attention recently has been centered on the Near East as the next possible "theater of war."

Weygand's army in Syria has been generally understood to be something under 200,000 men—which neutral observers consider insufficient for a major offensive action. However, there also are large British and Turkish forces in the Near East.

Count Mihaly Teleki, Hungarian agricultural minister, will be host to Darre, Branko Cubrilovic, Yugoslav agricultural minister, and Giuseppe Tassinari, Italian agricultural minister.

Hungary and Yugoslavia both are huge exporters of wheat and other

Fight Back, N.A.M. Urges Business

Stop Turning Cheek, Reply With Facts To Unjust Attacks, Organization Advises

By the Associated Press

Lancaster, Pa., March 31.—The National Association of Manufacturers called on American industrialists tonight to "mobilize" in a country-wide campaign for the principle of private enterprise.

H. W. Prentis, jr., association president, sounded the keynote by asserting that "henceforth, industry will decline to 'turn the other cheek.' It will meet unjustified attacks with undeniable facts, always courteously, but nonetheless militantly and decisively."

Makes Radio Address

In a radio address Prentis coupled announcement of the drive with a denunciation of national economic planning.

Under such planning, he said, "you would have here eventually just what you see in the dictator-controlled countries . . ."

Explaining the campaign in a statement supplementing his broadcast, Prentis said 8,000 members of the association would enlist 40,000 other manufacturers in a drive to impress on the American mind this one element:

"The fundamental American principle that private enterprise is inseparably linked with our representative democracy and traditional civil and religious liberties."

Industry and private enterprise, he asserted, "will never be fully understood as long as the confidence-destroying attacks of demagogic detractors are allowed to go unchallenged."

He described private enterprise, together with civil and religious liberties, as "the tripod of freedom."

Go Hand in Hand

"Throughout the ages these three institutions have gone hand in hand," Prentis said in his broadcast. "They are inseparable. When one goes, all go . . . The spiritual principle of the sanctity of the individual soul is the foundation of our entire American system of government, economics and civil and religious liberty."

Prentis added that "this mobilization for understanding of private enterprise is a Nation-wide program of and by manufacturers—but for America."

"We propose to mobilize all industry for the creation of a national unity to achieve that objective," he said.

"Industry is convinced," he continued, "that much of the economic stagnation in which this country has been wallowing results directly from an attitude of covert or open hostility to private enterprise on the part of many persons of high and low degree."

The result, he said, was "widespread public misunderstanding of the aims and ideals of American industry."

Such misunderstanding, he asserted, "stands as a barrier to national economic progress"

Four Children and Girl Pilot Killed as Plane Dives 500 Feet

Crowd Sees Craft Burst Into Flames After Seattle Crash

By the Associated Press

Seattle, Wash., March 31.—A plane hurtled 180 miles an hour into a sawdust pile here today and the woman pilot and four children passengers died in the flaming craft, turning a gay sightseeing trip into tragedy.

The dead: Miss Cora Sterling, Washington State's first woman transport pilot; Janet, 8, and Charleen, 4, daughters of King County (Seattle) Commissioner Jack Taylor; and James 10, and Allen, 14, sons of Charles Taylor, of Seattle, and nephews of the commissioner.

The plane, which had been in the air only 15 minutes, was flying at about 500 feet when, suddenly, it side-slipped while making a vertical bank, and crashed full speed

Witnesses differed as to whether the plane caught fire in the air, backfired, or plunged to earth with its motor on. As it struck, the gasoline tank exploded and attempts at rescue were thwarted by the fierce flames. The ship was reduced to ashes and twisted metal. It was an hour before bodies of the victims could be recovered.

Claude Thompson, operator of the Boeing Field control tower, said the ship made a graceful arc as though the pilot intended to return to the field just before it crashed. He described the crash as a continuance of the arc and expressed belief Miss Sterling had, for some reason, been unable to level off for a landing.

The accident occurred in what fliers called ideal weather conditions and in full view of hundreds of Sunday afternoon drivers.

August Toellner, another witness, said the ship appeared to catch fire in mid-air; but William Herrold and Clarence Prentice, others who saw the crash, said they noticed no flames until the gasoline tank exploded at the moment of impact.

CORA STERLING.

Miss Sterling was described by acquaintances as an excellent pilot who flew regularly. A former secretary to Stevenson, she had been employed in the Seattle police department offices recently.

She obtained her first flying license at 18 and was then reputed the youngest licensed woman flier in the Nation. Last year, she was elected president of the Associated Women Pilots of the Northwest.

1940 Rivals Face Tests In 2 States Tomorrow

Dewey, Vandenberg, Roosevelt, Garner Involved in 2-State Vote on Delegates

A week of political developments, involving the third-term draft movement directly, and expected to be felt through the whole 1940 campaign, was awaited last night.

Involved are both primary election and State convention expressions on presidential candidates.

Chief interest centered in Wisconsin's primary tomorrow, where the Garner and Roosevelt forces will meet in their first test of ballot sentiment, and, in the Republican race, Dewey and Vandenberg slates of delegates will compete.

Garner on New York Ballot

New York State's primary, also tomorrow, presents its chief battle in the Sixteenth Congressional District, where Alfred E. Smith, jr., and State Senator John J. McNaboe, as Garner supporters, compete for selection as delegates with Representative James H. Fay and John T. Egan, backing Roosevelt.

Alf M. Landon's control of the Kansas delegation to the Republican National Convention is expected to be solidified and confirmed at the party's State convention on Thursday, when four delegates-at-large, probably headed by Landon, and 14 district delegates will be formally chosen.

Maine Republicans, on the same day, will hold their State convention to select 13 delegates to the national nominating convention. Democrats in Arizona, at State convention, will select six delegates to the Chicago convention.

High praise for Secretary of State Hull as a Presidential candidate came, meanwhile, from Postmaster General James A. Farley, himself an avowed candidate for the Democratic Presidential nomination. At the same time, Farley was quoted at Nashville as declaring that "my delegates are pledged to me for top place on the Presidential ticket." His comment was on reports that he would accept second place on a Hull-Farley ticket.

Third Term Up in Wisconsin

Despite President Roosevelt's silence on the third term issue, two slates of delegates pledged to him will be on the Wisconsin ballot. One is known as the Roosevelt-Farley ticket, and is backed by National Committeeman Charles E. Broughton.

The Postmaster-General's name was included, supporters of the ticket say, as a complimentary gesture. The second Roosevelt group, calling itself the Democratic Party organization of Wisconsin, is pledged to support whomever Mr. Roosevelt desires as his successor should he not run himself.

Backers of the Garner ticket are out-and-out anti-third termers.

Dewey closed a whirlwind two-day campaign for Wisconsin delegates Saturday with a speech in Madison in which he said his objectives were to end unemployment, restore "economy in Government," and keep the country out of war.

Vandenberg made no personal appearances in the State, and his supporters said this was evidence that he was more concerned with his duties in Congress than with his personal ambitions.

Politicians of both parties will study the Wisconsin returns for a clew as to how the large Progressive Party vote in the State will be recorded for President in the November election. The Progressives have no ticket of their own Tuesday and their leaders—Senator Robert M. La Follette and former Gov. Philip La Follette—have kept silent during the delegate campaign. Other prominent Progressives, however, have urged the party members to vote for the Roosevelt-Farley ticket.

Seven French Craft Downed, Berlin Claims

Paris Admits 'Intense' Air War in West, Mentions No Losses

By the Associated Press

Berlin (Monday), April 1.—Seven French planes were shot down in various encounters with the German air force yesterday without the loss of a single German machine, the government radio announced this morning.

Amplifying the radio announcement, DNB, official German news agency, reported a number of air encounters along the French front in which 25 Messerschmitt planes fought 36 French Morane fliers.

Near Puettlingen, DNB said, eight Messerschmitts attacked eight Moranes and shot down two. South of Saargemuend nine Messerschmitt planes fought 20 Morane warplanes and caused two enemy ships to crash while above Moerchingen eight Messerschmitts successfully battled eight French pursuit planes and destroyed three.

Nazis Avenged U. S. Aloofness, French Assert

White Book Is Held Reply to Rejection Of 'Peace Offensive'

By the Associated Press

Paris, March 31.—A semiofficial French statement today charged the Germans with issuing alleged Polish documents, which attributed war machinations to United States diplomats, in an attempt to avenge themselves against Roosevelt because he refused to be an "accomplice" in a Hitler peace offensive.

Poles to Reply

At the same time a Polish government spokesman said a communique was being prepared for release, probably tomorrow, which would brand as "fakes" the documents the Germans said they discovered in the files of the Polish foreign office in Warsaw and which they made public Friday.

The spokesman said that all important diplomatic papers were sent out of Warsaw to places of security the first week of the September war between Poland and Germany.

Nazis Spoke First

The French statement saw "significance" in the fact the Germans did not publish the documents until President Roosevelt had conferred with Undersecretary Welles on his return to Washington from his fact-finding European tour.

After the conference, it said, the American Executive "dashed their hopes" with the statement that there was "scant immediate prospect for the establishment of any just, stable and lasting peace" in Europe.

(The President's statement came after his second conference with Welles, on Friday, and after the Germans issued the alleged Polish documents.)

It was added that the Germans wanted to compromise President Roosevelt before public opinion and "to try to prevent his reelection in

River Rising Near Damaging 1936 Stage; N. Y. Waters Abate

(Picture on Page 14)

By the Associated Press

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., March 31.—Serious flood threats faced several Eastern and Central Pennsylvania communities as streams continued their upward surge late tonight.

The crest forecast for Wilkes-Barre, where observers earlier had predicted conditions "worse than in the disastrous St. Patrick's Day floods of 1936," was revised upward shortly before midnight.

The north branch of the Susquehanna there was expected to reach 31 or 33 feet some time late tomorrow, only a foot or two short of the 33.3 crest in March, 1936.

Coast Guard Aids Rescue

The west branch at Williamsport crawled toward an expected 25-foot peak, which would spread the muddy waters into low-lying industrial areas along the banks of the stream.

Meanwhile, Coast Guard boats and emergency crews were rushed to endangered Susquehanna River towns from the New Jersey coast on orders from Washington. State agencies at Harrisburg rushed assistance.

At least six persons drowned in the flood waters across the State. Four were Western Pennsylvanians.

Low-lying communities along the Delaware in both Pennsylvania and New Jersey watched the rising waters lap at their doors.

Floodwaters in the other sections of the East and West seemed to have reached their crests last night without inflicting great damage.

Recent rains and thaws had threatened to send several rivers surging over their banks into cities and over agricultural areas with disastrous effect in northern California, western Pennsylvania and

Tobey Warns He'll 'Blow Census Open'

Senator Promises To Reveal 'Secrets' On Radio Tonight

Three Senators, a Government spokesman and two women civic leaders last night condemned and defended the question list for the 1940 census in a furious, free-swinging, name-calling debate broadcast from the Interior Department studios, leaving the situation as follows:

The census taking still is scheduled to start tomorrow, along the lines adopted by the Commerce Department, despite the complaint of Senator Charles W. Tobey (Republican), of New Hampshire, that some of the questions are illegal.

Tobey said that, in a speech over the N. B. C. Red Network at 8 o'clock tonight, he would reveal secret information about the census that would "blow the situation wide open."

Secretary of Commerce Harry H. Hopkins cautioned his 120,000 census takers to be polite to citizens, reminding the staff that the census "is not an inquisition" but

Mission Gives Funds to Help Repair St. Peter's

Mission habitues, to whom adversity is no stranger, yesterday extended a helping hand—filled with nickels and pennies—to a Catholic parish in distress.

Attending services at the Volunteers of America Mission, 417 Pennsylvania avenue, more than 100 of the city's poor contributed to a fund for St. Peters, historic church recently swept by fire. Lieut. Maj. H. Mills Eroh took up the collection and presented it to the parish.

Final Approval Of 5-Cent Milk Plan Seen Today

Final step in officially approving the District's 5-cent milk plan for the city's needy before it goes before District officials is expected to be taken today, when it will be acted on by the Department of Agriculture.

Dr. Edwin W. Gaumnitz, head of the department's marketing and marketing agreements division, said last night that the plan will probably be approved "as soon as the right men can be gotten together to act on it."

Don't Believe It! Take a Glance At the Calendar

Should someone rush up today (in America) and pointing to the sky say, "Look at those planes about to bomb the town . . ."

Or, "the Potomac River is rising and about to flood the city . . ."

Or, "Mr. Roosevelt has just announced that he will run for a third term."

Or anything as sensational as: "Look, out! your trousers are tearing up the back!"

Then pay no heed, unless you naturally want to "bite" so that an ancient custom can be kept alive.

To "bite" unwittingly will place one in the category which Webster defines in essence as an April Fool's Day sucker, or, specifically: "One who is sportively imposed upon on the first day of April, All Fools' Day."

Florida Returns Forfeited Bond Of Egypt's Envoy

Holly Hill, Fla., March 31 (AP).—Volusia County's relationships with Egypt have taken a new and unexpected turn.

A Northbound motorist was arrested here in January for speeding, posted a $10 bond and forfeited it. Official Holly Hill forgot the matter until Secretary of State Hull wrote Gov. Cone that the motorist happened to be Mahmoud Hassan Bey, Egyptian Minister to the United States.

The letter left the impression, said Mayor Alex Littlefield, of Holly Hill, that a bit of diplomatic courtesy would have been in order.

So the mayor wrote the Secretary an apology and included a refund of $10, payable to the envoy.

Cromwell to Talk Again in Toronto

Ottawa, March 31.—United States Minister James H. R. Cromwell, who since his arrival here has been much in demand as a speaker at Canadian functions, is to make a second speech in Toronto tomorrow night.

It is doubted, however, that there will be in the speech any such material as brought upon him a rebuke from the State Department for his last Toronto address.

Hazen Declared Out of Danger

District Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, who has been in Doctor's Hospital since he suffered an attack of coronary thrombosis March 20, was declared out of danger yesterday by Dr. Stuart Foster.

Dr. Foster said the 72-year-old Commissioner was "much better" and would be able to leave the hospital soon, unless an unexpected complication intervenes.

70-Degree Afternoon Draws Thousands to Roads and Parks

Thousands of Washingtonians flocked out of doors yesterday, jamming parks, golf courses, the Zoo and the highways, as the mercury soared to a 1940 high of 70 degrees in late afternoon.

Cheered by the near-summer weather, the Cherry Blossom Festival Committee foresaw blossoming of pink blooms in time for an on-schedule opening of the celebration April 5.

Five persons were hurt in traffic accidents on streets congested by District residents motoring to Virginia and Maryland for outings.

In a four-car crash at Thirteenth and Buchanan streets northwest, a car driven by Arthur Burr, 35, of Arlington, Va., collided with autos driven by Joseph Hall, of Silver Spring, Md., and Ernest J. Jones, of 4207 Thirteenth street northwest, forcing the latter into a machine driven by J. Nelson Anderson, of Arlington, according to police.

Police said Burr drove on for a block before stopping. He was charged at Sixth Precinct Station with driving while drunk and leaving after colliding, after being treated at Gallinger Hospital for body and head lacerations.

Virginia Scientist Asks Public To Help Solve Eclipse Mystery

By Howard W. Blakeslee
Associated Press Science Editor.

New York, March 31.—A call to lay white sheets on the ground during the ring eclipse of the sun in the South on April 7, to solve one of astronomy's mysteries, was issued to the public here today.

The mystery is the source of shadow bands, long dark bars, each an inch to several inches wide, and 6 to 18 inches apart, which sweep rapidly along the ground a few minutes before and after the total phase of an eclipse of the sun.

The ring eclipse will appear at "totality" as a rim of fire around the edge of the dark moon. Shadow bands appear in this as well as in ordinary eclipses of the sun. The project to enlist the public in getting data for learning the source of these shadows is sponsored by Richard L. Feldman, astronomer of East Falls Church, Va.

The shadows are parallel to the edge of the moon's shadow, which is an oval, traveling like a football pointed straight ahead. The bands may move either toward the shadow, or away from it. Their speeds range up to 15 feet a second, or about 10 miles an hour.

Theories are that they either come from waves in the air, that is like

Bright Future Seen for U. S. Shipowners

Foreign Policy Report Discloses Traffic Increase

A substantially brightened picture for American shipping interests was presented by the Foreign Policy Association yesterday when it presented the view that the shipowners "may come out of the war in an improved financial condition" if the United States remains neutral.

In a report showing that 90 American merchant vessels, aggregating 364,014 tons, have been sold and transferred to foreign registry, the association noted that virtually all ships displaced by the war and the Neutrality Act forbidding their entering combat zones have found employment elsewhere.

Sold At War Prices

John C. de Wilde, of the association's research staff, pointed out that that most of the ships transferred have been obsolete or nearly obsolete ships which have been sold at prices "considerably higher" that those prevailing before the war.

He reported the initial disorganization of shipping caused by the war was soon corrected. Although the withdrawal of American bottoms aggravated an incipient shortage of ships in traffic in the combat zone, neutral and belligerent vessels have largely filled the breach. There is no evidence that American ports are congested with goods awaiting shipment, in spite of the fact that exports have remained well above the level of the preceding year, his report said. It added:

"The Neutrality Act undoubtedly deprived a number of shipping concerns of potentially large earnings, but . . . many American companies were able to expand their services outside the combat zone either because traffic increased or because foreign competitors withdrew their ships. In common with other neutrals, our shipowners are in a position to reap greater profits."

Ships Need to Carry Coal

Meanwhile, the Coal Exporters Association complained that lack of ships was "seriously hampering the export trade" in coal.

A. C. Van Sickler, secretary of the association, said the Government should allow more than 100 cargo ships now decommissioned to be put into service.

The Maritime Commission, Van Sickler said, has insisted it could not authorize these ships, built more than 20 years ago, to be recommissioned unless Congress approved. Coal, lumber, cotton and other exporter groups are "importuning Congress for requisite action," he added.

Walter Reed Hospital for shock and severe head cuts after he was struck down by a street car in the 6600 block of Georgia avenue. Police said the trolley was operated by Robert F. Peters, 28, of 109 P street northwest.

Others injured included George F. Smith, colored, 58, of 2418 Seventeenth street northwest, fractured right leg; Marie Saxon, colored, 59, of 946 L street northwest, cerebral concussion, and Roland Davis, 50, of Walter Reed Hospital.

Park police officials said crowds in parks and on highways were "probably the biggest" of the season.

The Zoo had its busiest day of the year, as upward of 27,000 persons formed a continual stream through the gardens. Because of the throng, officials ordered the gates kept open until 7 p. m., a half-hour overtime.

A "regular summer Sunday" throng was the way attaches of East Potomac Park links described the large golfing turnout there.

Motorists who chose to enjoy the balmy day on the highways packed bumper-to-bumper on the Fourteenth Street Bridge from 3 p. m. to 6:30 p. m., police reported. The jam became nearly as great on Memorial Bridge, as park officials ordered some of the traffic on the Fourteenth street span rerounted to the former bridge.

The Weather Bureau forecast for today was cloudy and colder. Yesterday's high exceeded the 69-degree heat of Wednesday, next highest temperature this year.

Highlighting the opening day of the Chery Blossom Festival will be the coronation of Queen Rose Cauliflower after her arrival at 7:30 p. m. at the Tidal Basin with a torch-lit escort. A speech of greeting to visitors here for the celebration by Chairman Edgar Morris will precede her arrival.

A pageant of American folk dances will be presented at 8:30 p. m. by the Evelyn Davis Dancers. The operetta, "Blossom Time," performed by the Columbia Light Opera Company, will climax the first-day program.

Dies to Demand Bund Reveal Member List

Promises to Press Contempt Action On Communists

By the Associated Press

Denouncing the Communist Party as an agency for "perpetration of misdemeanors and high crimes," Representative Dies (Democrat), of Texas, said last night that he intended to go every constitutional length to obtain and publish a list of its members.

In a radio address the chairman of the House Committee on Un-American activties said he also would take such action against "the German-American Bund and all other organizations which our committee finds to be subversive."

Called a "Conspiracy"

Dies said it should be recognized that the Communist Party is "not just another political party" but is a "foreign conspiracy."

"This means," he continued, "that Communist Party members who are subject to strict party discipline in all their activities are foreign conspirators who cannot honorably or honestly serve the American Government."

This must be "brought home," he declared, to all Government officials who have "permitted Communists and sympathizing 'partyliners' to land in Government jobs;" to union officials who tolerate Communists, and to Americans who have allowed themselves to be "recruited into the vast network of 'front organizations' which the party controls."

Discussing the refusal of Communist leaders to answer questions before his committee last week, Dies said it was a "party line" aimed at seeking "martyrdom or the appearance of martyrdom."

Defense Campaign Planned

"I know on good authority," he added, "that the Communist Party will shortly attempt to set up a national defense committee with a list of prominent persons as sponsors and then launch a campaign to raise large sums of money for the cite James Dolsen, one of the reluc- party chest."

The House already has voted to tant Communist witnesses, for contempt. Dies has said similar action will be sought against others. Conviction in Federal Court of contempt of the House is punishable by $1,000 fine and one year's imprisonment.

The Dies committee is scheduled to resume its hearings Wednesday with Communist leaders from the Boston area as witnesses.

Montgomery Voters' Books Close Friday

Unregistered residents of Montgomery County will not be eligible to participate in either the Democratic or Republican primary election on May 6 unless they enroll within the next five days.

Under the law, registrations are not permitted in Montgomery County within 30 days of a primary election. Consequently midnight Friday is the deadline. To register qualified residents, the Permanent Board of Registry will be in session in the office of the supervisors of elections in the old courthouse in Rockville from 9 a. m. to 4:30 p. m. Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thufsday and Friday of this week.

The Federal Diary:

Wage-Hour Check to Be Made With or Without Complaints

Col. Fleming Says He Will Drop Policy of Waiting for a Complying Employer's Tip on Competitors

By Edward Ryan

In the face of a $1,000,000 budget cut, wage-hour officials have ordered an expanded program of enforcement whereby routine industrial inspections will be made before complaints are filed.

Col. Philip B. Fleming, administrator, said that the program is aimed to protect employers already complying with the wage-hour regulations.

"From now on, we are not going to await complaints in order to protect establishment in compliance," said Col. Fleming. "Whenever an employer in a low-wage industry has protested that he could not comply because his competitors were not complying, we have regarded that as a complaint and inspected the competitors.

"Now that our field force is growing, we will carry out a policy of protecting the employer whether or not he wishes to make a complaint against his competitors."

Fleming said the move is a step toward complete routine inspection of all plants governed by the act.

The ferment of democracy bubbles full blast during the deadline rush for automobile tags, boils over at times when the waiting lines are longest. One citizen, after long waiting, drew from the mixup this suffrage plea:

"If this is the way things are going to be handed I want to be responsible for them."

A 13-man suicide squadron will test the "fall of man" tonight at the Mayflower Hotel.

The 13, chosen for staying power and a taste for early April foolery, will be trying out the special power water prepared for the Inventors' and Patent Day dinner in the Mayflower April 10.

There's one question about whether they will be drinking snakebite remedy, dragged from a dead and septic past, or good, red whisky pepped up a bit with wine, into a "fall of man" cocktail—and before April 1 it can't be answered finally.

The probabilities seem to be these:

The 13 will start their dinner with an eye-raising hint, a hair-raising bottle. The latter is in the form of a coiled snake, with jaws grasping a red bakelite apple, the stopper. The hint comes in the label. "Dear Bacchus," writes Adam, "last night Eve stepped out with a snake, and when I asked her this morning how come the apple, she gave me a bite." He asked help to keep angels from chasing him with flaming swords, and Bacchus suggested trying the improved version of Patent No. 379,183.

The hint and the bottle may add up to four, but the improvement will insure against its adding up to the original snakebite recipe — straight alcohol, gall of the earth, rattlesnake weed, alum and tincture of iodine. The dose was "one wine glass every hour until the pain ceases, then every three or four hours until cured."

On hand to follow this prescription tonight at 7 p. m. will be Commerce Department officials and members of Congress, including Representative Kramer (Democrat), California, of the House Patent Committe; Patent Commissioner Coe, former District Commissioner George Allen; Thomas Midgley, jr., chairman of the American Chemical Society board; Alton Emery, secretary of the society; Judge Finis J. Garrrett, of the Court of Customs and Patent Appeals; Watson Davis, director of Science Service; E. Willard Jensen, Ralph Champlain, William J. Tate, Fred Polangin and Jack Evans.

River Rise Perils Wilkes-Barre

upstate New York, but generally clear weather intervened to quiet the waters and drive them back from the land.

Four Lives Lost

The floods took four lives in upstate New York, however, two resulting from a motor car accident and two by drowning. Snow melting under sunny skies kept streams at flood stage and forced residents in low-lying land to flee their homes in boats.

The Ohio River rolled toward a 38-foot crest at Steubenville, Ohio, and more than two score families in the nearby villages of Empire, Stratton and Alikanna were prepared to vacate their homes, in the path of flood waters.

The Weather Bureau predicted that the waters of the Monongahela and Allegheny rivers which form the Ohio River at Pittsburgh, would not reach critical heights, despite their gradual rise early yesterday.

The Weather Bureau predicted conditions in the Ohio Valley would not be serious, as swollen waters rolled into the "Golden Triangle" business section of Pittsburgh, 1.3 feet over flood stage at noon.

Several highways in upstate New York were inundated and closed to traffic. Deputy sheriffs dynamited the Genessee River to free ice jams. The Ellicott Creek Road, north of Buffalo, was closed.

Many families left their homes as Onondaga Creek continued to spread south of Syracuse, N. Y. Firemen and volunteers manned rescue boats, and about 20 city blocks were barricaded to traffic.

A meteorologist in Binghamton, N. Y., said the flood emergency in south central New York was over. The Chenango River, more than 3 feet above flood stage, and the Susquehanna, more than a foot over flood level, forced many families in the lowlands to leave their homes.

Trade Pacts Face Close Vote Again Today

Another close Senate vote on amending the reciprocal trade agreements resolution was forecast last night for today, when Western Democrats will endeavor to bar any reductions in excise taxes on copper, oil, coal and lumber.

While Senator Harrison (Democrat), of Mississippi, floor manager for the resolution extending authority for the trade agreements program for three years, said Administration forces would reject any such provision, Senators McCarran and Pittman, Nevada Democrats, forecast success for the proposed restriction.

They expressed belief that the suggestion would win more votes than the Pittman proposal to require Senate ratification of all future agreements, a move defeated Friday, 44 to 41.

Passage Seen Wednesday

Harrison predicted final passage of the House-approved extension resolution on Wednesday, though other proposed amendments must first be disposed of. In addition to the excise tax proposal, creation of an export-import control board with power to curtail exports of war materials to countries which discriminate against American civil exports is being sought by Senator La Follette (Progressive), of Wisconsin.

House and Senate consideration of defense appropriations, beginning Wednesday, will provide economy advocates with an opportunity to seek further cuts in budgetary requests. An Associated Press compilation yesterday showed a net reduction of only $57,774,349 in the 13 supply bills already acted on by one or both houses.

Economies Wiped Out

Earlier in the session, the cuts in budget figures totaled about $300,000,000, the Associated Press pointed out, but this prospective saving was nearly wiped out by Senate increases in the farm appropriations bill, and House action last Friday in boosting President Roosevelt's recommended appropriations for the CCC and the National Youth Administration.

National defense, as represented by the Navy appropriations bill, already has borne the brunt of the reductions in budget recommendations. However, some of the Navy cut may yet be restored.

The Senate is scheduled to decide this week whether any part of the $111,699,699 which the House whittled off the Navy's bill should be put back. The Navy has asked for restoration of at least $50,000,000.

The War Department appropriations bill is scheduled to be reported to the House Wednesday. The Appropriations Committee is understood to have cut this measure about $80,000,000 under budget estimates.

Army Yields Reserve

Army officials were said to have agreed to elimination of $27,000,000 originally asked to finance purchase of "reserve planes" for the Air Corps. It was explained that the increase in capacity of plane plants made a large reserve unnecessary.

Aside from the House slash of $111,699,699 in the Navy measure, the largest was a $74,704,473 cut in budget recommendations for the independent agencies of the Government—a reduction agreed upon by a joint committee of both houses, but not yet formally approved by the two bodies.

Congressional action has been completed thus far on only three monetary bills. An emergency deficiency appropriaiton bill was cut $20,176,995, a minor deficiency bill $2,783,700, and Treasury-Postoffice outlays, $10,845,417.

Can You Solve Moon Mystery?

the shadows seen on a sandy lake bottom from ripples on the surface, or from light bending around the edge of the moon.

The astronomer, D'Arturo, of Bologna Observatory, Italy, suggests that they come from an upper stratum of air which is filled with pin-hole vortices. The result is interlacing crescent-shaped shadows, each one very long, so that it looks like a bar. Another theory is that they come from an unknown disturbance in the air at the edge of the dark cone of shadow cast by the moon.

Scintillation, due to sunlight being bent by billowy air waves, is another explanation. Feldman's theory, which he has been explaining to astronomers in their journal, Popular Astronomy, holds that part of the light passing the edge of the moon is diffracted, that is, bent.

The bending results in some of the light waves interfering with others, thus canceling part of the light, and giving the appearance of shadows.

The information wanted is, first as many reports as possible of seeing the bands. Second, does the width and separation increase or decrease regularly, or remain constant? Third, what is the least separation observed in distance between the shadow bands?

The last time the public cooperated was the 1925 total eclipse which crossed the United States from Michigan to New York. More than 100 observations were sent in then.

77 Rescued As 950 Flee Hospital Fire

Twelve Aged Patients Saved on Ladders In Baltimore Blaze

Baltimore, March 31 (AP).—Some 350 aged patients were driven into the street early today by a six-alarm fire sweeping several rooms of the Baltimore City Hospitals.

Twelve were rescued by ladders, and 65 women were carried out by firemen and attendants when dense smoke filtered through their quarters.

Six hundred other persons, though not in danger, evacuated the rambling three-block structure. All were able to return a short time later.

Two firemen were injured slightly and a fireman and two attendants overcome by smoke. A patient, Miss Georgiana Fletcher, 72, was cut on the leg when she was carried down a ladder.

The blaze started in a locker room, burned a dormitory, card room and lavatory, and ate through the roof in two places.

One hundred persons attending mass were driven out of a chapel above the locker room. William Heidel, 15, an altar boy, and Donald Baltzell, 24, led two women to a window for escape by ladder. The other persons fled into the east wing of the building, which was not threatened.

Eddie Knott, 21, an attendant, played a hose onto the mass of flames in the locker room for five minutes. Firemen found him semi-conscious, but still working. He collapsed when they led him away.

Six men, trapped in their dormitory when the flames swooped down a corridor, were among those rescued by ladder.

The fire broke out near the breakfast hour, before many patients had dressed.

Aged persons, wrapped in blankets, huddled on benches and chairs on the hospital lawn. Some suffered from shock and fright.

Three Die In Detroit Fire

Detroit, March 31 (AP).—Fire swept a crowded East Side rooming house at 5 a. m. today and three young men died in rapidly spreading flames.

While approximately 30 other lodgers fled to safety through narrow halls or were carried out by firemen, the blaze trapped Alex Wypiezewski, 26; James Cronin, 25, and Louis Szebczy, 26. Several persons were injured.

Tobey Threatens Census Expose

"a cooperative enterprise of a free people for the common welfare."

Tobey and Senator Claude H. Pepper (Democrat), of Florida, debated the merits of the census questions in the American Forum of the Air.

"The personal and searching nature of many of these census questions, together with the harsh and arbitrary methods used to force this information from citizens, is a menace to the decent-living men and women of this free country," thundered Tobey, who thinks it is illegal to ask poor people what their income is and whether they have to share their bathtubs with other families.

Tobey professed to fear that the 120,000 census takers would become fountainheads of gossip, from which the personal information required by the Government would flow across back fences, through the channels of hearsay and into a myriad of sewing circles and barber shop sessions.

Senator Rush D. Holt (Democrat), of West Virginia, said he too feared this unhappy result and expressed horror that the census takers should be allowed to "break down people's doors" despite the old doctrine that a man's home is his castle.

Stuart A. Rice, chairman of the Central Statistical Board and former assistant census director, challenged Holt and Tobey to name one instance of a census taker breaking his legal obligation to keep confidential what he was told.

Rice said flatly that Tobey's charges were untrue and that the Senator got his data b. "seeing things in the dark after he turned out the light of nights."

Pepper pointed out that labor leaders, practically all of whose members will have to answer the questions, indorsed the census. These leaders included William Green, A. F. L. president, and John L. Lewis, C. I. O. chieftain.

Pepper suggested that Tobey's crusade was inspired by a desire to make political capital of the issue, rather than any concern for citizens' rights.

Mrs. Edward Nelson Dingley, of the American Legion Auxiliary, declared that for years she examined highly personal records, in the course of her geneological research, and that she was against the personal records now being sought being placed in Government files. Rice replied that Mrs. Dingley could not have seen the records unless she had permission from the persons involved.

The sixth member of the panel, Miss Mary Dublin, secretary of the National Consumers League, declared the Government must solve many problems connected with low income and poor housing. To do this, she argued, the Government must have accurate information.

Mrs. Dingley interrupted to ask whether Miss Dublin was not connected with socialistic groups. Miss Dublin said she was not and that this had nothing to do with the census anyway.

The debate closed with Rice's observation that it would be a tragedy if Tobey hampered the census and the Senator's retort that "tregedies have made people free."

Secretary Hopkins ordered his message to enumerators to be placed on headquarters bulletin boards.

"You will meet people who have been misinformed, who are confused," Hopkins said. "Give them the true facts. Be polite and patient. Show your credentials willingly.

"Remember always that, in three generations, the census rarely has been formed to use any stronger authority than a sincere and straightforward appeal to the citizen to give his Government the facts."

Hopkins demanded that the enumerators explain the census "cheerfully and accurately" and urged them "not to minimize the importance of this responsibility."

When False Teeth Bite the Man That's Week's Screwiest News

Other Items Are Close Behind: Cop Tags His Own Wife's Car; Theft of Lamp Post Is Dark Mystery

By Gladwin Hill,
Associated Press Staff Writer

New York, March 31.—Somebody stole a lamp post . . . a cop tagged his wife's car . . . and a man was bitten by his own false teeth—and that's no April Fool!

It all happened in last week's international Calvacade of cock-eyed occurrences, chronicled and catalogued herewith in your weekly goofy gazette.

The affair of the false teeth occurred this wey: A Chicago man slipped off a bench, his store molars flew out of his mouth, ricocheted off his forehead, and—just plain bit him.

The cop who had the nerve to tag his wife was Officer Guy Barnes, of Rochester, Minn. Take a bow, Mr. Barnes.

The theft of the lamp post occurred in Kansas City, and there just isn't any explanation. You never can tell—some Atlantic City, N. J., thieves stole enough sleeping powders to put away 30,000 insomniacs!

Department of delays: . . . A snowbound Alpine, Wyo., family just got their Christmas cards . . . A Kinmundy, Ill., man paid for a train ride he took 20 years ago . . . and a Highland Park, Ill., man just got around to marrying a woman he proposed to 50 years ago.

A French soldier was discovered marching to the front pushing his equipment in a baby carriage . . . The 20 members of the Boston City Council inadvertently cast 22 votes . . . and an Eastport, Md., hen on Easter laid an egg containing a yolk, a white, and—another egg!

Exasperation department: A St. Louis man got so sore talking to a girl on the telephone that he ripped out the receiver . . . A Newport News, Va., man got so mad waiting while somebody monopolized a pay telephone that he smashed the door in . . . And after snowplows repeatedly buried his mail box, an Ashland, Me., farmer nailed it onto a barn gable and put a ladder there—for the mail man to climb!

The New York City education board pronounced a teacher a fire hazard on the ground she weighed 275 pounds and was liable to block doorways . . . and when a Muncie, Ind., man had a tree cut down so it wouldn't fall on his house, it—fell on his house!

In Cleveland, Miss., a prisoner in the jail there fashioned a revolver out of soap—and it didn't fool the jailer.

King Olav Honors Emil Hurja

Emil Hurja, publisher of the Pathfinder magazine, was made a knight, first class, of the Order of King Olav of Norway Saturday, for services to Crown Prince Olav and Crown Princess Martha during their visit here last June, it was announced yesterday.

The presentation was made at the Norwegian Legation by the Norwegian minister, Wilhelm Munthe de Morgenseierne.

Counselor Jorgen Galbe said Hurja was "very helpful" in cooperating with the legation in arrangements for the visit of the royal couple.

Buried 17 Hours, Two Miners Saved

Carbondale, Pa., March 31 (AP).—Two miners entombed for 17 hours have cave-in were rescued today and taken to a hospital.

Neither appeared seriously affected by the underground ordeal.

"Thank God!" Steve Daynock, 58, murmured feebly as rescuers carried him to the surface.

Michael Hurchick, 36, told rescuers:

"I feel all right. Now let's have something to eat."

Strike Threat Faces 2 of 3 N. Y. Subways

Union Demanding City Keep Contracts If It Unifies Lines

By the Associated Press

New York, March 31.—A strike by 27,000 employes of two of New York City's three subway systems which would leave millions of New Yorkers without a way of getting to work was averted for at least 12 hours tonight.

The Transport Workers Union (C. I. O.) announced through a spokesman at 10 p. m. (E. S. T.):

"No direct strike action will be authorized for at least the next 12 hours."

Earlier T. W. U. officials said "all preparations" had been made for a walkout.

The union is in conflict with city officials over the employes' union rights when they become civil service employes under the projected municipal operation of the subways in a unification plan.

The announcement, with no further details, was made by the president of the union, Michael Quill, after an all-day conference of union and C. I. O. executives.

No time has been set for a strike, and Quill noted that the preparations were contingent upon the union's executive committee finding such action necessary.

Mayor LaGuardia, informed of strike preparations, said, "I don't see any necessity for any such preparations. It will all be ironed out."

The general membership of the union and a majority of the joint executive committee have voted for a strike unless there is a settlement of a controversy with the Board of Transportation over the rights of the union after the city has acquired, through unification, the Interborough Rapid Transit Co. and the Brooklyn-Manhattan Transit Corporation.

The T. W. U. has set up strike headquarters in various parts of the offices to remain open 24 hours a day.

The T. W. U. has union-shop contracts with both the I. R. T. and B.-M. T. and demands that they be assumed by the city when the lines are taken over. The union has held meetings of its members employed on the city-owned Independent system—the only other subway in New York—but there was no indication of a strike by them.

Iraq's Premier Steps Down

Baghdad, Iraq, March 31 (AP).—The cabinet of Gen. Muri Es-Said resigned today and a new cabinet was formed immediately with Rashid Ali Gailani as prime minister and the general as foreign minister.

It had been known for some time that the outgoing prime minister, who became head of the government and acting foreign minister on February 22, wished to have a less responsible post.

Women Pilots Plan Memorial Dance

Washington Chapter of the Ninety Nines, organization of women aviation pilots, will give an Amelia Earhart memorial dinner and dance Wednesday at 8 p. m. at the Raleigh Hotel. Miss Earhart, lost on a trans-Pacific flight, was a founder and first president of the organization.

Fulton Lewis, jr., will be master of ceremonies. A special dance will be presented by pupils of Miss Ethel Fistere. Proceeds will be used to provide a course in blind flying for a member who earns her living in aviation.

Bids for New School

Frank I. Davis, supervisor of Montgomery County public school property, has invited bids for construction of a social hall and gymnasium at the Gaithersburg High School. Proposals will be received at the office of the county board of education, Rockville, until 4 p. m. April 12, when they will be publicly read.

Board Advised To Drop Fight For Russell

By the Associated Press

New York, March 31.—A member urged tonight that the board of higher education abandon its fight to bring Bertrand Russell to the College of the City of New York over the objections of those who dispute his unorthodox moral views.

"It has become crystal clear," Charles H. Tuttle said in a public statement, "that insistence upon the appointment of Bertrand Russell is dashing our tax-supported college against an overwhelming public opinion."

The appointment of Russell, British philosopher now at the University of California at Los Angeles, was invalidated by the State Supreme Court yesterday on the ground that he had taught "immoral and salacious doctrines."

Russell is expected to appeal the decision and has the backing of the American Civil Liberties upion for such a move, but if the education board follows Tuttle's views, the appeal would be just a gesture.

Lively Voting Is Expected In Alexandria

9 Councilmen To Be Nominated Tomorrow Out of 22

One of the most spirited Democratic primaries in Alexandria in recent years is expetced tomorrow, when nine nominees for City Council will be selected from a field of 22 candidates. Victory in the primary is tantamount to election.

One representative will be selected from each of the six wards in the city, and three nominees for councilman-at-large.

Because the at-large councilmen are elected for terms of three years and the ward representatives for two years, it will be the first time in six years the individual Alexandria voter has had the privilege of voting for more than one candidate in a primary. Each voter will cast his ballot for three at-large candidates, and one representative from his own ward.

Six Seek At-Large Seat

In all but two wards incumbents will be seeking reelection. Paul L. Delaney is the only candidate from the Second Ward.

Six candidates have filed for the three at-large nominations, including one incumbent and one member of council who until this year has been a ward representative. A change of address forced Charles M. Stump, Third Ward councilman, into the at-large field.

Councilmen who have withdrawn from the race are Mayor Richard L. Ruffner and A. Slater Lemond, at-large representatives, and Henry O'Bannon Cooper, Fifth Ward councilman.

Candidates Listed

First Ward, John D. Matter, incumbent; George L. Nalls, Joseph W. Wyatt and Keith Wade.

Second Ward, Paul L. Delaney, incumbent.

Fourth Ward, George K. Bender, incumbent, and Mrs. Pauline B. Werth.

Fifth ward, Clyde B. Lanham, Ralph L. Hepburn, Robert Moncure and James Armstrong.

Sixth Ward, Charles L. Burgess, incumbent; and E. K. Walters.

At large, William T. Wilkins, incumbent; Charles M. Stump, Charles M. Jones, Eugene Simpson, George H. Hayden and O. P. Angelo.

Building Increases

Alexandria building operations showed a slight increase for the week ended Saturday, according to Building Inspector A. R. Lash, who said 18 permits were issued for projects costing $72,750. Fourteen new construction projects were authorized, and four permits were issued for alterations, repairs and additions.

Residential construction contributed a major portion of the week's $69,950 total. Alterations and repairs amounted to $2,800.

The largest project undertaken during the week was construction of six homes on Grand View drive by P. C. Duborg, at a cost of $34,140. Three of the houses were to cost $5,480, and the remaining three were set at $5,900 apiece.

Other new construction permits were issued to Harry Kerrigan, on Virginia avenue, one single-family two-story stone dwelling, costing $12,790; to Eugene Simpson and brother, on Monroe Terrace, one single-family brick two-story dwelling, costing $9,000; to R. N. Rust for Bessie L. Turner on Braddock road, one single-family frame dwelling, costing $1,500; to W. J. Soviet Merges Finn Conquest In New State

'Finnish-Karelian' Republic Is Formed; Defense Budget Boosted

By the Associated Press

Moscow, March 31.—Russia stepped up her defense appropriations today and decided to create a new republic—the twelfth within the Soviet Union—incorporating territory won from Finland with Soviet Karelia to form the Union Karelo-Finnish Socialist Republic.

The 1940 defense budget of 57,000,000,000 rubles (nominally about $11,400,000,000) was announced in the Supreme Soviet, Russia's Parliament. Last year's defense appropriation was 40,885,000,000 rubles (about $8,177,000,000.)

Stalin Applauds Budget

The announcement of the record defense budget was made by Finance Commissar A. G. Zvereff. He was applauded by the Supreme Soviet and by Josef Stalin.

Paying tribute to the work of the Red Army in the last year, Zvereff said that "if Stalin calls, the Soviet people will rise as one."

The Soviet will meet tomorrow to debate the budget and to approve the treaty with Finland.

Decision to create a new republic in the northwest bordering Finland, was made by Parliament at an earlier session which heard the lands won from Finland called "a bulwark of peace and security" protecting Leningrad, Murmansk and the Arctic rail line to Murmansk.

Of the more than 13,900 square miles ceded by Finland, all but a small section near Leningrad will be included in the new republic.

Viipuri in New State

Deputy Andre Zhdanoff, member of the powerful politbureau and chairman of the foreign affairs commission, told Parliament the new republic was being created in conformance with the desires of the Karelian autonomous Soviet Socialist Republic.

Stressing the historic and economic ties between the newly-acquired territory and Soviet Karelia, Zhdanoff said the republic would include the former Finnish cities of Vyborg (Viipuri), Sortavala, Suojarvi and Kuolojarvi.

He disclosed that Russia already has built a new railway to join the two areas. A line has been installed linking the Sortavala-Vyborg line with the railway between Petrozavodsk, Karelian capital, and the Murmansk line.

Another line is under construction farther north to link Soviet Karelia with the Kuolojarvi region.

Creation of the new republic is "a forward stride in the consolidation of our multi-national Soviet state," said Zhdanoff.

"Purely Finnish" District

Zhdanoff declared Karelia already was "a flourishing Soviet land" but that, with the inclusion of new territory, Karelia "raises to a new level her weight and importance and sets new important tasks for her national economic and cultural development."

Regarding the choice of Karelo-Finnish as the name for the new republic, the deputy said "the districts which pass to Karelia are not only Karelian, but some of them are purely Finnish.

"The Finnish and Karelian peoples are bound by racial and national blood ties. Transformation of the Karelian autonomous republic in the Union Karelo-Finnish Republic will contribute further to the economic and cultural development of these two kindred peoples.

"It will put an end to the enmity and dis cord that were cultivated many years by the enemies of the Finnish and Karelian peoples."

U. S. Stand on Wang Delays Japanese Accord, Says Tokyo

By the Associated Press

Tokyo (Monday), April 1.—Yakichiro Suma, foreign office spokesman, said today that Secretary of State Hull's statement refusing recognition to the new Chinese regime of Wang Ching-wei, dissident former Chinese premier, would damage efforts to improve Japanese-United States relations.

Asked at his press conference whether United States recognition of the Japanese-sponsored regime of Wang was a prerequisite to the settlement of Japanese-American problems in China, Suma replied "I wouldn't go that far, but obviously such an abrupt announcement will hamper our attempts to ameliorate relations with the United States."

[Last Saturday, on the day the Wang government was established in Nanking, Secretary Hull said in Washington that the United States would continue to recognize the Chinese Nationalist government at Chungking rather than Wang's government.]

Foreign Minister Arita said earlier [illegible] the stand of the [illegible] Government in opposition to the new Chinese central regime, "in view of the American attitude since the outbreak of the Manchurian incident."

Arita said that, without regard to the failure of Washington to recognize the Wang regime, Japan would pursue as her immediate task an attempt to enlist the support of all the people of China for it.

After that, said the foreign minister, third powers will be "compelled to recognize the national government, whether they like it or not."

Seen as Stop-gap

By the Associated Press

Nanking, March 31.—Usually well-informed persons here expressed belief tonight the new Wang Ching-Wei regime would be merely a stop-gap through which Japan would seek an ultimate peace with Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek and his Chungking government.

The Wang government was established yesterday at Nanking, with Japan's approval and cooperation. Persons in close contact with Japanese military and diplomatic officials in China said they believe its days are numbered.

It is said there is a strong group in the Japanese army which favors a prompt settlement with Chiang Kai-shek, provided the generalissimo would agree to accept minimum peace terms, first, for agreement to participate in the Anti-Comintern Alliance and to recognize Manchokuo; and, second, for recognition of Japan's "special position" in North China.

The second point, it was explained, practically would mean severing the northern provinces of Hopei, Shansi and Shantung from the rest of China and handing them over to complete control of the Japanese army, whose primary purpose of invading China in 1937 was held to be to get North China's coal, iron and cotton.

If Chiang could be induced to surrender the three provinces, some sources contend, Japanese continental army chieftains would favor withdrawing Japanese troops from south of the Yellow River, since they believe Japan's first job is to drive the menace of Russian military planes and submarines away from the Siberian maritime provinces.

Chiang After "Renegades"

Chungking, March 31 (AP).—Although there appeared to be no means of implementing the decree, the government of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek today ordered the arrest of "seventy-two renegades who joined the bogus regime in Nanking."

Authorities here described Wang Ching-wei's order in his inauguration yesterday for immediate cessation of Chinese-Japanese hostilities as an ostentatious act designed to create the belief abroad that he was capable of controlling the military situation.

"As long as Japanese troops remain on Chinese soil, a truce is impossible," one high official said. He added that the Japanese apparently were unwilling to attempt further drives inland in China and that he believed they were using Wang as a cover for their inability to do so.

Nazi White Book Held a Revenge

Forgeries Found in U. S.

By Walter Fitzmaurice

International News Service Staff Writer.

Evidence casting indirect doubt on the credibility of the German White Book has been compiled secretly by Federal investigating agencies and may be made public "at the appropriate time," a responsible official said last night.

He said the evidence concerns Nazi propaganda activities in the United States. He predicted the authors and the Government behind them "will certainly be disconcerted if it comes out."

Trails followed by the Federal Bureau of Investigation, Secret Service and Postoffice Inspectors in the coordinated anti-spy campaign ordered by President Roosevelt at the European war's outset led the agents to propaganda "factories" also, the official said.

He denied any intention by the Justice Department to expose the propagandists merely to discredit war-incitement charges leveled against the Roosevelt Administration in the White Book, but added:

"The evidence, which entails among other offenses, bribery, theft and the distribution of forged documents, conceivably will form part of the prosecution picture in indictments the department procures for such Federal offenses as espionage.

"This evidence should speak volumes with respect to the genuineness of the White Book documents, if and when it comes to light."

The State Department's reticence on the White Book indicated that the Administration, for the present, is depending an the emigre Polish government in France to persuade the neutral world the documents in the book were forged.

Authorities here understood the Poles have in preparation a detailed refutation, based on the contention that all confidential documents were destroyed or removed from the foreign office archives in Warsaw before the conquering Germans arrived.

War Orders to Give U. S. Lead In Air, Army Chief Writes

By International News Service

In his first public statement on the Nation's aircraft position, being made public today, Maj. Gen. Henry H. Arnold, Chief of the Army Air Corps, predicts United States domination of world aeronautics as a result of the European war's demands, it was learned last night.

Impetus in American airplane development and production, since beginning of the war, has already generated "before our eyes, the first real attempt at air mobilization" in America, Arnold declares.

A full disclosure of future American plane production will be contained in an article under Gen. Arnold's name in the April issue of "U. S. Air Services." In view of his traditional reticence on military aviation, advance texts of his article provoked wide interest in military and industrial quarters.

May Dominate in World

Envisioning a revitalized airplane industry in this country, capable of meeting both domestic and Allied air demands, Arnold states:

"The aeronautical industry of this country is rapidly advancing to a position where it is a potent, semi-mobilized element of national defense which may even be destined to dominate air development throughout the world."

Arnold finds the industry's condition to be sound and promising. He traces its rapid expansion, under the spur of foreign war, in which plane factory employment has doubled in a year. He estimated its capacity, one year hence, will reach 1,200 planes and 2,300 engines a month.

Arnold does not mention any foreign power by name in his analysis, but it was assumed that he counted in recent reports of German plane production in his prediction of this Nation's chances of world domination.

It was pointed out Arnold, as key man in this Nation's air forces, has had access to foreign plane reports and has received a comprehensive report recently from Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, following a confidential Nation-wide survey by Lindbergh of American plane plants.

Shortage in Big Motors

Engines of over 1,000 horsepower have reached quantity production, he declares, "much more slowly than estimated by the manufacturers. Consequently, we anticipate a delay in production of some of our pursuit and bomber contracts." He adds that if the industry's predictions are "made good" this shortage will be remedied within a year.

Difficulty in procuring certain materials—such as aluminum forgings, dies, tools and furnace steel—also has delayed production, Arnold discloses, adding that in some instances special materials have been flown to factories.

That the industry is sound and producing worth-while results, notwithstanding these handicaps, "is evident from the number of foreign orders coming to this country," Arnold observed.

"European nations are buying our equipment because it is better than they can get at home," he writes. "Mere numbers of airplanes do not count if they are deficient in quality and performance. If our aircraft were not good, European nations would not waste their money buying them here."

British to Intensify War—on Rabbits

London, March 31 (U.P.).—While 50 foreign correspondents waited today in the ministry of information pressroom for signs of increased military, political or economic activity after Thursday's meeting of the Allied Supreme War Council, the ministry issued a bulletin captioned, "War Against Rabbits."

The announcement disclosed that the ministry of agriculture plans an intensified offensive against "that destructive beast."

7 French Planes Reported Downed

by German artillery fire, which harassed French positions along a 30-mile front.

The evening communique, the high command said: "Fairly intense activity by both air forces."

In its morning communique, the high command reported "Artillery fire in the region northwest of Bitche. Bursts of machine-gun fire along the rhine in upper Alsace."

[London dispatches said German fliers also scouted Britain's northern tip but were chased off by British fighter planes and antiaircraft. Alarms were sounded in the Shetland and Orkney Islands, but no bombs were dropped. One German Dornier bomber was reported disabled far out over the North Sea.]

German "Nomad batteries" were held responsible by the French for fire on French positions along a 30-mile front between the Saar River and the Vosges Mountains, with which small infantry attacks were coupled.

French authorities, however, still did not attach any particular significance to the heavy artillery activity which has lasted several days and said that the infantry attacks were "easily repulsed with fairly serious losses to the Germans."

The Germans are using 105-killimeter mobile guns, hauling them to positions flanking the French, firing a few rounds and then hastily decamping to a new spot before the French counterfire can locate them, military sources said.

North of Bitche and in the Neid regions the Germans launched three attacks. In addition to inflicting casualties, French said their troops took "some prisoners."

The firing also broke out in the Upper Alsace along the Rhine whenever the Germans hoisted pacifist posters or turned on their loudspeakers.

At sea, the French said German planes had attacked an unnamed French warship but failed to damage it and that the planes eventually were driven off by a squadron of the French coastal patrol planes.

Commons Meets Tomorrow

London, March 31 (AP).—British public discussion today was centered on the reconvening of Parliament Tuesday and the diplomatic offense of the Allies now taking shape in the Balkans.

Tightening of the naval blockade in Northern waters and economic action in southeastern Europe were heralded widely as indications of a general pepping up of British war policy.

Extensive agitation for cabinet changes continued as the reopening of Parliament approached, but there was no indication that Prime Minister Chamberlain would announce any results of his Easter recess meditation on this problem, at least in the immediate future.

Two Burned, Six Rescued In Fires Here

Engineer, Fireman Seared; Policeman And Family Saved

Two men were recovering from burns yesterday after a series of fires in which a member of Congress and his family were routed from bed and a policeman's family was rescued.

Eight men escaped injury when a huge steel-insulated oven exploded at the Ritz Baking Co., 35 F street northwest. The blast, attributed to an accumulation of gas, shattered all first-floor windows.

Herbert Main, 45, a Potomac Electric Power Co. engineer, was burned on the face and legs when he attempted to beat out a fire in the basement of his home at 6605 Thirty-first street northwest. His wife and her sister, Miss Evelyn Howe, heard Main's cries in an upstairs room and called a neighbor, who rushed him to Garfield Hospital.

Fireman Burned

Private Edward Bowden, of No. 1 Truck Company, received burns of the face when a refrigerator exploded during a fire at 321 First street northeast early yesterday. Among a score of persons routed from their apartments in nightclothes were Representative Clyde L. Garrett, of Texas, his wife, son, daughter and son-in-law.

Fire, discovered by a neighbor shortly after 4 a. m. yesterday, had progressed within minutes of reaching the bedroom where Private Marcel Caussin, of Fourth Precinct, and his family of five were sleeping when they were awakened by fellow policemen.

Children Rescued

Seeing smoke pouring from the Caussin home at 5322 Manning place northwest, the neighbor telephoned the Seventh Precinct station, whence Detective John P. Meshkoff and Private R. P. Raepzman were sent in a scout car to investigate.

Meshkoff and Raepzman found the house ablaze and rushed upstairs, where they awakened Caussin and his wife and helped carry to safety their four children, Marie Cecile, 6; John, 5; Germaine, 4, and Jeanne, 3.

Damage was estimated by Caussin at $2,000.

Man Missing Mnoth Found In Cellar Grave

One of Two Who Sold Autos, Disappeared; Used-Car Buyer Held

By the Associated Press

Detroit, March 31.—Police sought an answer to a riddle of two killings tonight after having discovered the body of a young garage mechanic in a crudely dug grave in the basement of a house.

Shot twice in the back, with fingertips and hands burned by lye, the body of Philip Loyst, 24, who had been missing since February 26, was removed from a 6-foot grave beneath a house on Detroit's East Side.

Inspector John O. Whitman said a real estate man had told him the house had been rented by a young cab driver and car lot employe four days before Loyst's disappearance.

Since surrendering March 2, the cabman has been held without charge while authorities pushed inquiries into the Loyst case and a strangely similar one—the torch murder of Dorsey E. Bowman.

Bowman, whose charred body was found on a dump heap February 15, also had been shot twice in the back. Acquaintances of both men said that shortly before disappearing each had talked of selling his car. Police suspected a "murder-for-profit" gang might have been mixed up in the disappearances.

In the house the police found ashes of burned clothing in a washtub, a bag of quicklime, a pair of blood-stained gloves, and newspaper clippings of Bowman's death and Loyst's disappearance.

In the basement were found two shovels and a mound of fresh dirt. Loyst's body then was dug up.

The cabman in custody has told of buying Bowman's car for $425. He said, however, that he never saw Bowman again after the deal. He has denied any knowledge of Loyst.

Neighbors Reveal Slain Mother Clung to Son In Lonely House Despite His Madness

Love Conquered Her Fear of Him, Friends Assert

MRS. BESSIE C. HOWARD

While police yesterday pushed their investigation into the murder of Mrs. Bessie Catherine Howard, 66, which was discovered Saturday by a Post reporter, neighbors of the murdered woman and her ailing, pale son, Jerome, 25, read in the tragedy at the shuttered gray house at 615 Taylor street northwest, the story of a mother's love that transcended even intuition, and ended in her death.

The view was expressed widely that Mrs. Howard, knowing her son was insane—he had been committed to one asylum—and possibly dangerous, withal clung to him through the years.

Neighbors recalled that the two, since their return here from Colorado last fall, seldom went out of doors, but stayed together within the shuttered house. In Colorado, where they lived for some 10 years, they secluded themselves in a house on a hill. They were, since Jerome's earliest childhood, inseparable.

The neighbors said yesterday that the woman had still held to her son, even within recent weeks when a bedlam in the house of nights alarmed the neighborhood. She had withdrawn from all society, making no complaint of her situation.

Post Reporters to Testify

Some of these neighbors are included among the witnesses called before the inquest at 11:30 a. m. today in the City Morgue. The list of witnesses includes John Singerhoff, Washington Post reporter, who was first to arrive at the murder scene after Reporter Dillard Stokes, of The Post; William J. Howard, 227 Rock Creek Church road, divorced husband of the murdered woman; Joseph F. and Margaret L. Lilly, of 813 Taylor street northwest, next-door neighbors of the Howards; Dr. Alfred C. Norcross, 1401 Fairmont street northwest, a former neighbor of the Howards, and Private William P. Doran, 3534 Tenth street northwest, attached to the Tenth Police Precinct, and Detective Sergeant John Wise, of the homicide squad, both of whom were assigned to the investigation.

An insight into the mother's solicitude for her son was given by an elderly woman, who called The Post early yesterday. She begged anonymity. But she had lived, nearly a quarter century ago, in the house adjoining the Howard's; was a warm friend of the family's; remembered the mother's constant care for her two children. Three weeks ago she decided to pay a visit.

"I was met at the door by Mrs. Howard," she said. "Of course she had changed greatly. I had remembered her as a young woman with brown wavy hair. Now her hair was gray and she had a terribly worried, sad look on her face. She talked hurriedly, saying she wanted me to come over again soon, to sit on the porch and talk of old times. Then she said she must hurry back upstairs, that someone was sick."

"She Was a Lovely Person"

"She was a lovely person, solicitous of her family," said the woman, whose apartment window overlooks the Howard house across Taylor street.

The close bond between mother and son was further revealed by the small volume, "Book of Courage," which police found on Jerome's bureau, open to the passage ". . . if I had a blade of keener steel . . ." On the flyleaf was written, "Mother and Jerome," July 27, 1931, Jerome's sixteenth birthday."

Dr. E. J. Brady, operator of the Colorado Springs (Colo.) Psychopathic Hospital, told the Associated Press yesterday both Jerome and his mother were patients there in 1935. Jerome, he said, was committed after a lunacy hearing and later was pronounced sane by a county court. Mrs. Howard was a patient during the same period, he added.

The police investigation continued yesterday. They had the statement of Jerome, whom they found in the house with the body after The Post had sent a reporter to investigate what neighbors had discerned as a mysterious situation within. He had said: "I think I did it."

Chief of Detectives Capt. Ira Keck said "there were no recognizable fingerprints on the knife" that was used to slit Mrs. Howard's throat."

"There were marks there, smears that might have been made by somebody grasping it, but no fingerprints outlined that we could recover."

He said that no check has been made generally of the house for fingerprints that might have been made by persons other than Mrs. Howard and her son.

"We have no intention of doing so, as we do not believe it is necessary," he added.

This means only that the police investigators feel convinced that the man they hold, the son, is the murderer. It would put aside the possibility that the aging woman was slain by anyone other than her allegedly demented son—whose versions of what occurred since he and his mother returned here from Colorado last October have been fragmentary and incoherent.

Jerome is held at No. 10 Police Precinct Station. He was seen by Post reporters yesterday afternoon. Gaunt, pale, with wild eyes, he stood on the iron cot in his cell, his feet bare and his face unshaven.

"He eats ravenously," police said. He does not sit down, but stands stiffly on the cot, gripping the bars and staring.

The autopsy performed yesterday by Dr. MacDonald and Assistant Coroner Dr. Christopher J. Murphy, showed death was caused by a knife slash across the throat. Concerning the time of death, Dr. MacDonald said:

"I am inclined to say that the woman was killed at least four days ago, perhaps longer. Her hands and feet were mummified, but this would have been accelerated by the fact that the woman's wounds practically drained them of blood."

This was a question that perplexed investigators when Jerome was found in the house. There was evidence of his having eaten a number of meals, apparently alone, in the kitchen, which was littered with tin cans and refuse, like a trash pile.

Dr. Murphy said it was difficult to fix the time of death, when many of the factors, such as temperature and humidity since death were not precisely known.

The autopsy did not positively rebut the hypothesis that Mrs. Howard was slain at the time the noises and screams were heard emanating from the house two weeks ago; the noises that alarmed the neighbors and set some of them to watching the place.

Faithful to his son, Howard yesterday retained the legal services of Attorney James A. O'Shea for Jerome's defense. He said he would bear the expense of this and the costs of the funeral.

Howard is an attorney in the General Land Office, United States Department of the Interior, and resides at 227 Rock Creek Church road. Yesterday he affirmed he had seen Jerome but once in 15 years. It was for a fleeting 10 minutes in 1939 in Colorado, where the son and mother had, until last October, resided for some 10 years.

Suffered Many Wounds

The autopsy disclosed that Mrs. Howard had not been ill or kept prisoner without food before she was slain. Her wounds were catalogued, as follows:

Two slashes on right side of jaw, which laid jawbone bare.
One slash on nose, which split it open.
Two bruises under chin.
Two bruises on chest.

Jerome Too Dazed to Talk

O'Shea said he had talked to Jerome at No. 10 Police Precinct Station "and I found him in a dazed condition. He was not responsive to questioning. I shall make a thorough study of the case and I may be able to make a further statement after the inquest Monday."

What thing of interest in the case might be held by the dark cellar of the house was not known yesterday. Sergt. John Wise, of the Police Homicide Squad, said that investigators threw flashlight beams down the stairs, but had deferred a more thorough investigation.

Throughout yesterday, hundreds of persons, curious to see the murder house, drove by, or walked in the yard. Amateur photographers were active.

Danes Jail 150 Uniformed Nazis Rioting Against Government

By International News Service

Copenhagen, March 31 (INS).—Police tonight broke up an unruly demonstration of Danish Nazis at Aarhus, arresting about 150 persons, but similar manifestations in Copenhagen and other towns went off without disorder.

In Aarhus, Denmark's second city with a population of 91,000 on the east coast of Jutland, the Nazis defied a police ban on the wearing of brown-shirt Storm Troopers' uniforms.

The police therefore waded in and dispersed the street meeting, taking the uniformed men to jails. Several hours later the Nazis were released when their leaders promised they would wear overcoats over their uniforms.

The Danish government, against which the Nazis demonstrated, meanwhile fastened rigid control over foreign exchange to fortify the country against the economic consequences of the European war.

Goodwill Program Planned for Mutes

Will Be Consecrated Titular Bishop at Rites At National Shrine

The Most Rev. Msgr. Joseph M. Corrigan, rector of Catholic University, will be consecrated titular Bishop of Bilta at 10 a. m. tomorrow in the shrine of the Immaculate Conception on the university campus.

His Eminence, Dennis Cardinal Dougherty, archbishop of Philadelphia, will be the consecrator. The Most Rev. Michael J. Curley, archbishop of Baltimore and Washington and chancellor of the university, and the Most Rev. Edward Mooney, archbishop of Detroit, will be the assistant consecrators. The Most Rev. John T. McNicholas, O. P., Archbishop of Cincinnati, will deliver the sermon.

Attending the ceremony will be more than 40 members of the American hierarchy, members of the Diplomatic Corps, representatives of various branches of the Government, the entire faculty of Catholic University, a large delegation of clergy from the Archdiocese of Philadelphia, monsignori from throughout the country, and priests from Baltimore, Washington, and religious houses affiliated with the university.

Bishop Corrigan will use the historic Carroll altar, once used by Bishop John Carroll, the first Catholic bishop in the United States, at the beginning of the mass at which he is consecrated. Later in the ceremony he will go to high altar where Cardinal Dougherty will officiate throughout the ceremony.

Immediately after the consecration in the national shrine, a luncheon will be served in the university gymnasium to the guests of the rector.

After that a marble bust of Pope XII executed by Tommaso Tommasi at Pietra Santa, Italy, will be unveiled in the Mullen library of Catholic University in the presence of Cardinal Dougherty and other guests.

Florida Flyer Hits Freight Train

Charleston, S. C., March 31 (AP).—The Florida West Coast Limited, de luxe Atlantic Coast Line passenger train filled with Florida-bound tourists from the East, crashed into the middle of a freight train packed with Florida oranges at the north station, 10 miles from Charleston, at 4:45 a. m. today.

Officials said no one was injured and most of the passengers did not know there was a wreck until after daylight, when they got out to investigate the cause of the long stop.

Allies Agree On Blockade By Propaganda

French Minister Going to London To Confer Today

By the United Press

Paris, March 31.—France and Britain today decided to organize a "propaganda blockade" of the Reich, coincident with more vigorous action in their economic blockade.

Louis Oscar Frossard, French minister of propaganda, will go to London tomorrow to work out details with Sir John Reith, his British opposite number, for the coordination of Allied propaganda and counter-propaganda.

They were expected to agree on intensification of the Allies' radio efforts, increasing the scope of British and French foreign language broadcasts aimed at winning the support of neutral countries.

It was thought likely one of the first extensions of Allied broadcasts would be in the direction of the Americas.

Inter-allied economic conversations which were concluded here last night by Sir Andrew Duncan, president of the British Board of Trade, and Louis Rollin, minister of commerce, were followed by immediate signature of a Franco-British protocol putting into application the London economic agreement of February 16. Under the protocol the Allies will favor each other's industries with preferential quotas and tariffs and will effect common development of their exports to foreign markets.

Premier Reynaud and his cabinet will meet tomorrow as a council of ministers on the eve of parliamentary reopening to fix the cabinet's policy and draft a parliamentary program. The cabinet, which on inauguration obtained only the slimmest of majorities in the Chamber of Deputies, will be prepared to face the chamber when it convenes on Tuesday but the real test of the government was expected to come with the Senate foreign policy debate scheduled for April 9.

The council will examine the military and diplomatic situations in the light of agreements reached at the recent meeting in London of the Allied Supreme War Council. This was understood to contain a program for intensification of war operations in all fields, which would strengthen Reynaud's parliamentary majority.

Ore Seizures Expected

London, March 31 (U.P.).—The sharp warning voiced to neutrals last night in the speech of Winston Churchill, first lord of the admiralty, is expected to be followed this week by positive action to reduce if not prevent German imports of iron ore from Scandinavia.

It was rumored tonight that Britain and France had decided on measures, even if necessitating the infringement of Norwegian territorial waters, to stop Swedish ore shipments down the Norwegian coast to Germany. Germany thus would be deprived of Swedish iron ore, presumably until the Gulf of Bothnia and the Baltic Sea thaw.

Danger! Tick Season Opens

Warning that the tick season now is started in Montgomery County, Md., Dr. V. L. Ellicott, county health officer, yesterday urged residents and visitors to take precaution. Spotted fever is caused by the bite of ticks.

Dr. Ellicott said the danger period is from April 1 to August 1. He urged that the body be searched daily when it has been in contact with underbrush, shrubbery or tall grass. The hair at the back of the neck is the most important place to watch, he said. Montgomery County averages seven cases of spotted fever annually and 25 per cent prove fatal, he warned. Care should be exercised in removing ticks from dogs. Forceps and not the bare hands should be used, he said.

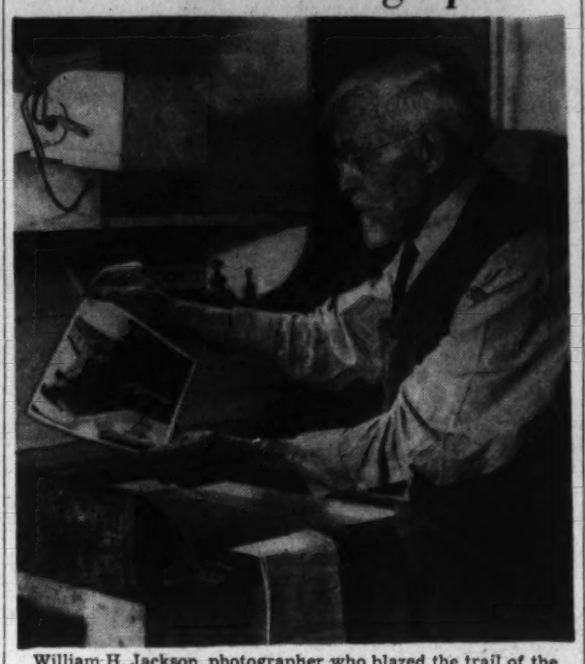
League to Discuss Takoma Annexation

A movement to include the section of Takoma Park, Md., along New Hampshire avenue from Ray road to Eastern avenue within the incorporated limits of the town will be acted upon by the Takoma Park Community League at a meeting today at 8 p. m. in the municipal bulding,8 Columbia avenue.

Residents of the area which is in the Prince Georges County part of Takoma Park, have complained that they do not receive proper police and fire protection because their property is outside the corporation.

The establishment of a large community playground and improvement of sanitation conditions will be discussed. W. H. McClenon will preside.

U. S. to Mark 97th Birthday Of First News Photographer



William H. Jackson, photographer who blazed the trail of the news camera, tries his hand in a darkroom of the Interior Department. He will observe his ninety-seventh birthday April 4

Interior Department Will Display Pictures of Nation's Scenic Wonders Taken 70 Years Ago by W. H. Jackson

William H. Jackson, who 70 years ago took pictures which aided in the establishment of Yellowstone National Park, Wyoming, is to be honored Thursday, when the Department of the Interior observes Mr. Jackson's 97th birthday with a display of those pictures.

Still active in an advisory capacity in the department, Mr. Jackson is recognized as the world's first news photographer, and recently acted as technical adviser in the filming of "Gone With the Wind."

After service in the Civil War, he went to St. Joseph, Mo., which was then the end of transcontinental railroads, and gradually traveled over the West, working successively as a "bullwhacker," mule skinner and horse wrangler.

In 1869, while photographing along the railroads, he met Dr. F. V. Hayden, geologist, who was conducting a survey of the Territories for the Government, and in 1871 joined the expedition.

Traveling over the wilderness territory he made pictures which convinced a skeptical public of the scenic wonders to be found there and which led Congress to establish Yellowstone National Park. A military escort and five assistants were needed by Mr. Jackson on some of his trips through the perilous country. Today he travels by airplane and carries a candid camera in his pocket.

Claim of the title of world's first news photographer is based on the 18-month round-the-world trip he made in 1896 taking pictures for Harper's Weekly.

The exhibit, in the Department of Interior Museum, Nineteenth and C streets northwest, depicts early conditions in areas now preserved under the national conservation program.

Endeavorers Hear Dr. Carruthers

Young people today should "hold fast to their spiritual security because there is no security in any other area of life," Dr. John F. B. Carruthers, of Pasadena, Calif., told 100 members of Montgomery County Christian Endeavor Societies last night. Dr. Carruthers, founder of the National Open Parish and former assistant president of the University of Southern California, spoke at Takoma Park Christian Church.

Ira Ward, president of Montgomery County Christian Endeavor Union, presided. A reception was held for Dr. and Mrs. Carruthers at the church, of which the Rev. Ernest M. Bryan is pastor.

Montgomery Waltons Liberate 200 Quail

As part of its 1940 wildlife conservation program, the Rockville Izaak Walton League Chapter has liberated approximately 200 quail in various parts of the county and distributed about 600 trout of various kinds in streams of the county regarded as adapted.

Both the quail and trout were provided by the State conservation department.

$65,000 Sought In Accident Suit

Leo C. Dove, of Boyds, Montgomery County, was named defendant in three suits filed in the circuit court at Rockville, in which damages totaling $65,000 are asked.

The actions are the outgrowth of an automobile accident at Hyattsville, Md., November 11. The plaintiffs are Clarence Semler, 7, and William Semler, 5, and their father, Scott Semler, of Prince Georges County. The boys claim to have been injured in an automobile operated by Dove, which collided with another machine.

Rev. F. J. Eckert Accepts Pulpit In Silver Spring

Will Become First Pastor of the New Lutheran Church

The Rev. Frederick J. Eckert, assistant to the Rev. Carl C. Rasmussen, pastor of the Luther Place Memorial Church, last night announced his acceptance of the first pastorate at the newly organized Lutheran Church in Silver Spring, Md.

The congregation of the Silver Spring, Md., church voted to call the Rev. Mr. Eckert for pastor at its morning devotion yesterday in the Masonic Temple, Georgia avenue, where it has been meeting since its formal organization January 14.

A site is being sought for the church, the Rev. Mr. Eckert stated. He will begin his duties as pastor April 15. The Rev. M. J. Bieber, a representative of the American Missions of the United Lutheran Church, who has been serving as temporary pastor, will leave to establish a new church in another city, which is customary for clergymen on the mission board.

A native of Baltimore, Md., the Rev. Mr. Eckert, who is 29 years old, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. David Eckert, of Baltimore. He was graduated from Gettysburg College in 1936 and also from the Gettysburg Theological Seminary in 1939. He has been the Rev. Mr. Rasmussen's assistant since May 15, 1939. His wife formerly was Miss Dorothy Harris, of Baltimore.

Hit-Run Driver Injures 2 Youths In Rockville, Md.

Two youths were struck by a hit-and-run driver in Rockville, Md., late Saturday night, county police reported yesterday. A third youth escaped injury by jumping from the road.

The youths, police said, were walking along West Montgomery avenue near the town limits. The car came from the rear. Nelson Morris, 18, living at Hunting Hill, Md., jumped.

Paul Anthony Taulelle, 17, and Walter Carl Smith, 17, both of Rockville, were struck. Taulelle suffered scalp wounds and was not injured seriously. Smith remained unconscious last night at the Montgomery County General Hospital at Sandy Spring, Md.

Youth Forgets 'Isms' if Given Jobs, Asserts Mrs. Roosevelt

Half of U. S. Unemployed Are Under 25, With Thoughts That Are Material For Any Organized Program, She Says

By the Associated Press

San Francisco, March 31.—Mrs. Roosevelt expressed the belief here today that young people given jobs, protection, brotherhood and a future" would "soon forget about such things as Communism and Fascism."

"More than one-half the unemployed in this country are under 25 years of age," the President's wife told interviewers. "They are young people with no habits of work, a sincere desire to work, and without an outlet."

"The thought trends of these young people are pliable. They are, if left without guidance, good material for Communists. They may be molded and influenced in a manner which ultimately will be reflected in a manner injurious to our democratic form of government."

The First Lady stopped here briefly en route from Seattle to Los Angeles for a speaking engagement.

Mrs. Roosevelt said well-organized Communists presented a definite program and brotherhood to young jobless.

"If we are really interested in democracy," she said, "we will be out working for and with youths in that same ardent way. We're the stupid ones. We say 'don't go near that group. It's controlled by Communists.'

"It is practically the same as handing our youths to the Communists. Where are our young people going to get help and guidance if we don't provide such things for them?"

The First Lady said she had little patience with persons who refused to have anything to do with young groups for fear there might be Communists among them.

"The Communists are dangerous only as we ourselves fail," she said.

She expressed belief that 90 per cent of the young people who attended the recent Youth Congress in Washington "were interested in one thing more than anything else. How do we get a job?"

"The other 10 per cent may think they want to know something about communism," she declared. "But if you were to ask any of them what communism means, they couldn't tell you for the life of them. But I say again, they would be good material for the Communists if left unguarded."

"We are inclined to take too much for granted," she said. "We should be making a great effort to understand our youth problems, not forgetting that we were youths, and most of us probably had ideas which were looked upon as extreme."

Grace Episcopal Fete At Woodside Thursday

The Sunday school of the Grace Episcopal Church, Woodside, Md., will hold its annual entertainment Thursday at 8 p. m. at the parish hall, Georgia avenue.

The first half of the program will be presented entirely by the pupils under the direction of Mrs. Carl Lines and Mrs. Ronald McDonald. The second half will be given by a group of Washingtonians, including George O'Connor, Fred East, Thomas Brahany, Bill Raymond, Edwin Steffe, Bernie Fitzgerald, Charles Tittman and George Wilson.

The Bradbury Heights Association and the Washington Highlands Association will hold their meetings Thursday at 8 p. m. The Chillum Heights Association will meet at the Keene School Friday at 8 p. m.

Marylander Celebrates 104th Birthday Today

Deer Park, Md., March 31 (AP).—That "three score and ten years" span of life is just an April fool's joke to George Marley, sr.—he'll be 104 tomorrow.

Born April 1, 1836, in England, Marley is Garrett County's only surviving Civil War veteran.

He served with Company C, Ninety-ninth Regiment New York Infantry, fighting in the Battle of the Wilderness, Antietam and Gettysburg. He also witnessed the battle between the Monitor and Merrimac at Hampton Roads.

On his birthday three years ago, Marley received congratulations from the King and Queen of England, Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt and former Gov. Harry W. Nice of Maryland.

He will have a quiet party tomorrow, and Deer Park will pay him homage as one of the town's first settlers.

Still active, Marley shells corn daily for his chickens and keeps up with world affairs.

Colt to Address Club

Waynesboro, Va., March 31.—Thomas Clyde Colt, jr., director of the Virginia Museum of Fine Arts, Richmond, will address the Waynesboro Woman's Club tomorrow at 3 o'clock.

DO YOU EAT ENOUGH VEGETABLES

It is a recognized fact now that the endocrine glands, the sinuses, the skin, the nervous system—and practically all other mechanisms of the body are dependent upon adequate vitamins and minerals. If you don't eat all the vegetables you should, come in and get a circular on RITAMINE or better yet, get a $1, 10-day trial package or 25-day supply for $3.

Any dentist can tell you that crumbling teeth and bleeding gums frequently are the result of not getting sufficient vitamins and minerals.

U. S. Fleet Sails Today for Big War Maneuvers in Pacific

By the Associated Press

San Pedro, Calif., March 31.—The United States fleet, with all the precautions and preparedness of wartime, is ready for instant action tonight at San Pedro, San Diego and Hawaiian bases.

It is the eve of the 1940 war games in the Pacific.

Some of the units will move to sea tomorrow, others will go out Tuesday. Secrecy shrouds the actual movements. Insofar as all officers and men are concerned their realistic "war of 1940" is on.

All the safeguards against spying, sabotage, mines and sugmarines in channels to sea, and air attacks, are emphasized in these preliminary movements.

Within the next 36 hours 11 battleships, 12 heavy cruisers, 8 light cruisers, 3 aircraft carriers and 65 submarines will move to sea to form two opposing forces, the "black" fleet and the "white" fleet. From the Hawaiian area eight heavy cruisers, one light cruiser and three squadrons of destroyers will be under way. The others will move from San Diego and San Pedro bases.

In addition to these units of the two fleets, submarines and auxiliaries will also put to sea for participation in later phases of the seven weeks' war games.

The fleet flagship Pennsylvania awaits the Secretary of the Navy, Charles Edison, who will board the dreadnaught with full naval ceremonies tomorrow. He will be welcomed by Adm. J. O. Richardson, commander-in-chief.

Secretary Edison will spend a busy ten days with the fleet. He will witness the first two parts of the exercises, the departure of fighting units, and the operations of the two opposing fleets contesting control of an ocean area of wide extent. When this second part is concluded, somewhere east of the Hawaiian Islands, the units will combine as the fleet as a whole goes into advanced tactics.

Beall Asks G.O.P. to Back Nice for Post

By the Associated Press

Frostburg, Md., March 31.—J. Glenn Beall, Allegany County Republican leader and former State roads commission chairman, called on the Maryland G. O. P. today to support ex-Gov. Harry W. Nice in the party's senatorial primary.

"If there is any merit in political decency and party integrity, certainly the Republicans of Maryland should support the titular head of their party," the Frostburg business man asserted.

"In my estimation, integrity is a fundamental necessity in a political party and in the political actions of its individual members. Without that basic quality, neither can command the respect and confidence essential for support and success."

Beall, who headed the roads commission during the latter part of Nice's administration and the early months of the present Democratic administration, added:

"Harry Nice can never be accused of disloyalty to party or friends. His party fidelity is beyond question. His experience, his progressiveness, his courage and his inherent ability commend him as a type of man sorely needed in the United States Senate today to help prevent this country from further plunging into destriction. . . .

"That he maintains the respect and support of Marylanders is shown by the fact that, although he failed of reelection in 1938, he gained 50,000 votes more than he received when elected Governor."

Cheers Speed First Europe-Bound Plane To Soar From LaGuardia Airport

By Inez Robb

International News Service Writer

New York, March 31.—Another Yankee Clipper sailed from the port of New York today in swift emulation of the first fleet clipper that sailed from the same port to international glory a hundred years ago.

Today's takeoff of the giant aerial clipper, Yankee, climaxed the dedication of the international marine air base at LaGuardia Field and inaugurated transoceanic air service from New York's new airport. Heretofore, the field, largest air terminal in the world, has been used only by land planes.

Like her famous forerunners, the Yankee Clipper sailed today to chalk up a new record. In her hold was a world's record load of 5,260 pounds of mail. Nine passengers, two of them women, were aboard the clipper, commanded by Capt. Charles A. Lorber.

LaGuardia Cheers Start

Waving their hats and cheering the Yankee onward were Mayor LaGuardia and an assortment of brass hats who attended the formal dedication ceremonies of the marine air base, a romantic and dramatic link between this country's transcontinental and transoceanic airways.

In addition, police estimated, 150,000 Mr. and Mrs. John Q. Citizens witnessed this first transatlantic takeoff from the port of New York.

The $7,500,000 seaplane base was dedicated with a message from President Roosevelt and in the presence of his excellency, Dr. Joao Antonio de Bianchi, Minister of Portugal, where the Yankee will make landfall tomorrow afternoon; Representatives of the governments of Great Britain, Ireland, Canada, Italy, Norway and the Netherlands; officials of the Pan Americans Airways and a Congressional delegation up from Washington for the ride.

Peaceful Aims Stressed

Almost every speaker in the formidable array of dedication orators stressed the peaceful purposes of America's airways.

"The whirl of a propeller brings joy to us," said Mayor LaGuardia, himself a World War aviator, "while abroad it is a signal for men to burrow into the earth and a sign of death and destruction. God withheld wings from man until he thought man had developed out of a state of barbarism. Those who use aviation to destroy, disregard the wishes of man and the will of God Almighty!

"The real purpose of aviation is to bring the peoples of the world closer together."

President Roosevelt in his brief message, pointed out that New York, now the greatest seaport in the world, in both past and present had provided clipper ships of the sea and the air with a base of operations.

The 10,000 persons that heard the actual dedication ceremonies cheered the Minister from Portugal when he congratulated them that the "Yankee Clipper is not leaving from a camouflaged hangar and will not return bullet-ridden to this base."

The dedication ceremonies for the marine base, which faces eastward, proceeded against a leitmotiv of droning motors that lifted into the air a half dozen peaceful planes that took off from LaGuardia Field to head westward on regularly scheduled transcontinental flights.

The Yankee Clipper was 40 minutes late in her take-off. It took that much longer for the day's dedication orators to warm up than it did for the ship itself. It was to Juan T. Trippe, president and founder of the Pan-American Airways system, who presided at today's ceremonies, that Mayor LaGuardia eventually turned over the symbolic key to the flag-incrusted marine terminal. So far, Pan-American is the only trans-oceanic air company to have leased space at LaGuardia Field.

New York, March 31 (AP).—With the help of a million dollars' worth of American aircraft engines, Great Britain is preparing for a renewed drive to obtain equality with other powers on world air routes in spite of the demands which war has imposed on its aircraft industry.

The disclosure today that British commercial interests had purchased approximately 100 powerful American-made engines—enough to power a fleet of 25 long-range airliners—for use on "empire routes" was almost coincident with the formal inauguration of the British Overseas Airways Corporation.

The engines, of 1,100 horsepower, manufactured by the Wright Aeronautical Corporation, of Paterson, N. J., were contracted for and have been delivered in England since the start of the war.

The British Overseas Airways Corporation tomorrow becomes the "chosen instrument" of the British government to maintain and expand the empire air services which have taken a severe drubbing from the military services since last September.

To Resume Atlantic Flying

On June 1, the new corporation, which merges British Imperial Airways and British Airways, plans to begin a transatlantic mail service with 20-ton flying boats. After operation last summer, that service was interrupted by the war.

Indicative of British concern over American monopoly of North Atlantic air routes was a tacit admission last week that the Overseas Corporation hoped to establish passenger service to Canada and the United States this year with 36-ton flying boats.

Hit-Run Driver May Have Killed Coed, Police Say

State College, Pa., March 31 (INS). The possibility arose tonight that the slayer of Rachel H. Taylor, 17-year-old Pennsylvania State College freshman co-ed, might have been a motorist who ran her down with his automobile and later savagely mutilated her body.

Commissioner of State Motor Police Col. Lynn G. Adams declared that he was "convinced the murderer ran down the girl." He asserted that auto tire abrasions were found on her body.

While Adams would not elaborate on his theory, it was understood that State police have turned their investigation to a thorough checking of all automobiles in the State college and Bellefonte area.

Unchanged Policy

Secretary Hull's statement anent the setting up of the Wang Ching-wei government at Nanking last week cuts through the veil of deception with which the Japanese have sought to disguise their latest venture in puppet-making.

The statement does not mention Japan by name. But there cannot be the slightest doubt that Mr. Hull had the island empire in mind when he declared that the new regime "has the appearance of a further step in a program of one country by armed force to impose its will upon a neighboring country and to block off a large area of the world from normal political and economic relationships with the rest of the world."

Such a course of action the United States has vigorously opposed in the past, both in the Far East and elsewhere. It has no intention of retreating from this position now. In other words, this country continues to recognize as the government of China the regime which it recognized 12 years ago and which today functions at Chungking. That government, says the Hull statement, "has had and still has the allegiance and support of the majority of the Chinese people." It should also be pointed out that it controls more than half of China, has behind it a large and increasing body of fighting men and has never manifested the slightest disposition to abandon the struggle against the Japanese invaders.

With the establishment of the Japanese-sponsored Wang Ching-wei regime at Nanking, the 33-month-old war enters a new stage. Having failed to achieve victory by purely military means, Japan is now embarking on a different course of action. The island empire's present hopes of victory rest in the person of Wang Ching-wei, who is relied upon to play Japan's game by dividing the Chinese. Nor can this stratagem be dismissed as one with no chance of success. Wang will be in a position to capitalize the war weariness that exists in China. His government will be endowed by its Japanese sponsors with sufficient nominal power to confuse the unwary. Its existence will create new difficulties both for the Chungking government and foreign powers.

But Chungking's denunciation of Wang as a traitor and the nonrecognition policy proclaimed by Secretary Hull suggest that the claim of the Nanking regime—that it is the real central government of China—will not go uncontested.

Up To The President

If the Federal deficit for the coming fiscal year is as big as that for the current year, Senator Taft thinks it will be "because the President desires that deficit." As Mr. Taft's address was delivered at a Republican rally he may have overstressed Mr. Roosevelt's responsibility for the collapse of the economy campaign. But there can be no doubt that executive encouragement and guidance is essential if any substantial reduction in Government spending is to be effected.

To date the net reductions achieved in 13 supply bills acted on by one or both houses total less than $58,000,000. Earlier in the session the cuts amounted to $300,000,000. But the Senate added substantial sums to the agricultural supply bill passed by the House, including unbudgeted parity payments. And the House repudiated its economy record by boosting budgeted appropriations for the CCC and the NYA.

Of course, this record of vacillation and backsliding cannot be excused simply because the President has failed to support the economy move in Congress. For Congress shares with him the responsibility for control of Federal spending. It is very difficult, however, for a legislative body to reduce Government costs by undercutting budget estimates. Indeed, the demand for an executive budget grew out of the need for a comprehensive fiscal plan which Congress would be reluctant to upset.

If Congress attempts to set up its own unbudgeted estimates, whether for the purpose of boosting or reducing expenses, the result is fiscal confusion. So, while theoretically the responsibility of creating deficits is divided between the executive and the legislative branch of government, actually the driving force required to curb extravagance has to be exerted mainly by the Chief Executive.

The President has not only been a lukewarm advocate of retrenchment but the recent announcement from the White House that WPA outlays may have to be increased is not conducive to stiffening legislative resolves to keep the deficit down.

The Best Umpire

An important minority opinion by three Supreme Court justices, which most of the press had overlooked, has been brought to public attention by John Dickinson, former Assistant Attorney General. Speaking at the symposium on constitutional law here last week, Mr. Dickinson expressed restrained but nonetheless emphatic disapproval of the justices' suggestion that the Supreme Court resign to Congress the task of resisting State encroachments upon interstate commerce.

The dissenting opinion in question was handed down by Justices Black, Frankfurter and Douglas in the recent case involving the validity of Arkansas' tax on gasoline carried through that State in the tanks of motor vehicles engaged in interstate commerce. The court struck down the tax as an invasion of Congress' power to regulate interstate commerce. In the opinion of the dissenting justices the questions raised by this case should have been left "for consideration of Congress in a Nation-wide survey of the constantly increasing barriers to trade among the States."

Congress alone, according to this view, can "on the basis of full exploration of the many aspects of a complicated problem devise a national policy fair alike to the States and our Union." In effect, the dissenting justices suggest that in some or possibly all cases under the commerce clause State laws be permitted to stand unless they contravene direct prohibitions by Congress or clash with valid regulations established by Congress.

The net result would be, according to Mr. Dickinson, that the court would retain its own jurisdiction to define the power of Congress over commerce, but would apparently yield to Congress the authority to define the regulatory power of the States. One immediate effect of such a ruling would doubtless be to increase State trade barriers. For Congress could not be expected to enact legislation that would protect its commerce powers under any and all circumstances. Nor could it be expected to rush through a special law to nullify every improper State enactment in this field.

It seems probable, as Mr. Dickinson concludes, that adherence to the justices' suggestion would lead to more, rather than less, chaos in the regulation of commerce. He heartily indorses the idea of an "integrated national policy" in this field. But he also points out that "an exhaustive factual investigation would be necessary" to prepare the way for such legislation. His request for such a study in some respects parallels the constructive plan of Frank Bane, executive director of the Council of State Governments, for a continuing committee to work out Federal-State relationships.

While this hopeful movement is going forward, there seems to be no excuse for the Supreme Court to impair its role as umpire of the Federal system. It is the function of the court and not of Congress to determine the respective rights of the Federal Government and the States under the Constitution. If Congress were free to say where intrastate commerce ends and interstate commerce begins, it would be in a position to absorb all authority over the economic life of the people.

What is needed is closer cooperation between the Federal Government and the States in working out this difficult problem. In the meantime, any weakening of the Supreme Court's function as umpire of the Federal system would be a blow to constitutional government in the United States.

Primary For D. C.

With interest in the State primaries approaching a climax, Washingtonians are once more chafing under the boss system of choosing convention delegates. Unless the Capper bill to regulate the election of delegates representing the District of Columbia in national political conventions is promptly considered, hand-picked delegates will once more usurp the rights of party members in the Capital City to participate in the selection of Presidential candidates.

The Capper bill has nothing to do with local suffrage in the usual meaning of that term. It would simply provide machinery for the election of Democratic and Republican national committeemen and committeewomen as well as delegates and alternates to all conventions of parties nominating candidates for the Presidency and Vice Presidency. Its only purpose is to bring party leaders here under control by the rank and file of party members.

Virtually all the States now use the primary system as a means of counteracting bossism in politics. But in Washington Congress has been content to permit the selection of delegates by individuals or small groups with no consideration for the wishes of the rank and file. Continuation of that system in the Capital City is a reproach to both political parties.

While interest in the State primaries is keen it would be a good time for the Senate District Committee to take up this bill. Hearings on the measure would doubtless bring forth a substantial demand for its enactment. Indeed, the interest of Congress itself in promoting sound political practices should have brought about the enactment of a primaries law for the District long ago.

Case For Prompt Action

Publication of the majority report of the Special House Committee, which is investigating the National Labor Relations Board, should induce the Committee on Labor to take action on revisionist proposals, and thus bring the subject before the House for debate. The Smith committee has certainly assembled evidence showing the need for prompt action to enable the NLRB to function more effectively.

The spread of collective bargaining and its establishment on a firm foundation would be assisted, instead of being hindered, by careful revision of the Wagner Act. Some "thick-and-thin" upholders of the present law seem to regard any proposals for change as legislative sacrilege—an underhand method of attacking the principles of collective bargaining. The majority members of the Smith committee assert most emphatically, however, that they have "proposed no amendment to the act which in any wise—directly, indirectly, or remotely—adversely affects its fundamental purpose."

For various reasons the present board has suffered a serious loss of prestige, and its usefulness has been correspondingly impaired. It has been handicapped by having to exercise prosecuting as well as judicial functions. And, through no fault of its own, it has incurred the enmity of both A. F. of L. and C. I. O. labor leaders because it has been forced to intervene in factional disputes over the selection of bargaining units.

The Smith bill, therefore, proposes to set up a new three-man board which would have only judicial functions, leaving the prosecuting functions of the present NLRB to be exercised by a separate organization headed by an administrator. A board with these limited powers would be able to discharge its duties much more satisfactorily, escaping the reproach of acting as prosecutor, judge and jury.

The cause of collective bargaining would also be furthered by relieving the board of the thankless task of designating the unit for collective bargaining purposes in cases involving a dispute between rival labor organizations. It also seems an act of simple justice to protect employers against becoming involved in factional disputes of this sort by relieving them of the necessity of negotiating with labor groups until the proper bargaining unit is agreed upon.

Another amendment is designed to give the employer more freedom in discussing with employes matters of mutual concern, "provided that such expressions of opinion are not accompanied by acts of coercion, intimidation, discrimination or threats thereof." While there is danger that such a positive declaration might be loosely interpreted, the Smith committee believes that the NLRB has gone so far in the other direction as to jeopardize the employer's right of free speech.

All these recommendations as well as proposed changes in methods of taking testimony, and provision for review of decisions in representation cases call for careful study. It should be apparent by this time that the Wagner Labor Relations Act is a faulty legislative instrumentality in need of overhauling. If the task is delayed too long, the progress of collective bargaining is likely to be seriously retarded due to public hostility aroused by official bungling.

Scott Circle

The House eliminated authorization for the proposed Scott Circle underpass from the District appropriations bill without considering the merits of the project. Had the obvious need for relief of traffic congestion at this point been analyzed, the result would probably have been very different.

While the rule against legislative provisions in appropriation bills is sound, its rigid application in the case of the District often works a hardship. If this project is not restored to the supply bill by the Senate, it probably cannot be undertaken in the near future. For Congress is reluctant to pass special acts to authorize local improvements.

Completion of the underpass at Thomas Circle has had the effect of making a similar improvement at Scott Circle the more urgent. Relieved of congestion at Fourteenth street, Massachusetts avenue traffic now jams up more rapidly at the intersection of Sixteenth street. The full benefit of Washington's first major vehicular tunnel will not be realized until similar passes have been constructed beneath Scott and Dupont circles.

To avoid indefinite delays in continuing this work the Senate ought to restore the authorization for the Scott Circle project. In the meantime, traffic at this busy intersection could be greatly facilitated simply by rounding off the sharp corners which now reduce traffic to virtually one lane around the circle.

"Defends The Klan"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Regarding the defense of the Klan in The Post letter column of March 23, the nucleus of the original Ku-Klux Klan was perhaps formed with the best of motives, considering the exigencies of the period (Reconstruction). Its successor, however, has sounded the depths of un-Americanism with its racial and religious persecutions, attracting to itself naive, costume-loving individuals with Robin Hood complexes, as well as many others motivated by more vicious impulses. As to its vaunted Bible-reading, one can well believe this is in the nature of the random passage-picking which leads many amateur intepreters to cut off "offending" hands and pluck out "offending" eyes.

ANN ROTHSCHILD.
Washington, March 25.

To the Editor of The Post—I was amused no little by a letter appearing in The Post of March 23 entitled "Defends the Klan."

My reaction was that the rebuttal to it all lies in the manner of signature, namely, "A Klansman." Why, if the organization is of such unsurpassing virtue as set forth by the writer, did he not remove his literary hood and let the world know that he has the honor (if any) to be affiliated with the body?

FRANK BUCKLEY.

Trade Agreements

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

I trust that Republican members of Congress will bear in mind that a number of Republican voters are strongly in favor of Secretary Hull's trade agreement program. They are much distressed at the impetus given to economic nationalism by our tariff act of 1930, and regard Mr. Hull's tariff program as the one hopeful development in the generally dark picture of international relations.

Some of these voters go so far as to believe that certain elements in the Republican Party, through their short-sighted refusal to support any plan for better cooperation between our country and the rest of the world, bear a heavier share of responsibility for the wars in Europe and the Far East than the European dictators, and are the real warmongers in spite of their professed love of peace.

Since many Republicans hold that peace is the first essential for the well-being of the United States, and that our peace is precarious so long as most of the rest of the world is at war, they are likely to abandon their party unless more of its leaders cooperate with the present Administration in its efforts to create conditions favorable to an enduring peace.

Unemployment Problem

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

In the current discussion of unemployment and the number of unemployed people, the commentators have thus far failed to make note of a fact that appears to have considerable significance. They seem to neglect the fact that the wages and salaries paid to labor are paid from production of goods and services for sale.

Expressed in other words, labor both produces and spends its own wages. Thus wages and salaries contribute to the national income. Ten million people working for a year at an average of $1,200 actually add $12,000,000,000 to the national income which is both spent and made. This sum goes into the common pot of purchasing power which functions dynamically to produce the goods and services purchased.

Purchasing happens to be a necessary part of selling, and sales are precedent to production. The fact is, we make what we can sell. It appears to be one of those inevitable conclusions that the national income is directly proportional to the wages and salaries earned by labor.

And it would seem to follow as a necessary corollary that our machine economy wants a raise of real pay, giving labor more in high wages and low prices, so that capital can get more in quick sales, small profits, large volume and keep "the machine" running to supply human wants.

Mass production seems to require mass consumption to keep going. Production depends upon consumption. Strange as it may seem, in sum, the people, working together, make what they spend. Production follows consumption in a dynamic relation.

Perhaps, regardless of the numbers employed and unemployed, all this country needs is a raise of pay!

Crime Control

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

The main fault of this present crime wave lies not in the lack of policemen but in the handling of our present force.

Instead of trying to have the Federal police detailed for metropolitan service, we might transfer a few men from traffic duty at light controlled intersections, where they are not needed and are really in the way, to crime wave duty.

Entirely too much time is devoted to directing traffic and picking up drunks and vagrants and not enough to the running down of armed robbery. Our larceny-minded individuals realize this, and are taking advantage of the situation more and more every day. When one is apprehended he generally draws a two to five year sentence and is paroled at two-thirds of this period for good behavior.

We have laws to deal with this vicious branch of crime. Let's put teeth into them and make them stick. That is the only way in which we can break up this racket.

Prefers Tigers

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Kung, the philosopher (now better known as Confucius), upon receiving the reply of the woman that she continued to live where her husband had been killed by tigers, because there were no oppressive rulers there, observed:

"An oppressive ruler is worse than a tiger."

The woman who preferred to live under the menace of the tiger, rather than that of an oppressive ruler (and officiousness is very definitely a form of oppression) voiced an opinion, based on experience, which should be heeded in America today.

For seven years we have been forced headlong by the officiousness of our officialdom, which has undertaken to "regulate" our lives, into a situation where neither liberty nor privacy is respected.

Free men prefer the menace of the tiger (that is to say, the hazard of failure) which always is to be found on the outskirts of liberty, to being the pawns of the "regulators" of a totalitarian government.

The Census Controversy

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

The current discussion of census questions about incomes should begin with the premise that the people who pass tax money to the collectors are as much interested in family incomes of $5,000 or less as are the wage earners and those on relief. That fact was emphasized repeatedly during 1938, while the writer directed for the subcommittees on appropriations of the Senate and the House of Representatives of the Seventy-fourth Congress and a citizens' committee a searching investigation of relief, unemployment and collateral problems in the District of Columbia.

Congress required the investigator to answer eight pointed questions, six of which went right back to the facts as to what were the incomes of families whose members normally had been and still were employed in various fields in the District of Columbia and nearby. In other words, the need for a certain amount of relief was regarded as provable, not merely on the basis of the cost of living but also on the basis of what similar people still working were receiving by way of family incomes.

The data collected by our agents in the course of that investigation and those supplied to us by the various Federal and District departments of government, and by other individuals and organizations, gave a fairly good factual picture of the local situation. We did not have the time to collect other data or to secure a sufficient number of collateral checks upon the accuracy of some of this data during the period of 1938.

Since much of the factual data we used is being collected currently by the various departments of Government and by private individuals and organizations, the accuracy of this data could be checked from the answers to the income questions requested in the current census schedules. The importance of accurate data to the District and to the country at large can be realized from a single aspect of the situation in the District of Columbia.

Here our investigators showed that a total of $778,000 out of a total of $9,000,000 a year paid out in general relief, in aid to the blind, the aged and to families of dependent children, and in WPA employment, could be diverted to other necessary purposes. If the basic data as to incomes which we used could be accepted as reasonably accurate, there would be no hesitation about using this $778,000 differently.

For example, it would be of lasting benefit to the people of the District if 8 per cent of the some 9,000,000 expended in the District could go to support better services for children in the fields of education, health, welfare and eventual employment.

If, as many suspect, 8 per cent of the total of billions going for all such purposes in the country at large gradually could be expended in a wiser manner to meet the present or additional needs of people with low incomes, it would be of lasting benefit. What individual, convinced of those possibilities, would not gladly give the additional information as to family incomes to the local census enumerator.

People have been very helpful and considerate about giving such information in New England, and one practical result of this has been that local town officials in that area, as well as private organizations, have been able to do a much better relief job.

Obviously, as many economists and other experts pointed out to us in the course of our investigation, the 6,000,000 families receiving total incomes of $750 or less annually, and the 11,000,000 families receiving total incomes of $1,500 annually, or less, out of a total of some 27,000,000 families in the United States, are not likely for a long time, at least, to keep on working and paying taxes to support families on relief, each of which receives from $1,000 to $1,440 annually, while the worker members of such families are unemployed.

They pointed out that the British people, with many more years of experience than we have had in this country, have been compelled to meet that problem. In that country families still do work and pay taxes, but, receiving low incomes, have demanded that their children receive better and more practical training, so that these children receive higher incomes when they become wage earners. They have also made demands for grants-in-aid and subsidies for themselves. The public agencies have been importuned and urged to provide on a public basis many services for low-income groups, which are provided also for the unemployed.

The Post Impressionist

A Forgotten Man Weds

A few days ago the press association wires carried the story of the marriage, at Reno, of Warren K. Billings, "forgotten man" of the Mooney case. The story was brief, just as all the space accorded Billings since the two men convicted amid a feeling of war hysteria, of the San Francisco Preparedness Day parade bombing in 1916 has been slight compared with the notice Mooney received.

Ironically, however, Billings today is probably infinitely better off, and much closer to an eventual rapprochement with society than is Mooney. Billings does not have a full pardon, it is true; his sentence was commuted to time served. But he is relatively a young man, not much beyond 40; Mooney is nearing 60 and is in broken health. Billings, with a rapidly growing watch repair business in San Francisco, says he never felt better.

Mooney, indeed, after a triumphal lecture swing around the country, in which he pleaded for a healing of the breach between the American Federation of Labor and the Congress for Industrial Organizations, is himself almost a forgotten man.

Only a few weeks ago friends in San Francisco responded to his wire from a Pittsburgh hospital and staged a benefit party to pay his medical expenses. He and his wife Rena have been estranged for many years, and although she worked hard to help secure his freedom, there has been no reconciliation since Mooney walked free on a gubernatorial pardon.

Billings, never a spectacular figure, learned early during his term to "take things in stride." He was sent to Folsom, California's huge, tough institution for second offenders—having a prior conviction for alleged possession of dynamite—and was soon known as a model prisoner.

He steadfastly maintained his innocence, just as Mooney was doing at San Quentin. But never was there the concerted drive in behalf of Billings that the labor movement, principally, put forth for Mooney.

There were two reasons for this development: First, Billings was not the energetic type of fighter that Mooney was; second, under California law no pardon may be granted a second offender without a favorable vote of a majority of the State Supreme Court.

As the case dragged through the courts, year after year, with Mooney holding the center of the stage, Billings worked for his freedom, too. He learned the watch repair business at Folsom, and became the institution's official clock custodian. Once he fell from a ladder while winding a clock and fractured his arm. The clock was in the warden's house.

Billings read deeply in law, also, and established among his fellow prisoners something of a reputation as a "sea lawyer." He consulted with his attorneys and aided in planning new strategy to help get his case further hearings. And always there was that quiet hope in his heart that one day he would leave prison behind and begin life all over again.

Periodically, as the "free Tom Mooney" issue was revived through attempts to secure a legislative pardon for Mooney, Billings would reappear in the news. Invariably, editors wanted to know what comments Billings had, but the interest always lagged at that point.

Frequently rumors arose that the two principals in American labor's cause celebre had split. Various reasons were assigned. Billings was reported to be dissatisfied because everybody was working for Mooney alone; he was said to be willing to accept parole, but was deterred by Mooney, who held out till he won, for a full pardon.

At all events, newspapermen dispatched to Folsom from the State capitol at Sacramento got little enlightenment. Billings never conceded that there was anything amiss, but without doubt there were moments when he felt bitter that he had been passed up.

A few days after Gov. Olson had commuted his sentence I saw Billings at the Central Labor Council in San Francisco. It was the regular weekly meeting, and Billings was standing in the rear of the hall, passing out cards announcing the opening of his new shop, not many blocks from the scene of the fatal bombing on Market street. There had been some stories in the papers that Billings wanted to get married, but that unless he had a pardon restoring citizenship he might not be able to go through with his plans. I asked him about it.

"Well," he replied, "I've come this far by taking it easy and I am not going to change my ideas now. The attorney general tells me it will be all right as far as my plans to be married are concerned, even though I don't get the pardon, so maybe I'll go ahead now. But I am going to keep on working until I get that pardon, just the same."

We never got a chance to finish the conversation because delegates began to arrive in groups and Billings did a rushing business, taking in watches to be fixed and delivered by the following week's meeting, and handing out claim checks. He seemed happy, and as I walked away he observed that the crystal on my wrist-watch was cracked.

"Better come in with that," he called, "I'm going to need a lot more customers pretty soon."

Business Outlook

By Ernest K. Lindley

Counting On The War

AMONG GOVERNMENT economists there are two schools of thought about the business outlook for the next several months.

According to one school we are at or near the bottom of a sharp decline which began about the first of the year. In December the Federal Reserve index of industrial production stood at 128, an all-time high. In March it stood at 105, about where it was last August. The more optimistic economists think the downward curve has flattened out and that the index will not drop below 100 before a gradual upward movement begins during the next few weeks. This seems to be the majority opinion.

According to the other school, we are still on the way down, and the Federal Reserve index may drop to 90 or even 85 or 80, about where it went in the recession of 1937, in the next few months. This is a minority opinion.

As usual, the future is shrouded in mist, and several economists are not too sure about their forecasts, whether their "hunches" are pessimistic or relatively optimistic.

These two schools, and the variants of both of them, are in essential agreement on two points:

(1) Nothing is in sight to generate a powerful upward swing in business.

(2) The main factor on the bullish side is export business, chiefly war sales to the Allies.

IN SHORT, we are counting on war sales to pull us up—but without any assurance that they will be large enough in volume during the next several months to draw us much farther on the road to recovery. A minority of economists think the pull from the other side of the Atlantic will be too weak to offset the downward push of other influences.

With from 9,000,000 to 12,000,000 unemployed we seem to be relying on the war to give us recovery—but with no reason to believe that it will give us a substantial measure of recovery. To promote exports we have already resorted to credits extended through the Export-Import Bank. The great potential buyers, the British and French, are not receiving credits or loans. They don't need them yet, and at this stage of the war an Administration which granted them credits would invite political ruin. But the pressure for credits and loans is being created, especially among the producers of tobacco, fruits and other products which the British have stopped buying from us, on the ground that they must conserve their dollar exchange for airplanes and other essentials for war.

If the war endures, and as the Allies use up their more readily convertible assets, the pressure to grant credits and loans will increase.

ALREADY we are following the economic path of 1915-17. We are putting economic dependence on a war—although it is not giving us prosperity and probably cannot unless we go in heavily for loans which will never be repaid.

What would happen if the war ended? Already suggestions have been made through diverse channels that we would find our prosperity through reconstructing Europe and perhaps other parts of the world. Again it would have to be largely with the aid of loans, probably loans which would never be repaid.

Whether, for reasons of state and national defense, we should lend, or give, military supplies to the Allies during a prolonged war, is one question. It is a question comparable to that decided last fall by the amendment of the neutrality act to permit the export of arms, ammunition and implements of war to all belligerents who could pay for them and come and carry them away.

Whether we should permit our economic future to be staked on an export trade is another question. The answer must be no. If we stake our economic future on exports, eventually financed by loans, our economic dependence, consciously or subconsciously, will influence our judgment on what is sound policy.

IN 1932 Franklin D. Roosevelt's main theme was that we could find our own way out of economic chaos by national action. He vigorously rejected the Republican thesis that our welfare was dependent upon Europe or Asia or any other continent. Now, almost eight years later, the Roosevelt Administration is leaning hard on a war and, through various spokesmen, is talking of loaning on a peace following the war.

It is clear now that both the business world and the Administration had exaggerated notions of the stimulating effect of the present war on our economy—at least during the early months. The boom of last fall was based on the supposition that the war would lead us to prosperity. It was largely an inventory boom. Only the warnings of the harder-headed Administration economists probably prevented this inventory boom from going higher and thus requiring a longer and more severe adjustment than we have been experiencing during the last three months.

The President's conservative budget for next year was based on an exaggerated idea of the economic stimulation to be expected from the war. Congress is discovering that—less through analysis, of course, than because of political pressures. That is why appropriations for agriculture, the CCC and the NYA have been increased. That is why there will be strong demand for a WPA appropriation larger than the $1,000,000,000 earmarked by the President in his budget.

At this stage drastic cuts in the present rate of expenditures for relief and other useful purposes at home must be avoided unless we are going to turn around and establish the equivalent of WPA and farm relief for Europe. Without knocking out the prop of Government expenditures at home we are already leaning hard and dangerously on a European war.

Books And Things

Country Slickers

THE AUTOMOBILE is responsible for the kind of life described so passionately by Henry Tetlow in "On Medlock Farm" (Morrow, $2.50) and for that mapped in such convenient detail by Virginia Kirkus in "A House for the Week-ends" (Little, Brown, $2.50).

Henry Tetlow lives on a Montgomery County farm 19 miles from his business in Philadelphia, and he is, as he says, closer to his office in time, by half, than was his father, who lived 9 miles out in horse-and-train days. Miss Kirkus week-ends, more or less around the year, on Redding Ridge, 70 miles—two hours—from her weekday New York City apartment, and 15 miles from the Westport Station, where she meets her guests.

Mr. Tetlow, as those who recall his "We Farm for a Hobby" know, does a little of everything; keeps chickens and makes them pay, sells apples, and, off and on, keeps cows, pigs, sheep, goats, ducks and turkeys, and grows vast quantities of vegetables, including mushrooms. Miss Kirkus grows flowers; she calculates carefully how much she saves by not growing vegetables. But she is slipping; she shyly admits experimenting with red raspberries, and planting fruit trees "for the blossom rather than the fruit;" by her next book, I'll wager, she'll be telling about the Belgian endive in her cellar and how kale withstands frost.

NO QUESTION about it, Henry Tetlow likes his part-time farm life. He likes spraying his fruit trees seven times a year, feeding his sick duck diluted gin and milk of magnesia (an ornithological cure-all, one gathers), making dandelion sherry (an apparently endless task), concocting squirrel soup in winter, shooting pheasants in the fall, and planking shad and hunting poke greens in spring. He doesn't like horses, tractors, walking (except to get somewhere), poachers, reformers, cats, taxes, hydroponic vegetables, and a few other things; but he—and his readers—enjoy his hates almost more than his enthusiasms. The man sounds like a human steam engine, sometimes with faint notes of the calliope.

Now your reviewer is a veteran week-end country dweller who haughtily detects traces of the beginner in Virginia Kirkus' conscientious cost-accounting; and he is a little like the fascinated visitors to Medlock Farm. Mr. Tetlow also keeps accounts, but fiercely argues that there is no point in reckoning in one's own labor costs. There is some sense in that, too; for the dollars-and-cents value of such superhuman energy as apparently inspires Henry Tetlow when he comes home to the farm at night is something unlikely to be repeated in lesser men's experiences.

Life at Virginia Kirkus' week-end home, Windfall, sounds gentler; she is the kind of girl who keeps marshmallow whip, prepared mayonnaise and triscuit on her supply shelf, and adds a can of Japanese crab to the fresh lobster when extra guests turn up. Her book is less gusty reading, but the city couple dreaming of part-time life in the country is likely to find it more restful and more practical. She interleaves her chapters with useful lists of essential housefittings and supplies, notes on probable costs, questions to ask the real estate dealer. "Don't buy a house which you have seen only in the sunshine," she says. "Use flannel blankets instead of sheets in winter" (that's a winter week-end rule which it took the Gannetts ten years to learn). She offers prescriptions against poison ivy and toe-stings. She outlines the four-year plan which she and her husband have been following. (That's what makes me think her an amateur, imagine even imagining that anything will be finished in four years). She offers a week-ender's calendar, with chores for every week in the year.

The White Book

By Barnet Nover

The Text And The Timing

In the arsenal of a nation at war there is no more important weapon than propaganda. Modern wars are fought with the four M's—men, munitions, money and morale. The latter is fully as important as any of the other three.

It is the aim of war-time propaganda to strengthen the morale of the people at home. But propagandists do not stop there. They are also unceasingly engaged in an effort to undermine and, if possible, to destroy the morale of the enemy.

It is important to remember this elementary fact in any attempt to evaluate the significance of Germany's publication last week of documents allegedly taken from the Polish Foreign Office archives following the entry of German troops into Warsaw more than half a year ago. Nor should one fail to realize that a nation at war can be just as ruthless and unscrupulous in its use of the propaganda weapon as in its use of bombing planes, submarines and mines.

IN THIS COUNTRY when a witness is put on the stand he is sworn to tell "the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth." There is a real point to this triple admonition. A statement may be true yet entirely misleading if it tells the truth but not the whole truth. And it may be no different from a downright falsehood if the truth it states is adulterated with what is not true.

Before any credence can be given to such documents as the Nazi regime has produced they must be proved to be not only the truth, and not only the whole truth, but also nothing but the truth.

Soon after the outbreak of the World War in 1914 the various belligerent powers issued collections of documents bound in distinguishing colors. There was, for instance, the British Blue Book, the German White Book, the Russian Orange Book, the Austrian Red Book, and so on.

The truth content of all of them was high. That is, the individual sentences and paragraphs included in these volumes were, for the most part, those actually taken from the records. But none of them, not even the British Blue Book, which was the most complete of all, told the whole truth, and most of them did not wholly confine themselves to the truth.

Many of the documents were carefully edited to hide incriminating material. A great many documents that would have given the reader an adequate and accurate picture were not published—at least not until after the war—while later researches have conclusively established that some of the documents were predated or postdated with the deliberate purpose of creating a desired effect. As a whole, therefore, the World War documents justifying the conduct of the respective belligerents were decidedly misleading.

UNTIL an impartial body of scholars is given the opportunity to examine in extenso the documents purportedly found by the Germans in Warsaw there is no way of knowing whether the 16 published in Berlin last Friday are or are not misleading even if they individually and as a collection prove to be genuine. And as for that there is no way of actually knowing, without such examination, whether they are genuine or manufactured out of whole cloth.

It is being said, of course, that the documents have a ring of genuineness, in other words, that the individuals pilloried, among them Ambassador Bullitt, Ambassador Kennedy and President Roosevelt, could conceivably have made the statements directly or indirectly attributed to them. But the fact that they have a ring of genuineness does not necessarily prove that they are genuine. There would be no point in forging documents which nobody would believe. To have any propagandist value these documents must at the very least be credible. Dr. Goebbels has not occupied his present post for seven years in vain.

AT THIS DISTANCE and at this time it is impossible to say whether these documents tell the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth. But it is equally impossible to say with complete conviction that they do not. And Dr. Goebbels knows that too.

He knows also that where the will to believe exists, notably in certain isolationist circles long suspicious of President Roosevelt's foreign policy, these documents will be grist for their mill, regardless of the President's warning to take them with a grain of salt and regardless of the fervent denials of Secretary Hull and Ambassadors Bullitt, Kennedy and Potocki. Individuals suspicious of the Administration's foreign policy may find it awkward to believe the Nazi regime whose record for truth-telling is not impressive. But the temptation to accept the Nazi documents at their face value may override the promptings of caution.

IN ANY EVENT, the significance of the German White Book lies not so much in its veracity as in its timing. That publication or a similar set of documents could presumably have been issued months ago. Why are the documents being published now?

The war has reached a critical point. There are multiplying indications that the Allies are about to prosecute the conflict more vigorously. But such Allied intentions might come a cropper if indispensable American sources of supply should be cut off or curtailed by an upsurge of isolationist sentiment in this country.

Whatever other motives may have inspired it, the publication of the German White Book can be put down as a deliberate effort by the Nazi regime to create dissensions in the United States. For in Nazi eyes the United States, while not a belligerent and with no intention of becoming a belligerent, is already an enemy.

Television

A radio corporation which has spent $10,000,000 to perfect and market television sets, and arranged for television programs, has been stopped by a Federal board on the ground television is in such an experimental stage that sets bought by John Q. Citizen may swiftly become obsolete.

Can you imagine where the auto industry would be if in its early stages some Federal commission had banned the sale of those early puddle-jumpers because better cars might ultimately come on the market?

Just picture Hank Ford trying to get going if there had been a pappy instinct in Government in those days:

Commissioner—Mr. Ford, just what is it you are trying to do?

Henry—I have perfected an internal combustion motor so that it will run a horseless buggy of my design, and, naturally, I want to sell it.

Commissioner—I don't think we could let you put it on the market, Henry.

Henry—Why not? The world has been crying for a horseless carriage.

Commissioner—But the industry is in a state of flux. Others have made or are making horseless carriages. Designs are changing rapidly. What's a good car today may be old-fashioned in a few years.

Henry—My machine is low-priced, it does the work, it stands up pretty well and there is a big market for it, in my opinion.

Commissioner—Well, we don't want you to have a big market for it. It wouldn't be fair to the public.

Henry (pretty perplexed)—A low-priced auto will bring ease and comfort and pleasure to millions of people. It will revolutionize travel.

Commissioner—We admit all that, Henry, but suppose a man buys one for $500 or $600, and then, after a while, you bring out a better model? There will be better models every year, won't there

Henry—I certainly hope so.

Commissioner—That's just it. The people who buy a car now will find the car out of date when the new one comes out. It wouldn't be square.

Henry—You mean I can't sell Lizzie to anybody

Commissioner—Not yet, Henry.

Henry—Well, when can I?

Commissioner—Not until all the men with designs for automobiles have stopped experiments and agreed on a car that won't be changed much. The public has got to be protected.

Henry—But what about a little protection for a businessman with a new idea?

Heading For Europe

By Dorothy Thompson

Reflections On Board Ship

ON BOARD S. S. Manhattan.—An American ship Europe bound, is today like New York in August. Nobody is on it who does not have to be. There are only 60-odd passengers in the cabin class. At night the big dining room seems empty. The tourist class has something more than 200, an immense proportion of whom seem to be German mothers who have been visiting their children in America and are forced to return because their visas have expired. They are perplexed about the war, but full of confidence in their Fuehrer, with that trustful docility of the German folk that has been the perennial despair of all who have preached freedom in Germany from 1848 until now.

Fate's irony mixes them up on this ship with a large group of American Jewish medical students who had to leave Scottish universities because their passports were withdrawn by our Department of State, who were unable to enter American medical schools and who are now headed for Switzerland with new permits from Washington. These American exiles in pursuit of education get on excellently with the German repatriates. One sees them playing backgammon together and wonders how long it will take the docile German mothers to accept again the realization that this is a crime.

THE WHOLE wide world may not be bound by gold chains around the feet of God, in Tennyson's words, but it is still, however tenuously, bound by chains of oil, tobacco, copper, airplanes and even tulip bulbs. We have our quota of business men, traveling bi-annually now as ever in quest of Turkish tobacco for American cigarettes, government markets for airplane engines and parts and the Dutch government's concession of spring bulbs.

We also have returning wives—American wives of an Englishman, a Frenchman and a German. Far from shunning one another they are all very chummy. The issues in the war are tactfully avoided among them, but one is in a state of shellshock over the prospect of breaking the news to her European mother-in-law that she has left her children in the United States.

The business men do not like the war. Anyone who thinks this war is made for capitalistic interests should talk with such a society of international representatives of capitalism. However, they are all pro-Ally; their reason is that they believe in an open world with reasonably free exchange of goods. They are convinced that the Germans would close it into exclusive monopolistic spheres.

THE MOST interesting passengers on this ship, however, are some twenty-odd young Americans who are going to the war. They are not enlisting to fight because that would mean loss of their American citizenship. But they are enlisting to free other people to fight. They are entering ambulance corps. I can remember the young men who went to the last war. There is not the slightest similarity between their attitude and the viewpoint of these young Americans. Far from being pushed into their action by the taunts of their girl friends or by slogans and martial music, almost all of them have had to contend with restraining forces and confess that they have been misunderstood and condemned by many of their friends. They are reticent about giving their reasons, slightly embarrassed when pressed and rather on the defensive.

One is either genuinely or affectedly cynical. He wants to get into an air service eventually. He thinks flying is the most exciting thing in the world; he says flyers get accustomed to the idea of death anyhow and flying is the best service "because it's great while it lasts, and anyhow you are sure not to have your face shot off or anything boring like that." Asked bluntly: "Why didn't you enlist with the Germans?" he replies with a bright smile, "My family always fought on the side of the Allies. It's in the tradition." Then, after a pause, "I'd just as soon fight with the Nazis, I guess. Sound fellows, the Germans." He waits for the look of shocked astonishment that is expected to follow this frivolous remark.

Failing to invoke it he puts some more quarters in the slot machine. He has been to the best schools and one of the best colleges and his clothes come from the best tailors.

The three I have come to know best are exceptional boys. Two of them are more sophisticated than the average American boy. They also are products of the more expensive Eastern schools. One, the most serious, who is downy-cheeked, blue-eyed, and spectacled, comes from a fresh-water college. All of them have had jobs offered them. One left a good job. They are afraid of being accused of idealism. They have a very realistic, straightforward, candid and unillusioned view of things.

One of them, trying to explain his viewpoint, burst out: "The British and the French have got to win because they are not extremists. I can't bear a world in which the extremists will win." The fair boy said: "I wouldn't ask anybody else to enlist, but I have been thinking it all over for months; it is simply idiotic to say that it won't matter to America what happens in Europe. I just know that is not true. I know it will be simply horrible for us if the totalitarians win the war. As for being neutral—nobody I know is neutral. So why do they pretend? Nobody with a free mind can be neutral on any subject," he concluded. I asked the third one a leading question: "What do you think this war is about?" "The right to a private life," he said, grinning. "I've lived in Fascist countries. They open your letters. . . ."

What fascinates me about these boys is that 7 years ago, had they been Germans in Germany, or 15 years ago, had they been Italians in Italy, three of them would almost certainly have been Fascists. They are exactly the type that might have formed the elite of a Fascist movement. All the qualifications are there. They are upper class, discontented nevertheless with their inherited society, athletic and accustomed to organized sports. Seven years ago exactly their types were the young Nazis I talked with in Berlin. Five years ago a fourth—the more tender-minded and middle-class—might easily have been a Communist or a Communist fellow traveler. He is exactly the type which once furnished the more idealist Communists. He is still very critical of capitalism and has read a lot in progressive economics.

Today all three of them have an almost puritanical conservative liberalism. They seriously doubt whether the world can be made over for the better in a hurry. They think the war is silly, but since it has happened and apparently inevitably, as the result of one large nation trying to make the world over in a hurry, they wish to throw the weight of their individual lives on one side of the struggle.

Of course, in their more open moments—and youth is very cagey with older people—each admits that there are other reasons. One said: "I guess, to tell the truth, it's partly adventure. After all, it's the greatest show in the world, and I would like to see it first hand."

But far better than any American boys who went to the last war do they know what war is. During their whole lives they have heard about the horrors of the last war. Furthermore, none of them with whom I have spoken has any uncritical enthusiasm for Britain or France. They think the Germans had a case, although the Nazis are terrible. They wonder out loud whether the United States might have done more than she has done since the last war to stop this thing from happening. They profoundly distrust American politicians. "Why don't any of them say what they really think?"

Finally, they seem to be much more adult than boys of their age were 20 years ago. They all drink, but with one exception in the 20, with great moderation, and the others are distressed about him. They keep pretty much to themselves and spend most of their time in one another's company, although none of them had met until they got on the boat. Nothing would embarrass them more or appear to them more absurd and tactless than to suggest that there is anything heroic in their behavior.

ONE OF THE twenty is much older than the others. He is over 40. His reasons for going to the war are clear. He wanted to go to the last war and a woman-ridden family stopped him. It's been eating into him ever since. This war has given him a chance to cut the silver cord at last. For the first time in his life he is a free man.

Reed Tea and Skating Make a Gay Sunday

A happy division between skating and partying had society on the go yesterday. Between the hours of 5 and 7 o'clock, Mrs. Thomas Henry Clay Reed received in her apartment at 2101 Connecticut avenue. Earlier in the day, devotees of ice skating were out in full force to attend the last meeting of the Washington Ice Club held at the Chevy Chase Ice Palace.

Cave dwellers, for the most part, attended Mrs. Reed's party. Ushered into the spacious apartment guests wandered about the beautifully appointed rooms, which were covered with Persian rugs and carefully furnished in the hostess' excellent antiques.

Many guests, sipping their tea or chatting with old friends, admired Mrs. Reed's collection of miniature carvings in the glassed-in cases lining the walls of the music room. The carvings are in jade, ivory and sandlewood

Assisting the hostess at the tea table were Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone, Mrs. Thomas Holcomb, Mrs. Henry Hughes Hough, Mrs. C. L. Hussey, Mrs. Dougall MacDougall, Mrs. Perry Heath, Mrs. Dion Williams, Mme. Alfaro, Mrs. Matthew John Whittall, Mrs. Edward B. Meigs and Mrs. Louis S. Owsley. Generally assisting during the afternoon were Mrs. William Barrett Ridgley, Mrs. Maxwell Hamilton, Mrs. Alys Downing, Miss Elizabeth Howry, Mrs. Wallace Dempsey and Mrs. Conger Baldwin.

Mrs. Stone At Tea Table

The tea table was centered with pink roses and candles in quaint, old-fashioned colors were at either end. Easter lilies as well as azaleas and hydrangeas adorned the conservatory. In an adjoining room champagne punch was served.

The hostess received, wearing a blue lace gown, the bodice sprinkled with paillettes, and a cluster of pink flowers at the waist.

Glimpsed here and there were Mrs. Buchanan Merryman; the Minister of South Africa and Mrs. Ralph William Close, she wearing a powder-blue outfit; Miss Mary Howry, Lyle Brookover, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Distler, she wearing a gray ensemble and silver fox scarf; Mr. and Mrs. Walter Tuckerman, Senator Arthur Capper, Gen. and Mrs. Merritt Ireland, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Amos Fries, she in a gown of crushed grape wool; Lady Leslie in smart black; Dr. and Mrs. John Carruthers and their daughter, Jane; Baroness von Below, and many others.

Mrs. Dunn Presents Cup

Out bright and early were the skating fans. Many were accompanied by their wide-eyed youngsters who greatly enjoyed the exhibitions of the club members. One of the most cunning acts was put on by the children, some appearing in costume. Some chose cowboy suits, others Mexican and many a pigtail flapped in the breeze as the youngsters cavorted over the ice.

Much applauded were the only two professionals in the show, Norval Baptie and Doris Ziegfeld. A clever sister act was put on by Mrs. Arthur Clephane and Mrs. Creighton Peet. Incidentally, Mrs. Clephane received the James Clement Dunn cup for the best skating, for the second time. Mrs. Dunn, who wore a mustard yellow wool frock, short fur jacket and flower hat, presented the cup to Mrs. Clephane. The Richard Sanger medals for members showing the greatest improvement during the year, were presented to Creighton Peet and Miss Mary Frances Rollow.

A grand march, put on by all "able" members opened the performance, and several spills added interest to this event. Some 16 of the best skaters put on a waltz number, the women wearing black skirts, white blouses and red sashes. The men had donned black trousers, white shirts and red sashes for the occasion. Charles Mitchell, 3rd, of Baltimore and Miss Dorothy Snell, of this city, one of the outstanding skaters of the country, performed.

Boxholders To Entertain At Symphony

Wives of Director And Director Guests At Tomorrow's Concert

Mrs. Harl McDonald and Mrs. Eugene Ormandy, wives of the manager and musical director, respectively, of the Philadelphia Orchestra, have planed to be in Washington tomorrow evening for the last of the winter's series of programs that the orchestra is giving in the Capital this season at Constitution Hall.

At this time, Rose Bampton, one of the youngest and most glamorous of the prima donnas at the Metropolitan Opera, will be guest soloist. Originally, Mrs. Edwin B. Watson, known professionally as Frances Nash, pianist, was to have played with the orchestra on this program, but due to need for recent hospitalization because of an injured vertebra in her neck, Mrs. Watson had to postpone her appearance. However, Dr. McDonald already has announced that Mrs. Watson will play with the orchestra next season.

McCords to Occupy Townsend Box

Mme. Pelenyi, wife of the Hungarian Minister, will not be in town tomorrow evening, but has announced that the Counselor of the Legation, Mr. Stephen de Rothkugel, will entertain in their box.

Mrs. Lawrence Townsend, who, with Mr. Townsend, has been in Florida since the first of March, and who writes that it is so cold at their cottage near St. Petersburg they have had no swimming and practically "lived in sweaters, surrounded by oil stoves," has turned her box over to Mrs. James McCord, who will entertain a party of friends.

Among those having boxes and who will have guests are Mrs. Adolph C. Miller, Mrs. Edwin B. Parker, Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, jr., Mrs. Ord Preston, Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss, Mrs. Robert Low Bacon, Mrs. Stanley Woodward, Mrs. Eugene Meyer, Miss Mabel Boardman, Mrs. Henry M. Robert, Mrs. F. A. Keep, Mrs. James Clement Dunn, Mrs. George Garrett, Mrs. William Crozier, Mrs. Ralph Worthington, Robert Coe and Boris Shiskin.

Prima Donna to Sing McDonald Song

Miss Bampton will sing tow groups of songs, including operatic arias and concert numbers. She will honor Dr. McDonald by singing one of his compositions, "Daybreak." He also will be represented on the program by a symphonic suite from his first symphony, "The Santa Fe Trail," written in 1934.

Mr. Ormandy will conduct. The program will include works by Wagner, Sibelius, Berlioz and Richard and Johann Strauss.

Engagement Announced Today

MISS CAROLYN BLISS OSGOOD,

whose engagement to Richard Rick, of Ancon, Panama Canal Zone, is announced by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Whitney Osgood, of Chevy Chase. The bride-elect is a graduate of the College of William and Mary and is a member of Gamma Phi Beta sorority. Mr. Rick, who is the son of Mrs. Edward Rick, of Reading, Pa., was graduated from Lehigh University, where he was a member of Lambda Chi Alpha fraternity. The wedding will take place in early summer

Fauquier Field Trial Association to Hold Its Shooting Dog Trials Next Saturday

THE FAUQUIER COUNTY Field Trial Association will hold shooting dog trials next Saturday. This will he a change from horses for those who want a change! But in case you don't, there will be the Deep Run Hunt's race meeting at Curles Neck, near Richmond, on the same day.

The shooting dog trials will start at 8 o'clock in the morning on the West Rector land between Atoka and Rectortown. Mrs. Hubert Phipps, of Rectortown, is secretary of the association. There will be three stakes —All-Age Stake, Shooting Dog Stake, Puppy Stake. Silver cups will be given in all classes. Judges include Ernest Mead, of Richmond, Va., president of the Virginia Amateur Field Trial Association, an office he has held for 21 years. Mr. Mead is a great shooting dog enthusiast and holds trials twice a year at Camp Lee, Petersburg. Colin Reid, of Pittsburg, will also judge.

Among those entering dogs will be Mrs. Isabel Dodge Sloane, of Brookmeade Farm, near Upperville. She raises so of the best shooting dogs in Virginia and is a good shot. Mrs. Sloane always spends the fall months at her Brookmeade estate and enjoys the bird shooting here. Mrs. Chichester du Pont is expected to send some entries from her Virginia Kennels. Others showing will be Mrs. Charles Sabin, one of the best shots among the ladies, and Mrs. Hubert Phipps. Among the men showing are Hugh Fontaine, Richard Kirkpatrick, Robert Turner, Jack Thomas, Prosser Tabb, Frank Littleton, jr., Herbert Kirkpatrick, Fred Sharp, all of Virginia, and Jack Harper, of Chevy Chase, Md. Other entries will be given out later as there will be many from different parts of the country.

THE DEEP RUN HUNT race meeeting will start on Saturday, at 3 o'clock in the afternoon, when five races will be run. There will be brush races, a timber race, a hurdle race and a flat race. Richard Wallach, jr., of Warrenton, is secretary of the meeting. This is the first spring race meeting in Virginia, and each week following there will be interesting events held. Following the Richmond meeting, horses will be shipped to Middleburg for the Middleburg Hunt race meeting on April 13. Horses that have been wintering in Camden and Aiken and other Southern horse resorts are being taken to Richmond this week and will continue on the Virginia circuit. The Deep Run Cup, 3 miles over timber, will be the feature of the day, and the Richmond Plate, 2 miles over timber, is always interesting, the latter race carrying a purse of $1,000. Richmond will be thronged with horse racing fans over the week-end.

A large luncheon at the Commonwealth Club, on Franklin street, will be given in honor of owners, riders and numbers of people from a distance. Teas and cocktail parties are the order of the day after the races. Then many large dinner parties, after which everyone will go to the Hunt Ball that night to be given at the Commonwealth Club ballroom, which will be decorated in attractive hunting favors. Scarlet evening coats of the men will add much color to the occasion.

MR. AND MRS. THOMAS U. DUDLEY entertained at a dinner party on Friday night at their home, Exning, near Middleburg, in honor of Miss Lucy Proctor and Mr. Aldridge Dudley, jr., whose engagement was recently announced.

Among the guests were John Dudley, home from the University of Virginia for the week-end; Miss Elizabeth Gaddis, Miss Mayo Atkinson, Miss Melita Seipp, Mr. and Mrs. Frank C. Littleton, jr., Henry Frost and Colin McLeod, jr.

Two of the guests could not get there because of illness. Miss Barbara Iselin, of Middleburg, was taken to Emergency Hosital on Wednesday and operated on for a sudden attack of appendicitis. Winston Frost, of the University of Virginia, had to go to the hospital for treatment of a broken leg he received some time ago while playing polo.

The Wadsworths Spend Week-End In South Carolina

Representative James Wadsworth accompanied Mrs. Wadsworth to Summervile, S. C., over the week-end. Mr. Wadsworth will return to their Georgetown home here today by plane. However, Mrs. Wadsworth, who is recuperating from an illness, will remain in South Carolina for several weeks.

Leaving Wednesday, Representative Wadsworth will go on a speaking tour which will include stops in New York, Maine and Ohio. Mrs. Stuart Symington, who was visting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wadsworth, here recently, has left for her home in St. Louis, Mo. Following her stop here Mrs. Symington went to Hobe Sound, Fla., where she joined her husband, who was stopping with Mr. and Mrs. Charles Payson, of New York.

Mrs. Farrington Aids China Concert

Mrs. Frederick Farrington is among the patronesses for the concert to be given under the auspices of the Washington Committee for Aid to China by the Pro Musica Quartet at the Philips Memorial Gallery on Monday evening, April 8, at 8:30 o'clock.

The quartet consists of Milton Schwartz, Jeno Sevely, Ralph Hirsch and William Brennand, all of the National Symphony Orchestra.

Kay Rickert, violinist with the National Symphony Orchestra, and Helen McGraw, pianist and Naumburg prize winner, will entertain in a program of chamber music. Others sponsoring the affair include Dr. and Mrs. Walter Lowdermilk, Mrs. Arthur Clarendon Smith, Mrs. Jacob Leander Loose and Mrs. Cornelia Bryce Pinchot.

Proceeds will go to the Chinese Industrial Cooperatives, a plan of small scale productive units, which enable refugees to support themselves.

Mr. and Mrs. James Clement Dunn Give Cocktail Party for the Ernest Angells

MR. AND MRS. JAMES CLEMENT DUNN gave a small cocktail party this last week-end for Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Angell. The Angells have been staying at the Brighton for a visit while they renewed old friendships in Washington. Mrs. Angell, as Mrs. Higgins Chapin, was one of Washington's most popular hostesses before she went to New York. At the Dunns' she was lovely in a spring print in soft tones of green and a hat in black straw.

Someone asked where in the world she had been for the last week or ten days as none of her friends had seen her. She replied with a twinkle, "Oh, Jimmie and I have been sitting at home waiting to catch a glimpse of the children." The "children" are their attractive daughters, Cynthia Dunn and Marianna de Baillet-Latour, who came down from New York to spend Easter with their parents.

"You see," continued Mary Dunn, "we refuse all invitations when they come home so that we can be with them as much as possible. Then they are caught up in a round of parties and we sit at home in a little pool of solitude."

Among the friends stopping by to greet the Angells were Donna Julia Brambilla and her sister, Mrs. Philip Coffin, who were going on to see the latter's daughter, Mrs. Rodgers Barker, ride in a Fort Myer pageant; Mrs. Dean Acheson, Mr. and Mrs. Snowden Fahnestock, Mrs. Richard Wilmer, Mrs. Higginson Rogers, Griffith Warfield, Edward Weintal, Mrs. and Mrs. Charles B. Henderson, Mrs. Walter Edge, Mrs. Wainwright Abbott, Miss Marian Trumbull, Miss Irene Boyle, who was pouring tea; Clarence Hewes and Kent Leavitt. The latter has just resigned from the foreign service of the State Department and will live on a farm up Connecticut way.

Lunching informally with Mrs. Arthur Woods the other day the conversation turned on the Festival of Eighteenth Century Chamber Music which will take place at Colonial Williamsburg from April 15 through April 20. The concerts, which are rapidly becoming an institution in the world of music, are held in the ballroom of the Governor's Palace by candle light.

The setting is a rare and beautiful one and recollections of it drove one of the luncheon guests to the verge of being lyrical. She described attending one of the autumn series of these concerts when the members of the audience, during intermission, were invited to walk in the garden under a full October moon.

MRS. WOODS house, which is perfectly charming, is the historic, old Lincoln house in Georgetown. She has been doing it over all winter and now has it almost to her liking. On a dull spring day the drawing-room had a welcoming look with a fire burning brightly behind a glass fire-screen. A gorgeous tapestry on the wall, a grand piano, vases of yellow jasmine, and wide windows giving a view of the garden made a pleasant scene.

The Counselor of the British Embassy and Mrs. Neville Butler were there. They are old friends of Mrs. Woods, who remarked on the coincidence that Mr. Butler came to Washington from Iran, as did his predecessor, Victor Mallet. The Butlers are looking forward with keen interest to a trip to Williamsburg this spring.

A tall, good-looking man with a cheerful manner turned out to be Baron Goddard Wrede, of Finland, who is in the United States on business for his government. He said, with perfect good humor, that he had arrived in this country with one leg in a cast and that the cause of his accident was very humbling to his pride. He had started, in the war, to instruct some British volunteers in skiing, which, to Finns, is as easy as walking. During the first lesson Baron Wrede had a freak fall, after which he was forced to follow his pupils around on a stretcher.

The Michael Straights were also there, she very pretty in a dress of olive green wool worn with a heavy silver necklace and a little black pancake hat. They are living in Alexandria in one of the old remodeled houses, which they leased soon after their marriage last autumn.

Playlet Tonight For Milk Fund

Mrs. George H. O'Connor, president of the city-wide group, Ladies of Charity Milk Fund, has announced the list of ushers who will serve at tonight's presentation of "The Dublin Terror," to be given at the Mayflower at 8:45 p. m.

The one-act playlet was written by Thomas W. Brahany and Denis E. O'Connell, both of whom take part in the musical skit. Supporting the playlet will be orchestral numbers by Sidney's Orchestra, a recitation by Miss Grace Mary Colliflower and solos by Miss Hazel Arth, who won the Atwater-Kent award in Nation-wide audition competition. She has been singing in New York.

Assisting Mrs. O'Connor are Mrs. Walter Clarkson, chairman of the ticket committee; Mrs. Edward H. —ohansen, Mrs. Joseph Tumulty, Mrs. Francis Whitton, Mrs. D. C. Shea, Mrs. William Shannon, Miss Flannery, Mrs. William Clarke, Mrs. Richard J. Murphy, Miss U. Collins and Mrs. John Remon.

Mrs. George Luers is chairman of the ushers. Mrs. Moran is chairman of the boxes.

Woodring Leaves To Join Family In Miami Beach

Secretary of War Harry H. Woodring left Washington Saturday to join Mrs. Woodring and their three children, Melissa Marcus and Cooper Coolidge Woodring, at Miami Beach.

The secretary expects to remain there a week. Mrs. Woodring has had a cottage there for sometime, adjoining the cottage of her parents, former Senator Marcus Coolidge and Mrs. Coolidge, of Fitchburg, Mass.

Ralph Picketts Home From Trip

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph E. Pickett have returned from their wedding trip and are making their home at 304 Carolina avenue, Silver Spring, Md.

The marriage of Miss Frances Heitter, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene T. Heitter to Mr. Pickett took place on March 13 at the Northminster Presbyterian Church at 8 o'clock in the evening. The Rev. Walter Price officiated. Mr. Pickett is the son of Mr. and Mrs. George Pickett.

The bride wore an ivory satin gown with a sweetheart neckline, outlined in rusching and seed pearls. The gown had long sleeves and ended in a short train. Miss Heitter carried a bouquet of calla lilies and wore a two-tiered veil held in place by a coronet of sequins and seed pearls.

The matron of honor, Mrs. Katherine Jones, sister of the bridegroom, wore a blue marquisette gown and carried red roses and baby's breath. Bridesmaids were Miss Katherine Paxson, Miss Carolyn Hughes, Miss Elsie Moyer, Miss Betty Heitter, sister of the bride. Two wore pink marquisette while the other two wore blue. They carried old-fashioned bouquets with mixed flowers. The flower girl, Delores Hill, wore a pink taffeta gown. The ring-bearer was Roland Jones.

John Tester, brother-in-law of the bride, was best man. Ushers were Roland Pickett, brother of bridegroom, Bernard Jackson, Thomas Keenan and Robert Weinberg.

Mrs. McLean Hostess to 200 At Dinner

Ladies of Press Make Up Most Of Company

The doors of Friendship were thrown wide last evening when some 200 guests—mostly "ladies of the press"—were feted at a dinner party given by Mrs. Edward Beale McLean.

An excellent dinner was served at small tables set up all over the lower floor of the spacious McLean house and spilling over onto the large glassed-in porch. Bouquets of spring flowers centered the tables, covered in gleaming pale yellow damask. Mrs. McLean, gowned in a smartly cut black frock, had donned her famous Hope diamond as well as many of her other jewels.

Mrs. Cordell Hull Helps Receive

Receiving with her was Mrs. Cordell Hull, freshly returned from a southern jaunt. A cluster of baby orchids was pinned to Mrs. Hull's bouffant black net frock edged in lace. A matching jacket completed the ensemble of the wife of the Secretary of State. Wearing a smart dinner frock, young Evalyn McLean assisted her mother as hostess.

Following dinner, guests were treated to a movie—"Streets of London"—a favorite form of entertainment with Mrs. McLean. Just to mention a few attending this large gathering were Mrs. Arthur Vandenberg, Mrs. Emil Hurja, wearing a black crepe gown with gardenias about the neckline and on the pockets; Mrs. Perry Heath, Mrs. Matthew John Whittal, Mrs. Joshua Evans, Mrs. William Doak, wearing a black gown with a jacket trimmed in blue and pink embroidery; Mrs. Robert Whitney Imbrie, whose black taffeta period frock was enhanced by her diamonds, and Mrs. Charles M. Lea.

Prominent Persons Among Company

Still others attending were Mrs. Atherton Macondray, wearing a mousseline de soie gown trimmed in white embroidery; Mrs. Lucille McMillin, in a long-sleeved dinner dress of pale green wool edged in silver; Representative Edith Nourse Rogers, in a full-skirted black frock with a chenille, and Mrs. Daniel Roper, wearing a black marquisette and Chantilly lace gown. Mrs. Gilbert M. Hitchcock, who arrived in town yesterday by train from the South, also attended the party.

James McM. Gibsons Announce Son's Birth

Mr. and Mrs. James McMillan Gibson, of Elizabeth's Delight, Silver Spring, are receiving congratulations on the birth of a son, James Hamilton McMillan Gibson, at Garfield Hospital on Wednesday, March 20.

Mrs. Gibson is the former Miss Patience McCormick-Goodheart, of Washington, daughter of the late F. Hamilton McCormick-Goodheart. This is their second child. The first is a daughter, Verlinda McCormick Gibson.

Mrs. George Dudley Waring, of New York City, who is stopping at the Mayflower, entertained at a dinner party last night at the Army and Navy Country Club. Guests of honor were Capt. and Mrs. Edwin G. Kintner, of this city.

Miss Henrianne Cabell Early has moved from Tilden Gardens to her new apartment in the Valley Vista, 2032 Belmont road.

Miss Jean Chrysler, who has been visiting her home here for the Easter holidays, has returned to Buena Vista, Va., where she attends school.

Mr. and Mrs. Julian Conover and Mr. and Mrs. B. A. Powell, of Chevy Chase, are occupying a cottage in Baltimore row for a week at White Sulphur Springs, W. Va.

The Misses Marjorie and Isabelle Mueser have joined their uncle, Arthur Bradley Campbell, son of the Marchioness of Huntly, at the Ambassador Hotel, in New York City.

Miss Cecilia Carney entertained at a cocktail party at her home on Calvert street yesterday afternoon from 5 until 7 o'clock. The party was given for the cast of the show "George and Margaret," a presentation by the D'Artagnan Club. Proceeds of the show, which is to be given this month, will go to the Society for the Prevention of Blindness.

Miss Catherine J. Collins, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James A. Collins, of Woodley road, who has been the house guest of Mrs. Ralph E. Eckels and her niece, Miss Marie C. Noone, at their home in Greenwich, Conn., will accompany Mrs. Eckels to Pasadena, Calif., for a visit with her son, Victor J. Eckels.

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes

New ork, March 31.

IT IS Miss Hughes' notion of an April Fool gag to permit her sparring partner, Francis Xavier Hall, to write her piece for the paper today. Ha, ha!

You may have heard that our zingful little mayor, "Spike" LaGuardia, spoke to the local fashion group on women's wear not long ago. But what you probably haven't heard is that his honor came closer to laying an ostrich egg than he ever has in his oratorical career, excellent speaker and actor that he is. Worn to a frazzle by his annual tussle with the town's budget, and without any preparation, he talked to the 500 women present, and a lot of male guests as well, on the subject which furnishes the girls with a living. The madame took me along without a leash, because I wanted to hear what the little fireball had to say.

Well, "Spike" got off to a very fumbling start, and then kept referring to the ladies as "designers," although no more than 40 of his audience were. He ran down Paris as a fashion source, an attitude unpopular with most fashion women, for a reason I can't figure. He demanded that clothes be designed for the mass of women and not for the ocasional Mrs. Harrison Williams. And he went into a lot of other opinions which were cold soup to these gals, who were about 10 years ahead of the Little Flower all the way. And those fashion groupers are plenty smart.

It wasn't until the mayor got himself organized and went comical that the audience gave him any more than courtesy applause. His first real laugh came with a crack about making skirts long enough to cover the top of the stocking when the wearer climbs on a bus, and when he made nifties about funny hats, one of his pet hates, he had the crowd with him. He even went over and fussed with the plate of flowers his co-worker, Mrs. Anna Rosenberg, was wearing, and this went very big, though Anna didn't holler for joy.

SPOUSE ABOUT TOWN—At that lunch, Mrs. August Belmont was allowed to make a plea for the "Save the Metropolitan Opera Drive," her pet project these days. She used to be the great stage star, Eleanor Robson. Daddy'd remember. I got a belt out of Mrs. B.'s saying, I've been a begger for 28 years." Well, who'd mind being a beggar if you could be a Belmont, too. Then it would be fun to panhandle for that moldy old opry house.

We went over to the N. B. C. pickle works to see the Charlie McCarthy radio show the other Sunday, and it is a lot of fun to watch the smart staging of it. Bergen was there, too, and this Vera Vague woman is a very attractive actress. They pack the big studio. Tickets are free, of course, but plenty hard to get.

Those acres of pink veilage are seen all over town these days. Very pretty they are, too, for it is my belief that men are suckers for veils on the girls.

Subtracting, Year by Year

WE'RE a hundred and fifty years old, yet we continue to get younger year by year.

You'll probably notice it particularly on your next visit, because of the way the Great Hall has been done over; it wears a new garment this spring.

No, we didn't spoil it; we think its beauty is enhanced. And all the qualities which have made so many people call it "the noblest room on the continent" are preserved. But you'll recognize it as "new."

By such means does the old Homestead maintain newness, preserve and renew its youth, subtract from its age with every year.

Your Choice—A Canteen or Lobster-Red Handbag

By Marshall Adams,
Copyright, 1939, by The Washington Post.

Brass buttons and braid are not regimented to tailored spring suits and coats alone. They do duty on the smartest handbags of the season. In fact, patch pockets and even epaulettes march along on many imaginatively designed new bags—that is if a lobster or crawfish doesn't squint at you from the face of a shiny new "carry all" instead.

One of the little-known style creators of the handbag world is Josef, an Austrian of great modesty, who, however, creates some of America's most whimsical ideas for the bags you carry under or over arm, or swing from one of those vast satchel handles. Josef has created for a fine importing house "legion red" capeskin bags with militaristic leanings, among them his canteen pouch, a great comfortable purse, modeled after soldiers' water bags. He has done workmanlike calfskin pouches, too, with triangular folds forming patch pockets or rows on rows of shiny brass buttons. His most salient innovation this spring is his subtle "trench brown," a brand-new mousey tan done in English suede which puts screaming colors in the shade.

Every designer has a chef d'oeuvre of which he and his followers are especially fond. The Josef one seems to be the timeless faille afternoon silk bag. This is finely corded and braided in gold scrolls—military theme again used even for afternoon wear with dressmaker clothes and furs.

For some unfathomable reason, women seem to have lost their hearts to lobsters, who crawl about as lapel pins or (above) as compact and hadbag sets in white plastic. Aside from the red-faced lobsters, Williams Evans' amusingly designed combination features engine-turned appointments and cases. The bag at left is a canteen carry-all of soft red capeskin

The Gentler Sex

By Malvina Lindsay

Mrs. Liliput

I.

How very much happier life would be
Without the woman who crosses every "t."
Who for split infinitives lies in wait,
Who remembers exactly every date
You want to forget; and who stands on guard,
Rigidly watching her partner play every card.

II.

She is the prompter in every tale,
If you call it cabbage, she'll insist it was kale;
If you say "half a dozen" took the the drive,
She will volunteer there were "only five,"
She will argue endlessly through the day
Whether the bird you heard was a hawk or jay;
If you say you are on the verge of "starvation,"
She'll protest your careless "exaggeration."

III.

We meet her often in office and home
(She always says "Yes?" when answering the phone;
She prolongs all of her club's dull meetings
On fine points of parliamentary proceedings;
She follows to the letter every small rule,
Although it may only be so much drool;
The place she especially likes to shine
Is where she can treat the public as if it were nine.

IV.

On the small things of life she has a fixation.
To make them just right is her happy vocation;
This keeps her so busy the larger goal
Remains nothing more than a vacuole.
Thus all feminine progress must be retarded
And all far-off vision must be discarded.
High priestess of minutia, if you only could see
The wide-stretching forest—not one single tree!

Old Beauty Tricks Revived by Actress

Hollywood, Calif.—Brenda Marshall is a stanch supporter of the beauty implements used in the sixteenth century. She learned about them from her role in "The Sea Hawk." She proves that women then knew the benefits of applying make-up in a strong light by exhibiting her Elizabethan dressing table equipped with a movable mirror with two side candle brackets

Eyebrow Pencil Trick Revealed By Actress

Hollywood, Calif.—Ever an advocate of complete naturalness in make-up, Virginia Bruce, star of "Flight 8," comes through with her exclusive method for wielding an eyebrow pencil. And she defies the keenest magnifying mirror to detect it.

For evening, when eyes must be made up more heavily, Virginia sharpens her brown pencil to a keen point, then draws a thin line at the base of her upper lashes. While most girls draw this line just above the lashes, where it is too obvious, Virginia draws hers out of sight, achieving an even more glamorous effect.

"But don't expect to accomplish this subtly in two minutes," Miss Bruce advises, "because a really clever eye make-up takes more time than the whole of a girl's toilette."

Braid thin strips of pie crust on top of fruit pastries. When baked they look quite expert, though they're not hard to do. You can use the same idea for a large pie, if you like.

A Daffodil-Yellow Delight Is Creation of Elijah

A PALE daffodil-yellow delight is the Lemon Meringue Pie that Elijah, the capable chef at Collingwood on Mount Vernon Memorial Highway, makes to serve to the luncheon and dinner guests who come to the famous old mansion. I was so impressed with the cool velvetness of the lemon pie when I ate at this charming place recently that I hied myself to the kitchen to see if the recipe was on the attainable list. It was, and the following is Elijah's recipe for making this smooth tangy treat.

Lemon Meringue Pie Filling—Combine 2 cups sugar, pinch of salt and ½ cup cornstarch in a saucepan. Add 2 cups water and 3 egg yolks that have been beaten lightly. Cook for 5 minutes stirring constantly. Remove from fire and add 2-3 cup lemon juice and 11-3 tablespoons finely grated lemon rind. When cool turn into a 9-inch pastry shell previously baked.

Meringue—Beat 3 egg whites until stiff, adding 6 tablespoons confectioner's sugar, a little at a time. Pile lightly on the filling and put into a 350-degree oven for 15 minutes or until lightly browned.

Men Need Vitamins in Diet for Energy

Their Lack May Have Bad Effect On Human System

By Ida Jean Kain

THE AVERAGE man, being skeptical by nature, is not going to accept anything about vitamins—or anything else—without the facts. For example, will he eat whole wheat bread when he prefers white, or add a green, leafy salad and a glass of milk to the menu simply because they are good for him? No, indeed! A man wants the facts . . . so here are the latest.

The vitamins which come in whole grain bread, green vegetables, milk and the other protective foods, are energy carriers—they are necessary to liberate energy to its full effect. When any of the essential vitamins are missing from the diet, the result is a disturbed functioning of our smooth-running machinery, and it is smooth-running that makes for health and abundant energy.

List of 26 Vitamins

There is a long list of vitamins. In fact, 26 have been designated by letter. But so far only five are included in the list of essential vitamins: A, B, C, D and G. Each plays its own particular role in health, but many of the foods which supply one also supply the others—and that makes things less complicated.

Briefly, vitamin A is associated with the integrity of the epithelial tissues of the respiratory and other tracts. It is not a cure-all for colds, but it increases the resistance to them. The chief food sources are thin green leaves, green and yellow vegetables, dairy products and cheese. The dietary supplements are codliver oil and haliver oil.

Vitamin B is particularly concerned with energy metabolism, and one of the symptoms of a deficiency is lack of energy. A deficit may also cause nervousness, irritability, indigestion and constipation. It has been established that alcoholic neuritis results from a vitamin B deficiency and that it can be cured by massive doses of this vitamin.

Vitamin C Aids Teeth

The richest food sources of B are: vegetables, whole grains, eggs, meat and milk. It has been recommended that half the needed food calories be taken in the form of fruits, vegetables, milk and eggs, and that half the cereals and breads be supplied in whole grain varieties.

Vitamin C is especially important to the health of the teeth and gums, to prevent stiffness of the joints and to promote health and vigor. The daily diet should contain a liberal supply of fresh fruits, especially citrus fruits, and green vegetables.

Vitamin D functions in the body as an aid to the utilization of calcium and phosphorus, the elements which give rigidity to bones and teeth. Its sources are butter, eggs, codliver oil and sunlight.

Important to Skin Health

Vitamin G is a member of the B family and is scientifically termed riboflavin. This vitamin is important to the health of skin and hair and is credited with helping to extend the prime of life. Chief sources of vitamin G are green vegetables, meat and milk.

As you can see, a well-balanced diet containing fruits, vegetables, milk, eggs, whole grain bread and butter, cereals and meat is necessary for the promotion of better than average health.

If you are interested in the chemical role of vitamins in the liberation of energy, read the splendid little book, "On Oxidation, Fermentation and Vitamins," by Albert V. Szent-Gyorgyi, published by Williams & Wilkins.

Each One Has Its Function to Fulfill in Body

Eagle Style Motif Traced to Early Days of History

AMERICA hasn't any copyright on the eagle motif . . . especially in furniture and decorative design. It appears as far back in the history of ornament as we have any records, and it is occasionally found in Roman and Byzantine design. Heraldry made a lot of the eagle, and so did mythological lore. In the eighteenth century Baroque and Rococo styles abounded in eagle details—heads, claws, wings, as well as the whole bird. Came Napoleon and the Empire fashions in furnishings, and the eagle soared higher than ever in decorative favor, being an imperial sort of design that expressed the mood of the time. No to mention the double-headed eagle that Czarist Russia scattered profligately over all the royal goods.

So be it . . we give credit where credit is due. That still leaves the American eagle a place in the sun. For as the designers of the Federal era of the new world handled the eagle, it had a very American accent. Sometimes it was carved of wood; sometimes it was of gilded metal. It was used as an incidental ornament and as a support or pedestal. Small tables or consoles often had eagle bases; mirrors used the eagle as ornament on the frames; secretaries and clocks often had eagle finals; chairs and settees had eagle claw feet, and sometimes carved eagle heads terminating the top rail at the back. Formal fabrics favored eagle medallions, while chintzes used them entwined with floral designs. They even turn up in wallpaper, glass, china and silver.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Only Married Men Appreciate Girl's 'Fine Qualities;' But She Wants Good Husband; Where to Find Him?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am 26 years old, considered to be a fine young woman. I have a lovely home, adorable parents and many friends. Wherever I go, people comment on my pleasing personality and sweet disposition. I believe implicity in God and in the power of prayer, and yet I am not happy.

My problem is this: I simply cannot meet the right man. Fellows seems to like me; but the only attractive men I meet, who seem to appreciate my fine qualities, are invariably married men or men who have been married. However, there have been no indiscreet affairs.

If I meet a single man, either he is a philanderer, or he has no job, or he is already committed to some other girl. I am neither fast nor loose and I never meet an eligible man of my own kind. I have been told that because I am so "deep" and use such good common sense that the average young man finds me "too different."

There is one man who admires me greatly and who would marry me, but I feel that he is just a little too old for me, and I am interested in him only as a friend. I have no feeling for him at all and I consider I would be doing him an injustice in marrying him, merely to have a husband to take care of me.

During the past three months, I have been going with another man, who has turned out to be a wolf in sheep's clothing. When first we met, he was perfectly grand. He took me places, was entertained in my home, my parents admired him and everything seemed ideal. Then, out of a clear sky, he began to change, acting in a manner so rude and unfair that I am losing all respect for him. He has told others how much he admires me and what a lovely girl I am. But when we are together I am miserable, and I have just about decided that we simply can't go together any longer.

Do you think, Miss Haworth, that such bad luck is to be attributed to Fate? Or just what is wrong? I would be so happy if I could meet some nice single fellow who would appreciate me for the lady I try to be, and who would eventually ask me to marry him. I am so discouraged, because it seems that nowadays decent girls just can't get the lucky breaks. Please advise me.

NAOMI.

Indifference Is Effective In Game of Hearts

DEAR NAOMI: It is poppycock to suppose that decency of conduct is detrimental to a woman's popularity with men; and equally nonsensical to think that men are fascinated by consciously "ladylike" behavior. It is hard to say just what is "wrong," that you have so much "bad luck" in your courting relationships, but I am sure that Fate has nothing to do with it.

It is my thought, however, that your "problem" arises from your inability to attract and hold the interest of desirable men; that it cannot rightly be attributed to consistent failure to meet the sort of men you would marry, if given a chance. I imagine you can, if you will be honest, recall the names and faces of several men you have met, whose proposals of marriage you would have been delighted to accept—had they cared to cultivate your acquaintance and lay siege to your heart.

I imagine your failure to annex a husband is due, primarily, to overwhelming and slightly superior competition for the notice of whatever marriageable men are at large in this locality. You are husband-hunting in a community where the census report shows the women outnumber the men considerably. For every attractive single man in Washington there are two, three or more attractive, single, matrimonially minded girls angling for his attention.

Some girls are bound to emerge from the scramble empty handed—and those who do must face the fact that they simply haven't "got what it takes" to "lead the field" and carry off the trophy. That "something" they lack may be beauty of person, magnetic charm of personality, silken aggression, hardy mental or social initiative, or other such attributes or techniques which give the winner an edge over all and sundry rivals.

My advice to you is either to transfer your husband-hunting activities to other fields, where the competition is less keen; or to relax your tense vigilance for a husband on the local scene, by laying the groundwork of a life that is comparatively satisfactory without a husband in the picture. There is such a thing, you know, as trying so hard to achieve a certain goal that in very nervousness you miss the bull's-eye.

Just the other day, I was told the true story of a girl of 27, who had been breaking her heart for nearly five years in futile pursuit of a husband, pinning her hopes now on this man and next on that one—and all to no avail. Finally, and dramatically, she resolved to renounce men. She said she was through with them; she snapped her fingers at them. She began to concentrate her energies on her job, new avocational studies and outdoor recreations. Result—she soon found herself promoted to a better job, in another office, where she continued politely oblivious to her masculine associates, one of whom "reacted" by giving her the first rush she had ever had.

After standing him off for nearly a month, eventually she was persuaded to give him a date, and immediately she was swept off her feet into a gay courtship which ended in marriage within a year. According to my informant, all this happened a few years ago, and the couple are happier today than when they married. So perhaps it pays, now and again, to turn your back on the thing you want, and let it come after you for a change. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Today's Health Talk

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

Insomnia worries the patient far more than it worries the doctor. Very few doctors are willing to take the time to treat insomnia scientifically. It is, of course, easy to prescribe sleeping powders, but in the case of chronic insomnia this is distinctly an example of malpractice.

The real treatment of insomnia is psychological or nutritional. A long study of the condition has brought Dr. Louis J. Karnosh, of Cleveland, to certain conclusions.

First, he does not believe that there is any standard sleep pattern. Different people have different sleep patterns, and the same person has different sleep patterns at different times in his life. Most adults sleep from six to eight hours. Older people tend to retire earlier and get up earlier.

Sleep is more likely to be disturbed by emotional experiences than it is by such things as loss of appetite, or a meal before going to bed, and many other such things that are always blamed.

The person with insomnia often believes that persistent loss of sleep is a calamitous disturbance, a foreboding of death or insanity, but there is no good evidence that insomnia saps the vitality or health. There is not a single piece of evidence that insomnia ever caused death.

Gillespie, a neurologist of wide experience, stated that he had never seen a patient whose mental disorder could be attributed to insomnia.

Most people who complain of insomnia sleep more than they think they do. Their real suffering consists in anticipation of the period which has been called by Ladame the "temps latant," which is the period between retiring and actually going to sleep.

Know Your Storage Facilities

Fur storage, in the opinion of the Better Business Bureau, implies protection against the dangers that furs are subjected to. The Bureau has had many complaints in past seasons that the storage facilities advertised and offered were not the storage facilities actually available and rendered. Investigations by the Bureau have proven some of these complaints to be justified.

The best advice and protection the Bureau can offer you is that you obtain the facts before and not after storing—KNOW YOUR STORAGE FACILITIES. Washington has good, dependable storage concerns which employ accepted, proven methods to safeguard your furs and winter garments. Be sure your furs and garments are stored by such concerns.

Saxon Holt, Of Virginia, Dies at 68

Lieutenant Governor Was Ill for Months; 35 Years in Assembly

By the Associated Press

Newport News, Va., March 31.—Saxon W. Holt, 68, Lieutenant Governor of Virginia, died at his home here at 5 p. m. today after an illness of several months.

Because of ill health, he underwent an operation in Richmond some months ago. He showed some improvement, but was unable to attend the last session of the General Assembly, where he would have presided at the sessions of the Senate.

In Senate 35 Years

He had served in the State Senate continuously for 35 years before resigning to win election to the lieutenant governorship two years ago. A Virginian by birth, he was especially active in the development and improvement of hospitals and schools in the State.

Holt's death leaves a vacancy which will not be filled until the elections of 1941.

Secretary of the Commonwealth Raymond L. Jackson said that although the duties of the lieutenant governorship devolve upon the president pro tem of the Senate, there is no provision under the law for filling the office until the next regular election.

The president pro tem of the Senate is Senator Henry T. Wickham of Hanover, 90-year-old veteran of the Assembly.

Praised by Officials

Expressions of regret and sorrow, coupled with praise for his long career of public service, came from his friends and fellow State officials in every section of the Old Dominion.

Gov. Price, deeply moved when informed of the death of the lieutenant governor, said:

"Lieut. Gov. Holt's death will bring a sense of great personal loss to his thousands of friends in Virginia. His fine record of public service is unique and inspirational. His delightful personality and many lovable traits of character gave him a warm place in the hearts and affections of our people."

Dr. Fosdick Sees Chaos in War Exhaustion

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

New York, March 31.—Immediate and disastrous consequences to the intellectual life of America would result from any suspension of the fundamental activities of Europe's universities and laboratories due to war exhaustion or chaos, Dr. Raymond B. Fosdick, president of the Rockefeller Foundation, warned today.

In making public a portion of the review of the foundations' work in 1939, he declared, even a five-year interruption in the labor of European scholars would be a calamity to American culture, for Europe remains preeminent in many fields of intellectual activity.

Urges Humility

Instead of boasting of its "intellectual leadership," America needs to be humble, the report said, citing the fact that of the six Nobel prizes awarded in science in 1939, five went to Europe and one to the United States.

"Achievement in science, more often than not, is the result of the sustained thinking of many minds in many countries driving toward a common goal. . . . Ideas are starved when they are fenced in behind frontiers. The fundamental unity of modern civilization is the unity of its intellectual life, and that life cannot without disaster be broken up into separate parts."

America still looks to Europe for leadership in the fields of pharmacology, tropical medicine, ophthalmology, legal medicine, social medicine and dermatology, the report said.

Foreign Leadership

"In mathematics, the English are indisputably preeminent in analytic number theory; the Russians are making important contributions in topology and probability, the French in algebra," the review continued.

"America cannot match the group of European scientists in the important fields of enzyme chemistry and the organic chemistry of natural products. Nowhere else in the world can one duplicate or even approach the coordinated and cooperating Scandinavian group which is focusing so many precise techniques of chemistry and physics on problems of biology.

Burglars Take $200,000 Gems, $5,000 in Cash

Woman Helped Rob Los Angeles Store, Police Declare

By the Associated Press

Los Angeles, March 31.—Theft of precious stones valued at more than $200,000 and approximately $5,000 in cash from a downtown jewelry store was reported by police tonight.

Detectives said they believe the store was entered sometime over the week-end by at least four men and a woman.

They said evidently a woman secreted herself in the washroom of an adjoining shoe store and later admitted accomplices who broke two tile partitions to gain entrance to the jewelry store.

Deputy Chief Homer Cross said he believes that later more accomplices were admitted by a sidewalk elevator. Using oxygen and gas tanks, the robbers drilled through the middle of the huge vault door and removed the loot.

The robbers overlooked about $40,000 worth of diamonds, Cross said. The store's burglar alarm sounded about noon today, he said, indicating the robbers escaped through the front door.

A 42-inch crowbar was found in the shoe store's washroom. It was used by the thieves in breaking the partitions.

College of Physicians Confers 'Master' Title on Dr. Morgan

Georgetown Professor Seventh to Receive Honor, Also Extended to Chicagoan; First Such Award in Eleven Years

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, March 31.—Regents of the American College of Physicians today unanimously conferred the title of "master" upon two colleagues, Dr. William Gerry Morgan, 71, professor of medicine at Georgetown University, and Dr. James B. Herrick, 79, Chicago cardiologist.

Awarded for the first time in 11 years, the honor is the organization's highest. Formal notification will be given its recipients Wednesday by Dr. Charles F. Martin, of Montreal, only "master" living among six who previously have been so designated.

The board of regents, meeting preliminary to a five-day convention of the A. C. P. opening tomorrow, also approved the nomination of 144 physicians to association memberships. They elevated 126 associates to fellowship in the college.

Dr. Herrick last year received the American Medical Association's distinguished service medal for valuable contributions toward treatment of coronary thrombosis. He is the author of a handbook on medical diagnosis and professor emeritus of medicine at Rush Medical College.

Among achievements of Dr. Morgan is a book on gastroenterology. He was president of the American Medical Association in 1930, and also has been president of the American Congress on Internal Medicine, associate editor of the Encyclopedia of Medicine, and vice president and governor of the A. C. P. He formerly was dean of Georgetown's College of Medicine.

Eldbrooke Church 100 Years Old

Bishop Hughes Talks At Centenary Fete Of Methodists; Roper Also Speaks

Bishop Edwin Holt Hughes yesterday morning helped Eldbrooke Methodist Church launch its second century with a message of hope in Christianity's permanence.

The white-haired septuagenarian resident prelate of the Methodist Church, who earlier dispatched infants and others on their church lives, through baptism, advised more than 1,000 worshipers that there could be no permanence in materialism.

"The most permanent and indestructible thing in the world is the church of Jesus Christ—nothing can kill it," he said.

Roper Is Speaker

Former Secretary of Commerce and Minister to Canada Daniel C. Roper, who spoke last night, warned that the Christian Church could not escape the responsibilities of helping the State and Nation meet human needs.

Methodism, he said, could not afford to set itself apart from the problems of life. He added: "We have failed to keep our spiritual development apace with the world's material progress."

Expressing the conviction that Methodism had failed the world prior to unification, he advised it would now become a great force for peace and for helping the return of prosperity to the Nation. While Roper holds his church membership in South Carolina, he is active in Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church here.

The colorful 100th anniversary ceremonies drew scores of former parishioners, including many descendants of the late Aquila Ed and Philip L. Brooke, pioneers in the development of Eldbrooke Church, which bears their name. It was once known as the Tenleytown Church.

Publicly recognized by Dr. Walter M. Michael, rector, the descendants included Mrs. Thomas Haney, daughter of the late Mr. Brooke, who recalled after services that she played an organ in the then modest-sized church in her youth. Now, affiliated with the Chevy Chase Methodist Church, she resides at 4003 Norwood drive, Chevy Chase.

New Members Welcomed

Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Shoemaker, who were married in the old church in 1891, came down from Metropolitan Methodist Church to greet old friends. Mrs. Shoemaker is the granddaughter of Mr. Brooke, and Shoemaker is the grandson of Mr. Eld.

Directing his remarks to the descendants from a floral-decorated rostrum flanked by American and Christian flags, Dr. Michael asked that they "pray for the future success of Eldbrooke, and seek God's blessing upon that which your forbears sought so nobly."

Dr. Michael, whose nine-year pastorate is the longest in Eldbrooke's history, welcomed a group of new members into the church, while Bishop Hughes smilingly stood by the altar rail. They were Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Parker; Mr. and Mrs. L. O. Shudde and daughter, Evelyn, and Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Armistead. Miss Helen Shudde, now studying in Texas, was received in absentia.

Those baptized by the prelate were David Lee Hall, six-months-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer L. Hall; James Alden Hoage, four-months, son of Mr. and Mrs. Alden W. Hoage; Barbara Louise Barnes, four-year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bernard F. Barnes; Hervey Linden Cohee, seven-weeks, son of Mr. and Mrs. James G. Cohee, and Robert Reynolds Armistead, eight-months, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas W. Armistead.

Many of the parishioners, some of whom traveled long distances for the services, got their first glimpse of the newly installed memorial stained-glass windows, through which the sun streamed. They will be formally dedicated on Mother's Day, the second Sunday in May.

Mrs. Brown Soloist

The choir, which opened the rites with a procession into the loft, sang special selections under the direction of Mrs. Clara Young Brown, who also rendered a solo.

Formerly a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church before last April's Methodist unification, Eldbrooke's founding was associated with Methodism in Georgetown. Tenleytown was until 1855 member of a circuit under the Dumbarton Avenue parent congregation.

Cornerstone of the present mission-styled structure at 4100 River road northwest was laid in 1926 under the pastorate of the Rev. Charles L. Pate.

High spots of anniversary week will be an address tonight at 8 o'clock by Dr. Norman Vincent Peale, pastor of the Marble Collegiate Church, New York City; a program on Wednesday at 8 p. m. under the auspices of the District of Columbia Organized Bible Class Association, and former pastors' night, Thursday. Dr. G. Ellis Williams, superintendent of the West Washington District, Baltimore Conference, Methodist Church, will preach on Sunday at 11 a. m. and Dr. Powers at 8 p. m.

Two Other Anniversaries

Two other congregations had anniversaries yesterday. The Albright Memorial Evangelical Church, Fourth and Rittenhouse streets northwest, honored the Rev. George E. Schnabel, pastor, on the twenty-fifth anniversary of his ministry. He established the congregation 14 years ago under a tent on the present site. Guest preacher yesterday was Dr. Daniel Schauss, of Rochester, N. Y., the Rev. Mr. Schnabel's former classmate.

St. Matthew's Lutheran Church, 527 Kentucky avenue southeast, celebrated the tenth anniversary of the dedication of its present building with Dr. Otto Mees, president of Capital University, Columbus, Ohio, preaching. He also addressed a city-wide gathering of Lutherans of the American Synod in the afternoon there.

Communism Fails People, Prelate Says

It Sows Discontent, Archbishop Curley Tells Charity Ladies

Discontent is the seed of communism and, therefore, it cannot offer contentment to its people, the Most Rev. Michael J. Curley, Archbishop of Baltimore and Washington, told the third conference of the Ladies of Charity of the Archdioceses of Baltimore and Washington yesterday at College Park, Md. Approximately 1,000 persons heard his talk.

The archbishop lauded the work of the Ladies of Charity and pointed out that Florence Nightingale, patron of organized nursing, learned her nursing from the nuns who labored on the fields of battle and among the sick and injured before she was born.

The day's program began with solemn high mass in Ritchie Gymnasium at which the Very Rev. Leonard Walsh, O. F. M., Commissary Superior of the Commissariat of the Holy Land, Franciscan Monastery, who is chaplain of the Newman Club at the University of Maryland, Friars of the Franciscan Monastery sang the responses.

O'Conor Attends Mass

Gov. and Mrs. Herbert R. O'Conor, of Maryland, attended the mass and the morning session of the Ladies. Among the other guests of honor were the Rt. Rev. Msgr. John O'Grady, secretary of the National Conference of Catholic Charities; the Rt. Rev. Hugh J. Monaghan, pastor of St. Ambrose, Baltimore, first spiritual director of the Ladies of Charity; the Rev. Thomas Mitchell, dean of the School of Social Work at Catholic University; George W. Chesbro, executive secretary of the Prince Georges County Welfare Board; Mrs. J. Enos Ray, of the State Board of Welfare; State's Attorney H. Winship Wheatley, jr., of Prince Georges County; Caesar L. Aiello, president of the St. Vincent dePaul Society of Prince Georges County, and George Cleary, president of the St. Vincent dePaul Society of Washington.

Mrs. Irene A. Conner, president of the Ladies of Charity of Prince Georges County, hostesses for the conference, opened the meeting.

Dr. Byrd Speaks

The invocation was by the Rev. Bernard W. Prosise, spiritual director of the Prince Georges Ladies. The delegates were welcomed by Dr. H. C. Byrd, president of Maryland University. The chair then was turned over to Mrs. Gertrude E. Horigan, Archdiocesan president.

Maryland and Washington units reported. A panel discussion then was held on the "College Volunteer's Place in the Field of Social Service." It was led by Dr. Elizabeth Morrissey, professor of history and economics at Notre Dame College, Maryland. A tour of the university and the State Teachers College at Bowie, Md., followed, with luncheon at the teachers' college.

Speakers at the afternoon session, besides Archbishop Curley, were: the Rev. Msgr. Lawrence Shehan, director of Catholic Charities of the Archdiocese of Washington; Lady Armstrong, president of the Ladies of Charity of New York; Representative Lansdale G. Sasscer (Democrat), Maryland, and the Rev. Edward J. O'Brien, director of the Catholic Charities of the Archdiocese of Baltimore. The meeting closed with rededication by the ladies to the work of the group.

Christians Face 'Terrible War,' Legion Told

America is approaching "the most terrible war we have ever seen," Chaplain A. C. Oliver, of the United States Army, said last night at services at St. John's Church, Sixteenth and H streets northwest, commemorating the entrance of this country into the World War.

Held under the auspices of Sergeant Jasper Post, No. 13, of the American Legion, the religious service was attended by officers of the District Department and most of the commanders of District posts. The Rev. Oliver J. Hart, rector of St. John's, was in charge of the service of worship.

Dividing the forces of the present conflict into believers in God and nonbelievers, Oliver declared that "the people following the flag of Jesus Christ will not yield, and the men who believe in new gods (communism, fascism) are out to destroy that flag."

He called for devoutness in the present crisis, stating, "If we are going to be saved from war, we must get down on our knees . . . America must show the world we believe in God and have faith."

Takoma Park To Celebrate Its 50th Anniversary

Takoma Park, Md., will mark the fiftieth anniversary of the signing of the town charter with a community celebration April 24, it was announced yesterday by Mayor John R. Adams.

The original charter was signed by Gov. Elihu E. Jackson April 3, 1890, and the town's first election was held May 5, 1890. The celebration will be held at the firehouse, Carroll and Denwood avenue.

The Takoma Park, Md., D. C. Citizens' Association, is the prime mover in the celebration since Dr. William A. Hooker, chairman of the association's memorial committee, suggested to the town council that appropriate ceremonies be held. Chairman Adams has appointed Dr. Hooker, Herman C. Heffner, Oliver W. Youngblood, Millward C. Taft, E. Brook Fetty and John W. Coffman to the committee.

Child Specialists To Meet Thursday

Child specialists from 12 Eastern States and Canada will attend the regional meeting of the American Academy of Pediatrics here Thursday. Sessions will be at the Mayflower Hotel.

Addresses of welcome will be made by District Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, Dr. Thomas Parran, surgeon general of the United States, and Dr. Martha M. Eliot, assistant chief of the Children's Bureau. Dr. H. H. Donnally, District chairman of the academy, will preside.

Organ Recital Tonight

Willaim O. Tufts, jr., organist of the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church, tonight will give the first of a series of recitals to be presented this week by the District of Columbia Chapter, American Guild Organists, in their Festival of Organ Music. Tufts will play in Washington Chapel, Sixteenth street and Columbia road northwest, at 8:15.

Metropolitan Opens Rebuilt Church Hall

Rep. Randolph Speaker at Dedication Of New Auditorium

Legislative and religious figures last night led dedication exercises for the renovated auditorium of Metropolitan Presbyterian Church, Fourth and B streets southeast.

From the Capitol Building nearby came Representative Jennings Randolph (Democrat), of West Virginia, and chairman of the House District Committee, to laud the spirit of the congregation and of its pastor, Dr. J. Lowrey Fendrich.

Randolph Talks

Recalling that he had attended the church on several occasions, the Representative said he felt that he, too, was renewing his spiritual interest in it through participating in the dedication. He pointed out that he was once a student at Salem University, W. Va., where Dr. Fendrich served as teacher.

Speaking later was Bishop Edwin Holt Hughes, resident prelate of the Methodist Church, the local headquarters of which also is on Capitol Hill, and who urged that the Christian spirit symbolized in the church building be sustained.

Former Pastor Attends

Also taking part were Dr. Halley B. Taylor, moderator of the Washington City Presbytery and pastor of the Fifteenth Street Presbyterian Church; Dr. George H. Bennett, president of the Southeast Interchurch Council; Dr. Albert Evans, third pastor of Metropolitan Presbyterian Church and now associate pastor of New York Avenue Presbyterian Church, and Dr. Fendrich, presiding.

Between the messages, Dr. Fendrich introduced to the congregation Robert Wellman, young Hungarian artist, whose oil painting, "The Sermon on the Mount," was formally unveiled. It hangs above the rostrum. Wellman, also designer of the renovated sanctuary, descends from a long line of artists and church decorators.

Play Tournament Begins Tomorrow

The first round in the fourteenth annual one-act play tournament of the Community Centers and Playgrounds Department will start at 8 p. m. tomorrow at Roosevelt High School, Thirteenth and Allison streets northwest.

Four plays will be presented on tomorrow night's program, as follows: "Only the Birds," enacted by the Census Bureau Dramatic Club; "Dreams," by the Prince of Peace Players; "The Sister Who Walked in Silence," by the Interior Players; and "Never Too Old," by Women's Club of Chevy Chase.

The three remaining rounds in the contest will be held at Roosevelt Thursday, Saturday and April 9.

Chest Volunteers To Visit Foundlings

Members of the Community Chest volunteer speakers bureau will visit the Washington Home for Foundlings tonight on a scheduled "information cruise."

The speakers will visit 45 inmates of the home just before their bedtime, then at 6:30 will have dinner, followed by a talk by Miss Genevieve Jenks, superintendent. A session of questions and answers will be presided over by J. S. Gorrell, chairman of the Chest speakers bureau.

Class 1 Railroads Spend $262,029,000

The Association of American Railroads said yesterday that the class 1 railroads spent $262,029,000 in 1939 for equipment and improvements, an increase of $35,092,000 over 1938.

Slot-Machines Seized

Prince Georges County, Md., police yesterday raided a restaurant on the Bowie race track property and confiscated three slot machines. Anthony Frangias, 45, of Miami, Fla., manager, was charged with setting up a gaming table and released on bond of $1,000.

Faithful Service Rewarded

Church Dedicates New Doors To Man Who Opened Old Ones

Because "everybody loved Elmer," who swept the floors, tended the furnace and cut the grass at fashionable Covenant-First Presbyterian Church, the congregation yesterday dedicated great iron grillwork doors to his memory with inscription: "He opened the doors to the House of the Lord."

Dr. Albert J. McCartney, the pastor, who five years ago rushed the 35-year-old sexton to Emergency Hospital mortally injured after he had fallen from a step ladder, presided at the dedication. He had requested that no flowers be sent to Elmer Collier's funeral. He urged, instead, that the congregation set up a memorial fund to the church's faithful servant.

The iron grillwork doors were the result. Little Mary Catherine Collier, 6, niece of the sexton, clipped the ribbons on the doors, at the N street entrance. William C. Collier, who had served as sexton before turning over the job to his son, Elmer, formally opened the doors. The inscription was from a Biblical verse read at the sexton's funeral.

Dr. McCartney, at the dedication, commended the sexton's faithfulness to duty. Previously, he had said: "Everybody loved Elmer for his simplicity, his ubiquity (he was everywhere you wanted him) and for his eagerness to please each church member. He was a general, all-around genius."

Gas Station Owner Is Held Up Near Silver Hill; Car Abandoned in D. C.

A stoplight bandit last night robbed a gas station operator of his automobile and $155 near Silver Hill, Md., and later abandoned the car in the District.

The victim, Avery W. Ingersoll, 27, operator of a filling station at Eighth street and Virginia avenue southeast, was held up when he stopped at a traffic light on Route 4 by a man who entered his automobile and thrust a pistol in his face.

"Buzz" Donovan Held

James Francis (Buzz) Donovan, 39, of 2101 K street northwest, who last August won a test case charging false imprisonment, was held on a robbery charge yesterday for appearance in Police Court today. He was charged in connection with the $175 holdup of Meyer Landay in his liquor store at 647 H street notrheast.

Two other men who will appear in court today on robbery charges are Benjamin H. Henderson, 26, of Brookmont, Md., and Walter Hardey, 39, of no fixed address. Henderson was arrested by a Capitol policeman who was off duty after the daylight holdup of a liquor store at 1345 Fourteenth street northwest.

Hardey was charged in connection with four liquor store robberies. These were the one in which Donovan was held and others at 323 Seventeenth place northeast, 1025 Ninth street northwest and 1448 P street northwest. Credit for trailing Hardey was given by police officials to Sergt R. F. McCarty and Private A. L. Embrey, of the Second Precinct.

Two Cafes Robbed

John Guen, proprietor of a restaurant at 823 Upshur street northwest, reported $40, including $15 for Chinese relief, stolen from boxes hidden in his place of business. Rizzie Blankenship reported his restaurant at 145 D street northeast entered through a rear wall and $43.60 in cash and merchandise taken.

A burglar who crept through a side window relieved Samuel Delisi, proprietor of a liquor store at 1031 North Capitol street, of $57 in whisky, he reported.

Dr. Patterson, Powder Expert For U. S., Retires

Half a century of technical service in the Navy Department was marked yesterday when Dr. George W. Patterson retired as powder expert at the Naval Powder Factory, Indianhead, Md.

A pioneer in powder research, Dr. Patterson was one of the co-discoverers of the method of colloiding smokeless powder. Secretary of the Navy Charles Edison made the retirement an occasion for a letter of commendation to President Roosevelt.

Dr. Patterson has a son in the Naval Service, Lieut. Commander George W. Patterson, jr., who is now in command of the U. S. S. Saury.

Capital News In Brief

Students Celebrate Purim

More than 40 pupils of Beth Sholom Hebrew School last night presented recitations, music and two plays at Beth Sholom Synagogue in celebration of Purim. The program was in English, Hebrew and Yiddish.

The Hebrew play, "Purim as in the Bible," related the story of Purim told in the Book of Esther and was directed by Miss A. Helfgott. "A Merry Purim," in Yiddish, under direction of M. H. Kaminetzky, showed how the children of an American Jewish family might present their version of happenings in Persia in the days of King Ahasuerus and Queen Esther.

Dawson in Finals

Joseph Dawson, representing the Bishop Carroll Veteran Unit, of Washington, was among finalists in the eighth annual oratorical contest sponsored by the Catholic University Conference of Clerics and Religious of the Catholic Students' Mission Crusade last night in Baltimore, the Associated Press reported.

Winner of the contest was Miss Helen Hughes, of Cumberland, Md. She was presented with a gold trophy and a $25 cash prize.

Vandals, Beware

Motorists who litter Prince Georges County roads with tin cans and paper can expect to answer to county police.

The police announced yesterday they are going to cooperate with the county volunteer firemen in a campaign to keep the county clean. "It is positively disgusting to turn into one of the beautiful vistas on county roads and find tin cans and paper littered all around the side of the road," one policeman said.

Nichols to Seek House Hearing On Tax Bill

Sales-Income Levy Misunderstood, He Declares

House consideration of the District sales-income tax bill will be sought again this week, Representative Nichols, Democrat, of Oklahoma, said last night. The bill was recently refused consideration in the House.

"If the members had understood the bill, I believe they would not only have considered it, but would have passed it," Nichols declared. He said he would seek the support of the District Committee today for time to explain the bill.

Provision of the bill is for a 2 per cent sales tax and a tax on incomes over $10,000. Action on the measure was delayed indefinitely by the House's refusal on the last District day to go into a committee of the whole to consider the bill.

The committee will consider the Bates plan to tax incomes of all District residents and the New Deal plan of strengthening the present income tax law by taxing all incomes derived in the District at today's session.

Nichols expressed the opinion yesterday that neither bill would get through the House "for a number of reasons." Both Virginia and Maryland Congressmen have expressed opposition to the New Deal and Bates plans.

Civic Operas To Give Funds For Finn Relief

Seventy-five per cent of the proceeds from four operas to be presented May 9, 10 and 11 by the Civic Opera Association will be devoted to civilian relief in Finland, association officials announced yesterday.

The association, with Washingtonians in roles supporting singers from the Metropolitan Opera of New York, will present Manon, Lucia di Lammermoor and a double-bill of Cavalleria Rusticana and La Serva Padrona on successive days.

Among the patrons of the benefit drive is the Finnish Minister, Hjalmar Procope. Campaign headquarters are in the lobby of the Woodward Building, Fifteenth and H streets northwest.

Catholic Men's Council Elects Grattan Kerans

Grattan Kerans, of 1305 Kennedy street northwest, was elected a director and made acting treasurer of the National Council of Catholic Men, at the annual board meeting here Saturday.

Other Washingtonians attending were Edward J. Heffron, reappointed executive secretary, and Henry P. Lefebure, reappointed assistant executive secretary.

Elected president was Wilbert J. O'Neill, of Cleveland, succeeding Louis Kenedy, of New York.

WPA Works On 122 Miles Of D. C. Streets

Edwards Reports On 4½ Years Of Accomplishments

The District of Columbia Works Projects Administration has built, rebuilt or improved 122 miles of Washington streets in the four and one-half years of its existence, Administrator Paul Edwards reported yesterday to Col. F. C. Harrington, commissioner of works projects.

In addition to street construction, the District WPA has built or improved 81.6 miles of sewers, 26 miles of water mains, 58 culverts, 37 miles of sidewalks, 14 miles of curbing, erected 28 public buildings and improved 298, developed 28 parks and constructed three wading pools. At present, Edwards reported, 33 sewer projects, 25 highway jobs and 7 water mains are under way.

These improvements are scattered from Potomac Heights to Deanwood, from Bunker Hill road and Eastern avenue to the waterfront, and from the Bureau of Standards to Rock Creek Park and to Anacostia.

Sewers are under construction now at Minnesota avenue and Blaine street northeast; Fairlawn avenue, Pennsylvania avenue and Young street southeast; Pennsylvania avenue, Thirty-eighth street and Alabama avenue southeast; Upton street, Reno road and Thirty-seventh street northwest; Van Buren street and Georgia avenue northwest; Sixteenth and Oates streets northeast, and Randolph, Seventeenth and Eighteenth streets northeast.

New highways and streets are being built at Nichols avenue and Atlantic street southeast; Thirty-fifth, Carpenter and Pope streets southeast; Thirtieth street, Military road and Legation street northwest; Ellicot and Forty-third streets and Wisconsin avenue northwest, and Burns, East Capitol and Blaine streets northeast.

A.M.A. Plans Supreme Court Appeal

Fishbein Reveals Move to Escape Antitrust Action In Group Health Case

Resisting trial in the District Court on a charge of criminal conspiracy, the District Medical Society and the American Medical Association in a few days will ask the Supreme Court to declare them exempt from prosecution under the antitrust laws.

Dr. Morris Fishbein, editor of the A. M. A. journal, announced the plan in Rochester, N. Y., last night, the Associated Press reported. Fishbein said this was the "first official announcement" of the next move in the fight between "organized medicine" and the Government.

The medical groups were indicted here in December, 1938, after a long investigation of their efforts to thwart the operation of Group Health Association, Inc., which was formed by Government workers here.

The District Court dismissed the indictment but was reversed several weeks ago by the United States Court of Appeals here, which held that medicine was no more exempt from the anti-trust laws than any other business.

FBI Chief to Aid Boys Club Drive In Radio Talk

J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, has accepted the honorary chairmanship of the Police Boys Club campaign for $86,000, club officials announced yesterday. The drive gets under way today.

In a radio address tonight at 7:15 o'clock over WRC Hoover will tell how Alvin Karpis turned outlaw while other boys with whom he played in Topeka, Kans., grew into good citizens. He also will describe some episodes in crime detection, including how a band of extortionists was captured by a signal flashed from an airplane to a moving railway train.

Otis Skinner Will Star in Actors' Fund Benefit Here

Daniel Frohman Announces Notable Bill For National Theater Sunday, April 28; Week-End Developments on Theatrical Scene

By Richard L. Coe.
Substituting for Nelson B. Bell.

JOT IT DOWN. That is, jot it down as a notable evening in the theater when the Actors' Fund of America presents an all-star benefit at the National on Sunday evening, April 28.

Daniel Frohman, president of the Actors' Fund of America, has announced what should be a performance as richly rewarding to the audience as to that great institution, for that Sunday evening not too far off at the National we will be seeing Otis Skinner play Shylock in the trial scene from "The Merchant of Venice" in modern dress. Portia to the 82-year-old dean of the American stage will be another first performer of the past, Miss Viola Allen, whose stage career dates from that day in 1882 when she succeeded Annie Russell as "Esmeralda."

While we have heard happy stories of Mr. Skinner through his remarkable daughter Cornelia, this will be a signal triumph for a man who for a time last summer seemed to be at death's door. It will be remembered that he played Shylock to Miss Maude Adams Kiskadden's Portia on tour in 1931-32. Miss Allen appeared under the direction of Charles Frohman in his Empire Stock Company, was leading woman to Salvini and starred in "The Christian" and "The Eternal City."

Nor will these two be the only stars that anticipated night. George M. Cohan, Sheila Barrett and Walter Huston have promised to appear and with almost four weeks to go a man like Daniel Frohman will very likely line up a collection that even M-G-M couldn't buy. We'll pay spot cash for six seats.

Louis Bromfield played hookey from his desk in Twentieth Century-Fox Writers Row to visit the set at Warner Brothers where his story "It All Came True" was in its final camera stages. Completely captivated was he by Yale's own Ann Sheridan, playing the leading role. "Why," sighed the oft-politically minded author, "she's far lovelier than any fictional heroine I could dream up." All of which made the Texas redhead grin, for "It All Came True" is her first solo starring venture. On Friday when the picture opens at the Earle, we will have a chance to get a glimpse of Author Bromfield's undreamed dreams.

"The Birth of a Nation" appears again today at the Belasco. Seems the war-minded public couldn't get enough of this David Wark Griffith classic, so in its twenty-sixth year, this film version of "The Clansman" whams Charlie McCarthy's film amidrifts (as who hasn't?) and hustles back to hold the fort for those who have missed comparing notes on this one and "GWTW." The film will run only through Thursday, however, for on Friday evening one of those "gala premieres" will present Grace Moore in the French film version of Charpentier's opera, "Louise."

Speaking of David Wark Griffith, his "Way Down East," which also starred Lillian Gish as well as Richard Barthelmess, is this week's offering of the Film Society of Washington. It will be presented tonight at 8:30 at Friends School; tomorrow at Goodwill Industries; Wednesday at the American Association of University Women; Thursday at Georgetown Children's House and Friday at the All States Hotel.

Wires crop up on two E Street-bound plays. From Providence, R. I., comes word of Robert E. Sherwood's "There Shall Be No Night." The Pulitzer Prize winner tells his audience that "Mankind has an evil job to do in stopping Russia, but must do it before Western civilization is overrun." The story concerns a Nobel Prize winner in medicine, played by Alfred Lunt, who struggles with his conscience on pacifism and human rights and concludes that "Finland's fight is the fight of us all."

George M. Cohan's "The Return of the Vagabond" is the other, other. It's in rehearsal stages in New York now, with Cohan again playing the Vagabond, that strange fellow of "The Tavern," who came from a stormy nowhere into a lonely inn. When word got abroad that the Cohan show was casting, 500 Equity members turned up for the 17 roles.

Yes, that was Doris Dudley clambering out of the Philadelphia plane at the airport yesterday afternoon. She's capitalized as one might say for this week's engagement of the Clare Booth comedy-meller, "Margin For Error," opening tonight at the National.

As a fund-raising prelude to its May production of "Carmen," the Remington-Webster Opera Guild is giving a concert of operatic selections Wednesday evening at Pierce Hall. Verdi, Leoncavello, Mascagni and Bizet are the composers represented.

In Hollywood

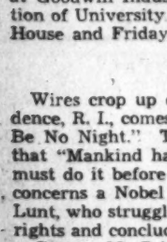
Hollywood, March 31.

Winnie Sheehan, who's developed so many stars, went to the animal kingdom this time. He found a thoroughbred among horses. Florian makes you dream of green fields, bluebells, smell of new mown hay, and four-leaf clovers. He's a magnificent animal. And when the horses were on the screen, got enthusiastic response. I'd like to take my hat off to Bob Young, not only as an actor but a rider. That takes a bit of doing. When Florian went through his paces, Young locked as though he had been born in the saddle. Baronova, the new dancer, was superb in her dances, but has an awful lot to learn about acting. And as for Helen Gilbert, as far as I'm concerned, she can go right back into the orchestra. If what she portrayed on the screen was royal blood, I don't wonder there was a revolution. How that part cried out for Greer Garson or Laraine Day!



HOPPER

Charles Coburn and Reginald Owen batted .120, their usual percentage. It's an unusual picture. Has plenty of faults—Winnie had to do it the hard way. But if you love horses, and want to see them in the open field instead of on the battlefield, don't miss it.

For two days the studio has tried to get Bob Young in for an interview. They neither saw nor heard from him. He was out on Winnie Sheehan's ranch, mating one of his mares to Florian.

Travis Banton told me that Alice Faye became so attached to the little girl who played her daughter in "Lillian Russell" that the day the picture finished, Alice took her to lunch, then shopping and bought her a complete new wardrobe.

When de Mille signed Paulette Goddard for the halfbred "Loupette," Charlie Chaplin congratulated him and in the same breath said, "I just want to tell you, you'll never get a full day's work out of her."

Well, Paulette's worked just one day, and wrestled and fought with Lynn Overman, three other men, and ended up by all of them giving her a good sound spanking. The following day she was called to work on "The Ghost Breakers," but didn't show up.

Bob Taylor and not George Raft will play opposite Norma Shearer in "Outward Room." George still refuses to play "The Patent Leather Kid" at Warners.

SIMONE SIMON AND JEAN GABIN

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, March 31.

FOREIGN DISPATCH: A few days ago Sumner Welles, jr., who has been taking a series of dancing-lessons at Arthur Murray's, waited forlornly in the outer office, until his instructor arrived . . . "What's the matter, Mr. Welles?" the dance teacher greeted . . . "I've just received some bad news from my father," the youngster sighed . . . "You mean—there's no chance for peace in Europe?" the instructor asked . . . "Oh, it's not that," young Welles informed. "The bad news is that my father says no more dance lessons for me."

DRAMA DEPARTMENT: Some weeks ago Katharne Hepburn was introduced to Dana Dale, the model, and brought her to Howard Hughes' office to be screen-tested . . . Miss Dale was at the Stork Club Thursday night, saw Miss Hepburn and waved to her. Katharine took no notice . . . "The nerve of her," Miss Dale raged, "snubbing me—after all she's done for me."

SPORTS DEPARTMENT: James Cannon, who was a sportswriter for a number of years, went to El Morocco with Elia Kazan and Harold Clurman, of the Group Theater. Cannon told them many stories about baseball players, and then asked whether the group would be interested in producing a baseball paly . . . "Frankly, there'd be one big difficulty," Kazan stated. "We have no actors in the group who look like ball players" . . . "That's easy to overcome," Cannon assured him, "we can make the team the Phillies."

TRAVEL DEPARTMENT: William Faulkner's new book, "The Hamlet," was released for publication last week . . . Faulkner is in Mississippi and his publishers suggested that it might be advisable to come to New York now . . . "I never come to New York," the author replied, "until the football season."

ILLUSTRATED SECTION: Martin Beck, the producer, received a letter from a cousin in Vienna, asking him to supply affidavits with which to bring to America her 18-year-old son, who has some talent for the theater. Beck furnished the affidavits . . . A few days ago he received notice of the boy's arrival, went to the pier and watched the passengers disembark. A customs official finally located the distraught boy, who was peering intently at all the bypassers, comparing them with a photo he held in his hand—a photo of Martin Beck, taken when he was 13.

LOCAL NEWS: Joseph Pasternak, who is touring the night clubs, will produce a movie called "Glamour Spot," a night-club film which will star Carole Lombard and Cary Grant . . . C. B. S. has ordered its Paris representative to close up shop and move to Turkey . . . John Stahl, the director, worked for only two companies in the past 25 years. But now, after finishing his one-picture assignment at Columbia he'll go to the United Artists to produce Heywood Broun's "The Boy Grew Older" . . . Letters from England now have their envelopes stamped by the Government: "Grow More Food. And Dig for Victory."

POLITICS: Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr., arrived in New York Thursday to arrange for a position with a law firm after his graduation in June . . . Because so many law offices have offered him jobs, Franklin sought advice at Fefe's Monte Carlo, from the one man who may gather enough delegate votes to halt a third-term movement—Jim Farley.

MOVIES DEPARTMENT: Ruth Gordon was screen-tested by R-K-O ten years ago. She submitted to make-up by one of the R-K-O experts here. The producers decided that she didn't screen well . . . Some years later R-K-O again asked her for a screen-test; the same make-up man prepared her. And again the producers didn't like it . . . Miss Gordon, therefore, decided never to make any screen-tests. And when she recently went to Hollywood to portray Mary Todd, in "Abe Lincoln in Illinois," and Mrs. Ehrlich, in "The Magic Bullet," she was signed without any screen-tests . . . Last month, Miss Gordon appeared in an "Information Please" movie-short. That same make-up man was assigned to her. Ruth saw the completed film, before its release, and approved of its distribution—because she screened perfectly.

POETRY DEPARTMENT: In John Gunther's "Inside Asia," frequent mention is made of Wang Ching-wei, the new prime minister of the Japanese puppet government. At the time the book was written, little was known about Wang, outside of China . . . Wang is one of China's greatest poets, and Gunther asked him how he reconciled his poetry and politics. "I am a genuine revolutionary," Wang replied, "and find my best expression in revolutionary terms."

Open Air—"When Tomorrow Comes," at 7:40 and 10 p. m.

Trans-Lux

Foreign news dominates the Trans-Lux program for the week. At least one-half of the events in the news section occur in Europe with much of the film devoted to war. Finland's troops retreating to new borders and Hitler and Mussolini trying to outsalute each other at Brenner Pass are outstanding shots. Other highlights show patrol fighting and skirmishes on the Western Front; Egyptian camel corps guarding the Suez Canal; half a British freighter returning to port after a U-boat attack; Von Ribbentrop's visit to Rome, and the demonstration of Lester Barlow's new and deadly bomb.

Among the more peaceful events is an interesting explanation and illustration of the recent sun spot hurricane; new pictures of the Easter egg rolling at the White House; Al Smith outbarking, for charity, a trio of notables in barber-shop chords, and England's Cheltenham Hunt steeplechase.

Among the short subjects, the National Philharmonic Orchestra is back, this time offering the overture to "Merry Wives of Windsor." "West Wall" is a pictorial survey of the Siegfried and Maginot Line defenses, explained by Maj. George Fielding Eliot. In another part of the program, Raymond Gram Swing, the war analyst, dwells on the effectiveness of the British blockade. There is a sport short of amazing bowling skill, and completing the show an uproarous cartoon by Disney called "The Pointers."

Open-Air Auto Theater Opens New Season

Drive-In Film Mart On Richmond Highway Costars Dunne-Boyer

Wind, weather, Jupiter Pluvius notwithstanding, yesterday brought forth another certain, unmistakable harbinger of spring. That was the opening of the Open-Air Theater on the Richmond Highway, that novel film spot where automobiles and children are admitted free to motion pictures shown on a large open-air screen. Drivers and adult passengers pay the freight!

Charles Boyer and Irene Dunne are the stars of the season's first program, appearing in "When Tomorrow Comes," a love story based on a tale by James M. Cain. With a capacity for six hundred cars, the theater, if you can call it that, begins its third season of night films, "rain or shine." As in previous years, there will be a complete change of program on Sundays and Thursdays.

Romance of Simplicity

A completely untheatric motion picture, "When Tomorrow Comes," tells the story of a young, labor-conscious waitress who is attracted to a man whom she believes to be an itinerant piano-player. They fall in love, but she does not discover until they are marooned in the Long Island hurricane of two years ago that he is a world-famous concert pianist. His wife, she discovers, is unbalanced mentally and the two face the sad reality that they can never hope for happiness until tomorrow comes. The well-knit action occurs within three days.

Miss Dunne and Mr. Boyer contribute interpretations of utter simplicity, emphasizing the unadorned telling of the romance by suggesting that this is an occurrence which might well happen often and unobserved in real life. Barbara ONeil, Onslow Stevens, Nella Walker and Nydia Westman are the supporting players.

"When Tomorrow Comes" will continue through Wednesday evening at the Open-Air, where it will be succeeded on Thursday through Saturday by the George Raft film, "I Stole a Million."

Gayety

"FAST AND LOOSE." The Independent Burlesque Association presents the musical attraction in two acts and 22 scenes featuring Hinda Wassau, supported by Johnnie Barry, Evelyn Brooks, Tiny Fuller, Peggy St. Clair, Denny Lyons, Charley Harris, Jean Carroll, and Anton Martin. Dance numbers devised by Frank Bryant; staged by James J. Lake. Reviewed Sunday matinee by Art John.

Hinda Wassau, the "blonde bombshell of burlesque," is the main attraction of the sparkling revue on parade at the Gayety playhouse for the next seven days.

Always a big favorite here, Miss Wassau offers new and creative musical specialities executed in her own inimitable style. There are many so-called "daring dancers" in Hinda's profession, but this fair-haired and shapely miss still tops them all.

The lighter moments of the revue have been placed in the capable hands of Johnny Barry and Tiny Fuller. Barry, a local lad, is better than usual in the current bill, while Fuller is seen to advantage in several very amusing, witty sketches. Evelyn Brooks, one of Boss Hirst's best "talking women" and clever Charley Harris are invaluable to the many scenes in which they appear.

Anton Martin Scores

One of the highlights on the bill is Anton Martin and his marionettes. This clever lad presents several interesting and clever characterizations most flattering to the people they mimic.

Denny Lyons not only delivers some excellent vocal orations, but with Oscar, his dummy, proves he is a pretty fair ventriloquist. Lyons, who is spending his second year on this circuit, also has a smooth personality, makes a neat appearance, and, generally speaking, is a real asset to the production.

Completing a well-balanced cast of performers is Peggy St. Clair, a pert little acrobatic dancer; Leonie Thurston and Jean Carroll, offering several enchanting beauty parades, and a chorus of damsels who appear well-trained in their various and colorful musical routines.

Howard

The number one sepia showman and ace of hi-de-ho, Cab Calloway, displays on the Howard Theater stage this week the finest entertainment wares that present-day swing has to offer. From the opening bars of his famed theme song, "Minnie the Moocher," through the closing stanzas of Show-stopper Sister Tharpe's blues warbling, the show never halts nor slacks its speed.

Calloway and his 15-piece orchestra, that sounds like "Who's Who" of this year's All-American swing band, ladle out a group of popular tunes of which "Tea for Two" and "All the Things You Are," are highlights, and his original compositions, "Chop Chop Charlie Chan" and "Para Diddle," also share honors.

Alive and jiving from curtain to curtain, Cab Calloway presents his "1940 Cotton Club Revue," transplanted from Gotham, and offers the three Chocolateers, dance sensations who click with their original "Peckin" routine; Helena Smith, dynamic and diminutive hoofing personality; Sister Tharpe, aforementioned show-stopper and swinger of the spirituals, assisted by her hot guitar and a voice full of blues; the Cab Jivers, a quintet of jam artists; Mason and Vigel; and Calloway's own boys and girls, complete the stage personalities.

On the screen, "City of Chance," with Lynn Bari and Donald Woods, tells the story of lives that become entangled in an evening spent in a gambling casino.

Atlas

"Hollywood Revels," a musical comedy revue, opened at the Atlas Theater yesterday as the stage attraction to run through Tuesday.

Richards and Carson, assisted by two pretty girls, offer a dance skit with novelties and also introduce a travesty showing how they think Jimmie Durante and Greta Garbo would waltz together.

Ford and Mitzi Milford present a comedy pianologue that produced roars of laughter from the capacity audience.

Louella O. Parsons

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Palm Springs, Calif., March 31 (INS).—Just before I dashed away to Palm Springs for the week-end, I stopped in to see Louis B. Mayer and interrupted him in the midst of a story conference. He told me that Nazimova, famous dramatic actress, would arrive in town tomorrow morning. And here is the surprise of surprises—she comes to Hollywood to make a test for Emmy Ritter in "Escape." What a wonderful Emmy Nazimova would make. She herself was a great star in her heyday and for my money she would be a perfect Emmy.

LOUELLA PARSONS

I asked L. B. how he happened to think of Nazimova to play the interned German actress. He said she had expressed interest in the role and because she had made a picture for him some time ago, he invited her to make a test. Nazimova, who has been teaching dramatic art, will remain in California only long enough for the test. Here is hoping she is all everyone—Larry Weingarten, the producer, and L. B.—expects.

Believe it or not, Shirley Temple, wearing a sun bonnet, almost escaped notice for the first time in her life as she watched the parade of Keystone cops, drugstore cowboys, real cowboys and Indians down here in Palm Springs. Shirley was really sicker than anyone outside her immediate family realized and so she is being given a chance to recuperate properly before she checks in at the studio for "The Young People." This is the golden Temple child's most mature role to date and she will have with her Kathleen Howard, who gave such an unforgettable performance as head of the girls' school in Deanna Durbin's picture, "First Love." Arleen Whelan and Frank Sully are others in the Temple line-up.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Sylvia Sidney is returning in May with her baby for another try at the movies. Her husband, Luther Adler, will come with her; Brenda Marshall was rushed to the Hollywood hospital immediately after the Crosby broadcast with the devoted William Holden at her side. Brenda was a foolish little girl not to let her studio know how seriously injured she was when she fell from a horse several days ago; Vivien Leigh and Laurence Olivier leave tomorrow for the San Francisco opening of "Romeo and Juliet" April 8.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

RKO-Keith's

"Pinocchio," as he should have, has captured the town, entertaining his second week in RKO-Keith's Theater.

Walt Disney's latest, so loudly acclaimed by press and audience alike, has so much to recommend it that one scarcely knows how to begin to extoll its virtues. The fantasy is light as down, the coloring exquisite, the new technical devices amazing.

But most of all, the Disney characters in this story of a puppet who came to life are the most fascinating diversions of the piece. There is a chipper little fellow, a speaking conscience, one Jiminy Cricket, whose pert face is finely matched by the expressive voice of Cliff Edwards. Figaro, a playful kitten, and Cleo, a gorgeous goldfish, are other welcome newcomers to Disney fantasy, but there are many more.

About the best thing anyone can do for an hour or so of sheer enchantment is to drop by "Pinocchio," for a third or a fifth time. The fellow actually improves with the knowing.

*X WASHINGTON: MONDAY, APRIL 1, 1940 17

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Daytona Beach, Fla., March 31.—Some kind of a new record for mass snickering was established last December at Cincinnati when the Tigers and the Cubs announced a deal. Shortstop Bill Rogell was being sent to the Cubs in exchange for Shortstop Dick Bartell. It seemed to be a trade of the greatest unimportance.

POVICH

Among baseball men and newspapermen, the reaction to the deal was a disinterested "What of it?" Both Bartell and Rogell were spavined old veterans who had long since lost their sprightliness. No difficulty was encountered in waiving either man out of his respective league, which was a formality preliminary to the deal.

But Managers Del Baker, of the Tigers, and Gabby Hartnett, of the Cubs, seemed content enough. "Bartell will help us," said Baker. Hartnett strutted through the lobbies seemingly proud of the deal he had made.

"What are you going to do with Rogell?" a newspaperman asked Hartnett. "He's got a bad leg and can't get off a dime."

The inference was plain enough. No matter in what condition Rogell might report to the Cubs in the spring, Hartnett was convinced that the Cubs, in giving up Bartell, had sacrificed nothing.

Well you ought to see Bartell these days. He's the best-looking shortstop on any of the American League clubs training in Florida. He is the best thing that has happened to the Tigers thus far this year. He is playing a whale of a game for Baker at shortstop, he's taken complete charge of the Detroit infield, and he's slugging the ball hard. There is no evidence of the sciatic nerve trouble in his leg that hampered him with the Cubs last season.

In that Detroit infield, Bartell can hardly help from being a standout, if his leg does not bother him. He is now cast in an infield that needs his vibrant chatter. Rudy York, Charley Gehringer and Pinky Higgins are sphinx-like. Bartell is a veritable magpie and his colleagues in the National League always wondered where he got his breath.

"Rowdy Dick" they called him in the National League, and he came by that name honestly enough. He was in more fights than any player of his time, despite his 5 feet 9 inches and mere 150 pounds. On the dashing side he was a miniature Ty Cobb, perhaps modern baseball's nearest reincarnation of Cobb on the bases. Bartell's spikes were always high and he let the chipped bones fall where they may.

He didn't have many friends in the National League, and he may not have many in the American, even among his new pals, the Tigers. The average ball player resents the Bartell type. One reason may be that Bartell makes the average ball player appear dull by comparison. They don't have his dash. They are not loudmouthed, and they shy from provoking fights. Bartell doesn't.

"He'd spike his grandmother," said one Washington player who played with Bartell in the National League. He didn't mean exactly that, of course, it was his way of saying that Bartell didn't give a hang who was in his way. Anyway he could reach a base was all right with Bartell.

The feuding with Bartell when he was in the National League was constant. Certain players announced that they were out to get him. In a game in which the Giants were leading the Bees, 12 to 1, Bartell spiked Linus Frey of the Bees for no reason at all and had the Boston club gunning for him. Later in the week, he also spiked Tony Cuccinello, of the Bees.

"There were fellows on our club who were out to get him," relates Casey Stengel, "but they never could. They tried sliding high when Bartell was covering the bag, but he knows how to protect himself. He's plenty nimble. I've seen one of our fellows go down to second with the intention of cutting Bartell down and end up with Bartell sitting on his head."

Not long after Joe Judge went out of the American League and joined up with the Brooklyn Dodgers in the sunset of his career a few years ago, he had a brush with Bartell, a painful one.

The Dodgers were playing the Giants for whom Bartel was starring, and Judge took a routine throw to first base from the Brooklyn shortstop. Bartell was out by several yards, but that fact did not prevent him from spiking Judge on the foot and putting the veteran out of the game for two weeks.

"Getting hurt was bad enough," said Judge, "but what that Bartell said to me after he spiked me was worse. I always thought I was a pretty smooth first baseman (Judge was, indeed, the acme of grace), but when I called Bartell for spiking me, he said, 'Aw, why dontcha learn how to play that bag, you clumsy oaf.'"

An interesting character seems to have come into the American League.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, March 31.—Open letter:

Joe Louis,
c/o Mike Jacobs,
City.

Dear Joe:

Why don't you quit at the end of this outdoor season? You told me once that your secret ambition was to do "what Mr. Tunney done"—which was to retire undefeated. This should be the year. You have no more worlds to conquer. They're beginning to go into the grabbag to find opponents for you, and it's making you look bad—even though you're doing your bit by beating whatever comes along. The Paycheks are curdling the rest of your record.

CONSIDINE

I know it will be tough to quit. You want to, you've wanted to for some time. But there are complications. You are the central mealticket of the Twentieth Century Club. From the profits derived from you, Mike Jacobs is keeping a lot of managers and fighters alive. His advances—in many cases to managers and fighters he has no contractual hold on—total more than $100,000. He helped you become a fabulous success.

Then there are the others who have an interest in you: Julian Black, John Roxborough, Jack Blackburn, Jim Braddock, Joe Gould and who else? They'll let out a united squawk if you so much as make a move toward taking things in your own hands and calling it a day. They'll say perhaps that you owe it to them to keep making money for them, because of all the things they have done for you.

But you've done the rest. You've gone through the mill of learning to fight. You've taken the lumps. You've gotten up off the floor three times to knock out men who had nailed you with all they had. You've been the fairest, cleanest and most honest fighter any of us have ever seen. You meddled only once with what might be called integrity—the night you carried Max Schmeling along for a couple of rounds to increase the value of the picture rights. And he knocked you out—a beating you always believed you deserved. And one which you avenged in the quickest heavyweight title fight on record.

You've never had an alibi, or an unkind word about an opponent, and you've never hand-picked your opponents. You've fought the good and the bad, and you've beaten them with a rapidity and a frequency unequaled in ring history. The fact is that you've been by far the best of your era. They'll be talking about you as long as men fight, and I guess that will be forever.

There's nothing around for you to fight, at least there won't be after your summer matches. But no sensible person present at the ringside ever honestly believed any of your limit fights were even close.

If you stay on in the ring beyond this summer you are going to get more and more Paycheks, for you either don't or can't go in for the things that other champions have made money from: Vaudeville, cheap indorsements of products never used, and the like. You fight. You're the only champion who kept his word and became a fighting champion. In less than three years you've defended the crown more often than it was defended from 1920 until 1931. You've so completely exhausted your challengers that the Paychek fiasco was inevitable. You became an innocent party to a wretched fraud as did Mike Jacobs. You knocked out your man all right, but your man was a mouse. The people—particularly the ones who had paid $16.50—booed when it was over. They were booing the matchmaking and the showing of the regrettable counterfeit you defeated. But you were a part of the scene they were booing. You don't deserve to rub against things that tarnish you.

Quit, Joe! You've got about a quarter of a million dollars, your family is more than well taken care of, and the road from now on leads only down. You've been an inspiration to your race and you've given boxing more than it probably deserves. There is nothing around to keep you in the game. The woods are full of phony challengers whose certain effect on you will be to drag you—who scraped your forehead on the clouds—down to their miserable levil.

Yours, BOB CONSIDINE.

Maki Beaten; Hoya Breaks 3 Records

Finnish Star Third In 3-Mile Feature of Relief Meet in N. Y.; Lash Finishes Second

By the Associated Press

New York,, March 31.—Gregory Rice, former Notre Dame ace, broke the world record for 3 miles in defeating Don Lash and Finland's Tasto Maki in the feature event of the Finnish Relief Fund track and field meet at Madison Square Garden tonight.

Rice was clocked in 13 minutes 52.3 seconds.

Rice, finishing 20 yards in front of Lash with Maki another five back in third place, not only bettered Willie Ritola's listed world record of 13:56.2 but clipped more than three seconds off his own unaccepted mark of 13:55.9 established in winning the National A. A. U. championship in February over the same boards.

Blozis Sets Records

Some 14,000 fans who previously had seen Al Blozis, Georgetown sophomore, crack world records with the 16, 12 and 8 pound shots and Allan Tolmich, of Detroit lower the indoor standard for the 70 and 50 yard hurdles, cheered as the little Mid Westerner left his rivals far behind with a great losing sprint.

Lash, former American distance king who had shown little this season, surprised by also finishing under the listed record with a clocking of 13:55. Maki was only slightly over it as he weakened before Rice's brilliant sprint, begun a lap and a half from home. The Finn was timed in 13:56.8. Joe McCluskey, Manchester, Conn., veteran, finished far back after pacing the field for the first mile.

Though badly beaten for his third setback in six American efforts, Maki led most of the way and hung up two records en route to the finish. He was caught in 11:40 at the 2½ mile post and 12:51.9 at the 2¾ mark to better Ritola's times of 11:45.8 and 12:57.8, respectively, made in 1925.

Records Topple Fast

The expected assault on world records began in the first event, when Allan Tolmich, national champion from Detroit, cracked the 70-yard hurdle record over six barriers. The former Yale University star stepped the distance in 8.4 seconds in beating Frank Fuller, of University of Virginia, by a foot.

The former record for the seldom-held event was 9.2, established by E. F. Smalley, at Buffalo in 1920, and equaled the same year by Walker Smith in New York.

Leslie O'Connor, of Toronto, and Jay Shields, of Yale, trailed in that order tonight.

Charles Belcher, of Georgia Tech, national 600-yard champion and record holder, outgamed Indiana's Roy Cochran in the stretch to win the 500-yard run in 58.1 seconds, five-tenth second off Eddie O'Brien's 3-year-old record

Al Blozis, Georgetown sophomore who has repeatedly broken the listed world's 16-pound shot-put record of 53 feet 1½ inches this year, did it again with a heave of 55 feet 1 inch. He failed, however, to equal the mark of 55 feet 8¾ inches he established in winning the National Championship in February.

Fuller got even with Tolmich in the 60-yard hurdles, beating the 70-yard winner by a bare foot in 7.5 seconds, two-tenths of a second off the record.

John Borican, national 1,000-yard king from the Shore A. C. of Elberon, N. J., and Campbell Kane of the University of Indiana, put on a duel in the three-quarter mile run with the former winning by 4 feet in 3:08.6.

Phil Graves, of Georgetown, injured his ankle when he took the lead near the halfway point and dropped out.

Tolmich breezed home in the 50-yard hurdles with another world record to take the hurdle series. He was clocked in 6 seconds flat to clip two-tenths of a second off the old mark established by J. J. Eller in 1915 and equaled several times since.

Krakauskas' Pitching Beats Minneapolis, 2-1

Allows Two Hits in Six Innings At Daytona Beach; Run Scored Off Buckey Jacobs; Walker's Blow Decisive

By Shirley Povich,
A Staff Correspondent

Daytona Beach, Fla., March 31.—Bow-legged Joe Krakauskas served notice that he is a vigorous candidate for a regular pitching job with the Nats by bedazzling the Minneapolis Millers over a six-inning stretch today. By grace, chiefly, of Krakauskas' pitching, Washington licked Minneapolis, 2 to 1.

For Krakauskas it was a sweeet performance, indeed. Here on the same mangy diamond on which he gave the sourest performance of his career as a rookie two years ago, walking 12 batters in four innings, he pitched himself solidly into the esteem of Manager Bucky Harris today.

He didn't walk a batter. He allowed only two hits, one of which was a dubious affair that bounced off Third Baseman Cecil Travis' shins. He was blazing his fast ball across the plate with no lack of control and he also was attempting and getting away with a new-found curve.

Run Scored Off Jacobs

The only Minneapolis run was scored against Rookie Bucky Jacobs, who pitched the last three innings and was troubled with wildness. The run he yielded was driven in by little Bobby Estalella, the chunky Cuban former pal of the Nats who connected with a Jacobs curve in the ninth inning for Minneapolis' third hit of the game, with a runner on second.

It was just as well that Krakauskas was bedeviling the Millers with his fast ball. Because the Nats today were no slugging fools, themselves. In fact, they made only six hits off a little southpaw rookie named Mickey Heafner and Harry Smythe, a right-handed throwback from the Athletics and Yankees.

Little Haefner was a particular thorn to the Nats in the five innings he pitched, yielding only four hits. Late of the Florida State League, where he was a close rival of Washington's Sid Hudson for the league pitching honors, Haefner baffled the Nats with his southpaw curve balls after the first inning.

In that first, the Nats were presented with a run by the combined efforts of Jimmy Wasdell and Gerry Walker. Wasdell singled, and after Buddy Lewis forced him at second, the run scored on a terrific two-bagger to left by Walker.

The Nats didn't get another run until the sixth, when Smythe appeared in the box, and they didn't

'Hot' Texan Captures $1,200 First Money; Guldahl Is Second

By the Associated Press

Asheville, N. C., March 31.—Ben Hogan, who can make a golf course sit up and say uncle, completed the most sensational scoring streak in the annals of the Professional Golfers Association today when he won the $1,200 first prize in the "Land of the Sky" Open Tournament with a 72-hole score of 273.

To get statistical because statistics alone can do the 27-year-old Texas-born professional credit, this meant that:

1. He had won his third tournament in the space of two weeks, accumulating $3,400 through his triumphs in the North-South championship at Pinehurst, at Greensboro and here.

2. He had moved into first place among the winter tour money winners, with $6,438 to Jimmy Demaret's $6,152.

3. He had completed 12 rounds, or 216 holes, of golf in 34 strokes under par.

4. He had broken par on 11 of his last 12 rounds, and bettered 70 on 10 out of those 12.

5. He had played those 216 holes of golf with only two three-putt greens—the third hole yesterday at

Joy of Life, Dunlap Horse, Drops Dead in Manor Hunt

The Manor Hunt's final outing of the season yesterday was also the last hunt for William Laird Dunlap, III's Joy of Life, which dropped dead early in the run with his owner in the saddle.

The big bay gelding, a 13-year-old son of Sir Barton, began bleeding at the nostrils shortly after hounds were cast, near Norbeck, Md. However, when friends told Dunlap that his horse was bleeding, he thought they were referring to a slight cut on the animal's ankle and did not pull up.

The horse had just taken a fence and was about 100 yards beyond when he dropped to the ground, already dead. Dunlap, although upset about the death of his favorite hunter, finally mounted a friend's horse and stayed to the finish, when the staff and members of the field returned to the Manor Club for their hunt breakfast.

According to his owner, Joy of Life placed second in the Maryland Hunt Cup twice, both times chasing home Alligator. At that time the good bay was racing under the colors of William V. Phillips. Dunlap has owned him for the past year, and he has been hunted with several Maryland packs.

Several other mishaps occurred during the run, although they were of a minor nature. Mrs. Edward Cashell, Thomas Trodden, Anita Mamalee, and Mrs. Ernest Rice took tumbles, but no one was injured.

Boyd C. Keyes was master of the hunt, and Bernard Brosius was joint master. Other members of the staff were Ralph Counselman, Dr. Joseph Whitebread, and Thomas Trodden.

3-Year-Olds To Clash in Bowie Sprint

Rough Pass, Entered In Derby, to Start; Meeting Lasts 12 Days

By Walter Haight

Called "The Sport of Kings," but and Harry (and every Harriet, too, and Harry (and every Harriat, too, for that matter) thoroughbred horse racing moves into the East at nearby Bowie today. The program will be the first of 12 that will set the stage for the stake-studded campaign of 1940 in this section.

Stay-at-homes, deprived of seeing their favorite action for the past three months, will match horse sense with tanned and slightly bored Winter vacationists who have moved North from sunny climes with the bangtails.

Although the opening falls on "All Fool's Day," turf fans are not taking this as any rib and will be out in droves to the Southern Maryland Agricultural Association's spacious plant. Bowie is all brushed up for the occasion. The paint has been tossed around with abandon. Brother Donald Hay has the mutuel plant in readiness, the entries reveal sufficient horses and a high grade of jockeys are due to report.

Despite yesterday's intermittent showers, Bowie is likely to have a

Finnish Paper Says Olympics Will Not Be Held

Helsinki, March 31 (AP).—The Helsinki newspaper Uusi Suomi declared today the Olympic Games would not be held "here or elsewhere" this year.

The formal decision on whether the games will be held has not yet been announced by either State or City organizing committees or by the International Olympic Committee.

Erik Frenchkell, chairman of the Olympic Games Committee, told the city council that this summer would be unsuitable for holding the games.

According to Uusi Suomi Finland will, however, seek to retain the right to organize the twelfth Olympics when conditions permit.

Florida Signs Lieb as Coach

Will Assume Post April; $7,500 Salary

Gainesville, Fla., March 31.—The University of Florida late today announced signing of Thomas J. Lieb, former Notre Dame star tackle and coach at Loyola University, Los Angeles, until last March, as head football coach.

Lieb will receive $7,500 annually. The contract expires December 31, 1942. The contract specified the university could discharge Lieb December 31, 1941, upon payment of six months' salary.

Lieb will take his position here April 15. He will succeed Josh Cody, who recently resigned to become assistant coach at Temple. Lieb will retain the present staff of assistant coaches, including Harold Williams and Walter Milligan, former Pittsburgh stars, the university said.

The new Florida coach was graduated from Notre Dame in 1923. He was a varsity halfback in 1921. Knute Rockne transferred Lieb to tackle in 1922 and he was listed an All-American at that position in 1923.

Lieb became head coach at Loyola in 1930. His teams won 60 per cent of their games. He employed Rockne's Notre Dame system of play. He resigned at Loyola in March, 1939, because of illness of his wife, who later died.

Lieb was assistant to Rockne from 1923 through 1925. He was line coach at Wisconsin 1926-28. He returned to Notre Dame as assistant coach in 1929 and directed the school's team to a national championship after Rockne became ill.

Furr Rated Slight Choice Over McDowell in 10-Rounder

Arena Scrap Hits a High In Boxing

Phil Favored at 8-5 On Strength of 8 Straight Victories In Local Comeback

Washington's Phil Furr will be in a highly precarious position as the favorite tonight in Turner's arena when he fights Wild Bill McDowell, of Dallas, Tex., in a 10-round bout that promises to hit a new high in local boxing.

The vociferous lads who keep the northeast corner of the W street arena in a constant uproar were laying their cash on Furr yesterday to stave off Wild Bill, but there was plenty of McDowell money on hand.

The betting probably will be 8-to-5 on the Washington welterweight at ring time.

Furr and McDowell, Promoter Joe Turner's two main drawing cards in recent weeks, should pull a capacity house tonight.

Invader Has Chance

McDowell is given a good chance to bring Furr's comeback campaign to a sudden breakdown. Phil, now ranked No. 8 on the welterweight ladder, has won eight straight fights here since last fall.

The fight, a "natural" in the vernacular of the boxing industry, also will be a test for both boys. McDowell, who has shown plenty of class in winning the three fights he has had here, will get a chance to prove he's no "flash in the pan" against the veteran Furr.

If Furr can get by the wild-swinging, hard-hitting Texan, he will be "made," as far as local fans are concerned. The District public hasn't taken so well to the idea of Furr coming back to the ring wars at 29.

Better With Age

Phil, however, appears to be boxing better than in his so-called "peak" years, when he was meeting such boys as Barney Ross and Ceferino Garcia. The beating he took from Ross appears to have made Phil a little more careful in the ring.

Furr exuded confidence yesterday that he'll have no trouble stopping the Texas fighter. He's basing his beliefs on sound logic, for he's the more skilled of the two and has a pretty fair system of working on his opponent's body. McDowell has shown a distaste for getting hit around the midsection.

On the other hand, the Texan has an unorthodox style of swinging from the rafters that may catch Furr napping. If Phil does get careless, you can look for him sitting on the canvas and asking what happened.

In the top eight-round semifinal Mayon Padlo fights a Canadian importation known as Norman Hurdman. Carl Guggino meets Calvin Calp, of Baltimore, in a lightweight eight round encounter.

Four-round openers at 8:30 p. m. bring out Elwood Harris, of Richmond, and Phil Ensenga, of Baltimore, and Jimmy Green, local colored heavyweight, against Ray Lee, of Richmond.

Pittsburgh Wins Tourney

Chicago, March 31 (AP).—The Pittsburgh entry won the Sons of Pericles basketball tournament tonight with a 47-to-21victory over Ann Arbor, Mich. Denver defeated Moline, Ill., 42 to 28, for third place and Gary, Ind., captured first place in the consolation bracket with a 32-to-22 decision over the Ypsilanti team of Chicago.

Princeton Loses

Pinehurst, N. C., March 31 (AP).—Pinehurst defeated Princeton University, 6½ to 5½, in a golf match here today. Four bestball fourball matches were played and scored on the Nassau system.

Know Your Dogs— No. 19 of a Series

By George Berner

THE BOXER

Developed in Germany during the past 100 years, this breed is perhaps one of the most fearless and intelligent of all dogs. He is used extensively in police work and gets his name from his manner of fighting with his paws. Owned by Dr. Kelly, this fellow will be shown with others of his breed at Alexandria, Saturday, April 27

earn that one. With two out, Walker walked, went to second on a wild pitch and scored when Third Baseman Fausett made a wild throw on Travis' grounder.

All three of Minneapolis' hits occurred after two were out. Against Krakauskas, they didn't get a man past first base, but Jacobs walked the lead-off hitter in both the seventh and the eighth, although escaping damage. In the ninth, with one out, he walked Hub Walker, who went to second on an infield out and scored when Bobby Estalella, to the amazement of everybody, hit a curve ball into center field.

Chattanooga Defeats Washington 'B' Team, 8-3

Special Dispatch to The Post

Deland, Fla., March 31.—The Chattanooga Lookouts, of the Southern Association, clubbed a Washington "B" team into submission here this afternoon, 8 to 3, behind well controlled pitching and heavy hitting.

Chattanooga Hurlers Miller and Van Fleet limited the Senators to 11 sparsely made hits, while their mates got 12 off Cunningham and Carrasquel, including 3 home runs, 3 doubles and a triple Leftfielder Dejan, of the Lookouts, collected two home runs over the centerfield fence, in addition to a double.

Brewer, Regal Soccermen Tie

Play to 1-1 Deadlock In Title Play-Off

With 1,500 spectators lining Gonzaga Field, Heurich Brewers and Regal Clothiers battled to a 1-1 stalemate yesterday in the first of a three-game playoff for the Washington and Suburban Soccer League.

A cross kick by Jim McBain in the first period put Heurich, the defending champion, on the long end of a 1-0 count going into the second half. Regal's Kaplan tied that up in the closing half when he sneaked over a perfect shot during a hot scrimmage in front of the goal.

Yesterday's results made it possible a fourth game will be necessary to decide the title unless one or the other team wins both remaining clashes. The next will be Sunday at 2 p. m.

NBA Plans 'More Elastic' Rules Concerning Title Defense

Fistic Fathers Move to Prevent Repetition Of Dethroning Men Like Ambers, Archibald

By Sid Feder
Associated Press Sports Writer.

New York, March 31.—Not that there's any particular intent to lock the door after the horse has gone for a walk, but the National Boxing Association is planning to change its rules to prevent repetition of the recent silly busines sof arbitrarily taking titles from champions.

Certain members of the N. B. A. realize the organization looked slightly less than brilliant in knocking the lightweight crown off Lou Ambers' capable brow and separating Joey Archibald from his featherweight title.

As a result, it was learned today from a source in the NBA itself, these fistic fathers are going to poll their member commissioners throughout the country to make the rule concerning title defenses "more elastic."

Eventually, it is expected, the change will lead to a plan by which Ambers may regain the 135-pound championship, despite the NBA-designated title bout between Davey Day and Sammy Angott in Louisville on Derby eve. It may also develop a series of bouts ending up in a tussle between Petey Scalzo, who received the association's blesing as featherweight boss, and Archibald.

"So the NBA is going to put some elastic in its rules," said Al Weill, manager of both Ambers and Archibald. "Well, when they get the elastic in there, they ought to use it for garters to hold up their socks. They certainly looked like they needed it the way they have been on the merry-go-round lately."

The rule in force now holds that the organization has the power to make a champion defend his crown against a specific challenger, or, in the event it does not name a particular candidate, the titleholder may take any one of the top three on the NBA ranking list in his division. The proposed rule change would eliminate the first half of this picture, with the NBA leaving it up to the titleholder to pick one of the top three men.

Had this been the case recently, the current daffy lightweight setup would not exist. Ambers signed recently to take on Lew Jenkins, of Sweetwater, Tex., in May in defense of his title. Jenkins, ranked by the N. B. A. now, was just another "guy named Joe" at the time of the signing, although he had won nine straight fights in New York and had knocked out more than half his rivals. As a result, the N. B. A. ordered Ambers to meet Day, off his victory over Angott some months ago. When Ambers took Jenkins instead, the N. B. A. took his title.

As plans now stand, if Ambers gets by Jenkins, the N. B. A. may try to get the Day-Angott winner to waive his title claim and take on Lou later.

The featherweight fuss is just as bad, although Archibald doesn't hold the same high esteem in his division. He took a close decision over Harry Jeffra last fall in Washington—the N. B. A.'s very back yard. Some N. B. A. officials howled that the verdict was unfair to Jeffra and ordered Archibald to give the Baltimore fighter a return match. Weill signed for that one only last week, but in the meantime the N. B. A. once more went into its shift. Out of this one came the designation of Scalzo as the man the titleholder should meet. So the N. B. A. took Archibald's title away.

Perrin-Scalzo Bout Prospects In Hopeless Mess

Two new hitches in Promoter Joe Turner's attempts to stage a featherweight championship at Griffith Stadium cropped up yesterday when (1) Matchmaker Jimmy Erwin, of the rival Riverside Stadium faction, announced he had exclusive rights to one of the principal's services in the District, and (2) the same principal—Jimmy Perrin, of New Orleans, signed to meet Petey Scalzo for the title in his home town.

The new developments, to say the least, left matters in a hopelessly muddled state.

Scalzo, leading contender for the crown which was brushed from the head of Joey Archibald last Friday by the N. B. A., has been signed to fight Perrin in Washington, according to releases from Promoter Turner's headquarters.

Either Perrin, signed to the match in New Orleans; or Scalzo, signed here, will be forced to break contract in order that the bout be staged. There is also the fact to consider that Riverside plans to bring Perrin here for a non-title bout on April 24 or May 1.

Louisville Open To Be Revived

Louisville, Ky., March 31 (AP).—Plans for reviving next fall the $5,000 Louisville Open Golf Tournament, which folded in 1935 after two years of competition, began to take definite form today.

The city's golf professionals and Cliff Lussky, Louisville businessman, expressed they could renew the 72-hole tournament through a financial arrangement whereby 25 local business houses annually would contribute $300 apiece to provide $5,000 in cash prizes, pay all expenses and make admission free.

Coming in the off-season between summer and winter competition, the tournament attracted many of the Nation's foremost golfers in the two years it was held. Horton Smith won in 1934 and Paul Runyan in 1935.

First Outdoor Horse Show Set Sunday

Chevy Chase to Draw Large Entry of Top Hunters, Jumpers

First outdoor horse show of the season will be held on the East-West highway show grounds next Sunday when the Chevy Chase Horse Show is expected to draw a topflight entry list of hunters and jumpers.

Donald C. Bradley, chairman of the event, has received word that Mr. and Mrs. George P. Greenhaigh's Springsbury Farms, from Berryville, Va., will be represented by five young hunters. Tentatively, the group includes Morwick, Agent Boy, Royal Rebel, Big Boy and Palm Sunday.

Others who have indicated that they will definitely be on hand are Mrs. N. H. McDowell's Dun Star, Marrian Curran's Tahra, Eddie Talbert's He'll Try and Golden Glow, Margaret Cotter's Rocksie, Lisbeth Stieg's Hi-Ho, Charles Carrico's Recall, Samuel Bogley's Ring Master, and a long list of other well-known horses.

Classes include pony events in the morning, which will be judged by Margaret Hill and Frank (Happy) Christmas, two of the District's outstanding young riders. Hunter and jumper judges will be Danny Shea, Samuel J. Henry, and two others who will be announced later this week.

Selections at Bowie.

Dear Al:

I was sitting around the typewriter here trying to remember if today didn't have some kind of significance. If I'm not mistaken something is going to happen this afternoon out in Prince Georges County. Now let me think. Is it a Dutch supper? Could it be a fox hunt? I could almost swear that April 1 was an important date. There's no use of my kidding about it, I'm just as anxious as the next guy to get on that rail. Yea, Bo! We're Bowie bound today. Well I have studied the entries and I have gone in a trance to get Confucius' message. The horses look like the goods although we might stand a trifle more class. However, we should be used to ordinary horses after wrestling with Hialeah and Tropical Park all winter. I inspected the plant yesterday. All brushed up and painted up. Bill Martin is still at the old stand for Stevens in the betting ring and pork and beans, that old 1-2 shot, is on today's menu. Saw all the boys in the paddock—Elmer Trueman, Yancey Christmas, Frank Christmas, Claude Feltner, George Cooke, Dynamite Kerr, Chappie Chapman, Percy Chambers—looked like old times. So many good things floating around that I'm afraid they are all going to end up in one race. I won't be surprised if Basil James, one of the Nation's aces, won't be in the saddle tomorrow. We motored over to Laurel and stopped in the diner and if that fellow with the beef stew wasn't B. James then I miss a guess. Friend Eddith Smith, the Washington jockey, arrived from California and he's looking good. Saw Feltner talking to Jockey J. Robertson, who will do his riding. Jockeys Danny Millitello and Charlie Wells got in while I was there. Trainer Charlie Reynolds moved the Motor City Stable over from Benning. Racing notes were so thick I was wading around in them all morning. Yea, Bo! We're Bowie bound. Confucius say: Woodchopper will mow 'em dwon.

First race—Lady Jaffa worked like the wind in Florida but failed to race up to expectations. She might get clear sailing today and surprise, although she will have an unfavorable outside position if she sees action. Sun Ginger is highly recommended and deserves attention. Codoll is reported to have speed.

Second race—In this field, I'm forced to go to the horses which have been working over the track. I prefer Autumnquest. This one is dropping down and looks and acts fit. Biablah has worked well out of the gate here and has speed. Moon Harvest could be the third one.

Third race—Steel Knight likes this course and I'm told he's ready for the best. Will be at home if the oval is off. Irish Moon will draw a lot of play and should perform in good fashion. Tolson has looked good in trials and is a threat.

Fourth race—Epical looks like the chalk in this field but I'm forced to string along. Durando is slated to do the riding and is riding in top form. White Cockade will like the course and has the speed to make the most of the inside post position. Bubbleworth is a longshot with a chance to upset some of the dope.

Fifth race—Jehoover improved with leaps and bounds in Florida last winter. Shipped here in excellent condition and may take down the main part of the feature purse. Rough Pass didn't do any too well in Oaklawn racing but definitely is the one to beat. Rawson should hold the others safe.

Sixth race—Uvalde deserves the call in this distance affair off that good Florida form. Broadway Juel and Knoxville promise to be keen contenders in company of this sort.

Seventh race—If you don't like a shot at the moon occasionally, then pass this one up. Portunus will like the going and I'm going to take a chance on swinging some telephone numbers. Brandon Prince and Howard are the cold-figure horses.

Best bet—Epical.

fast track before the first event begins at 2:30 p. m. although fans and horses probably would feel just as much at home in the mud at the Prince Georges County track.

Bowie will offer more than $100,000 in purses and upwards of $1,200 goes to the winner of today's feature, the Bel Air Purse, a sprint of 5½ furlongs for three-year-olds. Nine horses are slated to compete in dash including Rough Pass, Yancey Christmas' Kentucky Derby candidate and the likely favorite.

Rough Pass will be coupled as the Christmas entry with Izarra. Trainer Guy Bedwell will send his Sun Altesse, purchased at the Ral Parr sale, to the post as an entry with the A. C. C. Stables.

Rawson, former Shandon Farms colt. Mrs. Elmer Trueman's Woodchopper, making his first start since last year; Gustave Ring's Ringle and the Millsdale Stable's Millfang are among the speedsters. Fans just up from Florida are likely to back the chances of Jehoover, a colt who improved with leaps and bounds during winter campaigning.

Three $5,000 and one $2,500 races are scheduled at the meeting. The Rowe Memorial will be contested on Wednesday with the Bowie Handicap listed for the first Saturday. The following mid-week feature will be the Bowie Kindergarten with the Southern Maryland Handicap booked for the closing day of the session a week from next Saturday.

Use Bahr Gate

Bowie will use the Bahr starting gate, equipped with "V" shaped doors. As usual, pictures will be made of all finishes and all winners will be given the saliva test. The daily double will be on the first and second races. Jim Milton, veteran starter, will ring the bell to send the fields away.

The track has a fair representation of the Nation's horseflesh, either on the grounds or stabled at Laurel, Pimlico and Marlboro.

Five of America's ten leading money-winning owners last year have horses on the grounds. All of them have made nominations for the stakes. They are (1) Bel Air Stud, $284,250; (3) W. L. Brann, $222,545; (6) Millsdale Stable, $123,115; (8) Mrs. Emil Denemark, $108,350, and (10) Wheatley Stable, $101,517. Few, if any other, tracks will be able to boast of such a record this year.

"Sunny Jim" Fitzsimmons, of New York, America's leading money-winning trainer of 1939, with $266,205, and Louis Schaefer, of Washington, the runner-up, with $222,545, both have well-balanced strings on the ground.

Ted Williams Smacks Homer With One On; Dodgers Beat Giants At Columbus, Ga.

By the Associated Press

Birmingham, Ala., March 31.—Allowing only four hits, Paul Derringer and Gene Thompson pitched the Cincinnati Reds to a 3-to-2 victory today over the Boston Red Sox.

The hard-hitting Bostonians bunched three of their safeties, including a homer by Outfielder Ted Williams, for two runs off Derringer in the fourth. Thompson faced 17 men in the final five frames and allowed one hit.

Vince DiMaggio, who drove in a pair of runs with a single and double, paced the Cincinnati Reds attack.

Lefty Grove toiled the first three rounds for the Sox, allowing four hits. He was followed by Jack Wilson and Emerson Dickman, who gave up four between them.

Dodgers Take Giants

Columbus, Ga., March 31.—The Brooklyn Dodgers evened their two-game series with the New York Giants today by taking a 6-to-5 decision in a battle of home runs.

Roy Cullenbine poled one ball 400 feet over the rightfield fence in the fourth frame and Dixie Walker banged another in the eighth for what proved to be the winning margin.

Rookie Cliff Hartje was taken to a hosptial for treatment of a case of tonsilitis during the day, but expected to leave with the club when it pulled out for Lanett, Ala.

Tigers Beat Bees

Lakeland, Fla., March 31.—Big Hank Greenberg slammed out his seventh home run of the training season with two on base in the sixth inning today to lead the Detroit Tigers to a 6-to-3 victory over the Boston Bees in a Grapefruit League game.

The 380-foot blow sent Nick Strincevich, who had held the Tigers to two hits in the first five frames, to the showers. Lou Fette, who relieved him, yielded two runs in the next two innings.

Boston jumped on Paul (Dizzy) Trout for their runs in the fourth and fifth, but Rookie Johnny Gorsica held the Bees to three hits the rest of the way.

No. 12—Belle Haven

'The Hardest Hole on the Course'

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Tom Ryan Chooses 9th as Belle Haven's Toughest Hole

This is another of a series on the 19 golf clubs in Metropolitan Washington where the professional selects the hardest hole on the course. The twentieth and concluding story will deal with the hardest of the lot, from a consensus of opinion.

The most popular spot at Belle Haven on a Sunday afternoon is an easy chair back of the ninth green, where the morning golfers take it easy and watch the afternoon foursomes struggle with the 239-yard par 3.

Another of the fine finishing holes that mark many of the District's golf courses, the ninth at the Alexandria course was Pro Tom Ryan's selection as toughest on the layout that overlooks the Potomac.

No golfer has ever mastered it in a single stroke. The hole is one of the few par threes in the country where no pro or dub has enjoyed the thrill of a hole in one. Ryan himself has missed by just inches, and has witnessed others miss by a scant margin. You cannot see the flat of the green from the tee so the day the ice is broken, the golfer will have to walk to the green before realizing his feat, unless spectators herald it.

On the majority of par-three holes, the caddy accompanies the golfer back to the tee so as to be handy for a change in clubs. But not on the ninth at Belle Haven. The boy merely picks out the driver and walks on toward the green, as only in the rare case of a trailing wind is the shot anything less. The wind that blows off the river onto the course is in your face on the ninth 90 per cent of the time.

But Ryan didn't select the hole just because it was a long par three with none of the qualities of a good golf hole. On the right a 15-foot trap runs the length of the green and the ground in front of the putting surface slopes toward the trap. It is a slicer's nightmare.

On the left, where Mrs. Al Wilson is playing an approach shot in the picture, a dozen or more trees play havoc with a hook and if a hooked tee shot doesn't kick out of bounds, your approach is usually nestled snugly against a tree trunk.

Out of bounds to the left extends from tee to green. There is nothing over the carpet, and in fact if you're going to miss the green the best thing to do is to go over.

The tee is located between trees and it is a pretty site to watch them play the hole, the ball floating out of the grove of trees and dropping on the long, narrow green. The hill, traps trees and out of bounds provide trouble enough, and the fact that none has ever dropped an ace is a tribute. The second time around the nine-hole course, playing from the front tee, the hole plays as No. 18 and measures 192 yards.

Runner-up to the ninth in Ryan's opinion, are the first, a 445-yard par four and the seventeenth, a 435-yard four, but his principal requirement is length. Tommy is proud of the seventh hole a trap guarded par three.

Belle Haven golfers are sharpening their games for the Tri-State league matches. Frederick and Harrisonburg have increased the circuit to six teams, joining Alexandrians, Martinsburg, Purcellville and Winchester. Belle Haven will play host to all in June.

Committee Chairman Improves 10 Strokes on Second Nine for 76; Joe Balestri Takes Gross Prize

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

John R. Miller, chairman of the golf committee at Beaver Dam, led more than 50 entries in a sweepstakes tourney yesterday at the Landover Club but he had to take ten strokes off his first nine score to win.

Aftre playing the out nine in 43, five over par, Miller was apparently out of the running until he hit a sub-par streak on the back nine that resulted in a 33 and 43-33, 76 for the round. He deducted a six handicap for a net 70.

C. O. Jorg and E. Harris tied for second low net with 92—21, 71, and 88-17, 71, respectively, while Dr. L. Lavine and A. C. Keefer scored 85—13, 72, and 93—21, 72, to finish in the prize list.

CONGRESSIONAL

Club Champion Gene Pittman was low scorer in a novel handicap at Congressional as the club members concluded a three-day program of dinners, dances and entertainment, labeled "Frontier Days."

The handicaps were taken from nine blind holes, with the total on the holes doubled and par subtracted. Pittman had 76—3, 73, while Billy Shea was runner-up with 77—3, 74. R. Reed was third with 84—8, 76.

KENWOOD

Two tied at a 74 net in the first blind bogey of the season at Kenwood, F. J. Schrider scoring 85—11, 74, and R. H. Fuchs, 87—3, 74. W. O. Wooley, with 87—14, 73, and A. D. Kane, 86—13, 73, tied for second while the third-place deadlock was between H. T. Snyder, 97—20, 77, and Dr. E. B. Frank, 100—23, 77.

CAPITAL

Johnny Burke, 1938 Intercollegiate champion, Billy Shea, former District and Middle Atlantic titleholder, Buddy Sharkey, present Maryland junior champion have already won places along with Ray Higgins and Frank Galvin.

Pros Meet Today At Rolling Road

Al Treder, Manor Club professional, will bid for the Grosner-Middle Atlantic pro-amateur championship over the Manor Club course as the Middle Atlantic P. G. A. members meet this morning at the Rolling Road Club in Catonsville, Md.

One of the biggest schedules in years is expected to be announced, while a pro-pro best-ball tournament will follow in the afternoon. Final details will be worked out for the sectional championship at Old Point Comfort, Va., April 26-27, that will carry $1,000 in prize money.

At least eight of the local members will attend the meeting, including Cliff Spencer, George Diffenbaugh, Mel Shorey, Lewis Worsham, Al Jamison, Gene Larkin, Al Houghton and Treder.

Hogan's 273 Wins Asheville Golf Tourney

Beaver Lake, the first hole this morning at the beautiful Biltmore Forest course—and any touring pro will tell you that golf tournaments are won on the greens.

Shoots 2 Under Par

Today the little White Plains (N. Y.), ace, who weighed in at 139 with his clothes on after his final round, shot a pair of two-under-par 69's over the testing Biltmore Forest layout. It might be well to give a hole-by-hole description of it. That, however, would become monotonous after the first few holes, because with rare exceptions he played them as he did at Pinehurst—straight down the middle and dead to the pin.

This morning he had two lapses from par. He three-putted the first hole and drove into the woods on No. 12. But since he also birdied four holes, that still left him two under par. This, on top of his 26-hole score of 135, gave him second place at 204, a stroke behind Ralph Guldahl, who also had fired a 69.

Didn't Play Safe

They went into the last round that way, with Lloyd Mangrum back at 207. Mangrum was paired with Guldahl and Lawson Little in the final threesome. Hogan was a good half hour ahead of them. For the first time in three tournaments, Ben was going to have to post his score and then let another man take pot shots at it.

Back of Guldahl, whose 276 was good for $750, came Mangrum with 279 and $550; Henry Picard of Hershey, Pa., and Johnny Bulla of Chicago, 280 and $400 each; Little, 281 and $300, and Dick Metz, last year's winner here, Open champion Byron Nelson and Vic Ghezzi, 284 and $230.

Leo Walper, Washington, D. C., added a third round 73 to a previous 139 total, and needed only a 75 to finish in the money. He ran into trouble in the afternoon, however, and was out of the prize list with a finishing 80.

Goggin, Mangrum Picked for Berths In Masters' Golf

Asheville, N. C., March 31 (AP).—Willie Goggin, 33-year-old professional out of San Francisco, and Lloyd Mangrum, 24-year-old assistant to Dick Metz at Oak Park, Ill., were selected today to play in the Masters' Golf Tournament starting at Augusta, Ga., Thursday, on the basis of their outstanding records on the current winter tour. The announcement was made by Fred Corcoran, tournament bureau manager of the P. G. A.

It will be Goggin's second start in the masters. Willie, finalist in the San Francisco match play open this year, also has been a P. G. A. finalist. He played in the first masters in 1934 and had the distinction of getting a hole-in-one on the first round.

2 Champs Fall In D. C. Table Tennis Finals

Two champions fell by the wayside and two more retained their crowns last night at Heurich gym as the finals of the D. C. Table Tennis Association championships were held.

Stan Fields, professional, successfully defending his 1939 title with a 21—12, 21—15, 21—19 victory over Eli Schumann, champion in 1938. Fields reached the finals with a straight set triumph over Lou Gorin, while Schumann was extended to four games before beating John Holzberg.

The other successful titlist was Bobby Bensinger, who captured the junior singles by beating Arnold Seigel, 21—14, 21—7, 21—10. Bensinger then paired with Limerick to upset the men's doubles champs—Schumann and Leon Summers—by counts of 21—14, 12—21, 21—16 and 21—19.

A stunning victory was registered by young Carolyn Wilson in the women's singles when she won her first two games with the defending champion Jane Stauffer, 21—18 and 21—16, dropped the third, 11—21, and turned on the heat to win the final game 21—12.

C. U. Opens Spring Grid Drills Today

39 Prospects Lined Up For Initial Workout; Five Vets Missing

Catholic University's football team will begin spring drills today. Head Coach Arthur J. (Dutch) Bergman has announced, scarcely three months after the Cards put their grid equipment away, following their Sun Bowl trip.

It is with a great deal of pessimism that Bergman faces the 1940 season. Dutch is frank in saying that this year's Cardinal eleven will not measure up to last season's team, which set an all-time high scoring mark for a C. U. eleven by compiling 229 points against 73 for its oppponents.

Bergman will be concerned chiefly with finding replacements for five of his regulars and nine capable reserves who graduate in June. The departing men are Lou Shine, end; Al Calabrese and Art Sabo, guards; Garmen Piro, tackle, and Rocco Piro, fullback.

A total of 39 candidates is scheduled to report for the initial drilll. Chief interest will be focused on the yearling graduates, on whom Bergman must lean heavily this year. Last year's spring drill brought out several potential stars and Dutch is hopeful he can uncover some capable substitutes to replace the gap caused by graduation.

Bergman is experimenting with a new type of padding for the defense, and will use this equipment for the first time today. It looks something like an elongated catcher's chest protector, and is supposed to condition a grid squad more quickly than the old type of standing dummies. Practice will continue daily until the end of the month.

New York's Rubin Loses in Cue Play

Chicago, March 31 (AP).—Allen Hall, Chicago, defeated Arthur Rubin, New York, tonight in the world's three-cushion billiard tournament, 50 to 45, in 52 innings.

The triumph was Hall's seventh in 17 games and put him in a three-way tie for seventh place with Tiff Denton, of Kansas City, and Arthur Thurnsblad, of Kenosha, Wis.

The inning score:

Rubin—160, 002, 002, 24F0, 021, 100, 201, 000, 210, 040, 001, 140, 000 000, 201, 042, 000—45. High run, 6; innings, 52.

Baltimorean Wins Brooklan Pin Sweeps

1,355 Total Captures $200 Prize; P. B. C. Drive Benefited by $82.

Winfield Guerke, Baltimore's highest league average bowler, won the first annual Brookland championship sweepstakes and the $200 first prize money last night with a 1,355 total for the ten games. An all-star field of 58 entries competed while spectators contributed $82.65 to the Police Boys' Club fund.

Guerke, one of the first to finish, was off to a poor start in each block but soon warmed to the task and added 666 and 689 totals for the winning count. His consecutive games were 110-141-124-151-140, 666; 109-137-174-131-138, 689, with the big eighth game of 174 the winning factor. The tournament will be the Brookland "Winnie Guerke" Sweeps next year.

Lou Jenkins, Rosslyn pinman with the fancy windup, and Harry Hilliard, a teammate and recent winner of the Pop Crawley sweeps, divided second and third money of $50 with like totals of 1,339. Jenkins, an early leader, had 682 and 657, while Hilliard came to the tenth game needing a 129 to beat Guerke, but he missed a single pin spare to break in the fourth box that threw him off balance for the remainder of the game. Hilliard had 696 and 643.

A finishing game of 154 enabled Joe Harrison to finish in fourth place for the $35 prize. Harrison totaled 1,326, nine pins better than Perce Wolfe, who rallied in the second block with 684, but it couldn't carry his initial 633.

Wilmer Robey, Baltimore, was sixth and last money winner with an even 1,300 for $15, or an average of 130 per game.

Tony Santini rolled his poorest set of the season in the afternoon, 551, but came back with 706 in the second block to win a consolation prize of $10. Ev Gardner, Baltimore, won high set out of the money in the first block with 664.

A 177 game by Bill Gartell also won a consolation ten spot, while high-game money in the second block was divided between Lou Pantos and Earl Campbell, with 164 each.

Astor Clarke was far off with 1,220 for the ten-game event and it hurt his tournament average in the close race for the No. 1 bowler in the country. He rolled 808 for a six-game mixed event in Baltimore Saturday, however, including a finishing game of 94.

3 'Bests' Give Illinois Fancier Kennel Record

By the Associated Press

Chicago, March 31.—Harold M. Florsheim set a new record in Chicago canine competition today when three of his dogs were named the best of their respective breeds at the International Kennel Club show.

The Highland Park (Ill.) dog fancier won the triple victory when Champion Boynehouse Brutus of Harham was judged the best of 17 Airedales. The other two Harham winners were Champion Penhill Perfect of Harham, a Welsh terrier, and Kelvin Charmer of Harham, an Irish terrier.

Thirty-two judges have been kept busy looking over the 1,401 dogs, a record entry for the two-day show. Eighty breeds are represented, as compared with 70 last year.

Lucky Strike's Lambert Wins In Handicap

Home Alley Bowler Scores 775 to Take First Prize of $50

Entering the Lucky Strike Women's Handicap Sweepstakes with a season's average of 93, and beating that mark by 26 pins per game, Marjorie Lambert won the first annual event last night at the Fourteenth street pin plant with a 775 total for the six games. The score included a 60-pin handicap.

The winner rolled 357 the first set and another consistent 358 in the second to take first prize of $50 over the field of 55. She represented the Lucky Strike Ladies and Whats-In-A-Name leagues.

A District League bowler, Margaret Miskelly, of the Arcade-Pontiac lineup, rolled 357 and 362 and added a 32 pin handicap for 743 and second prize of $25. The tournament was open to women bowlers with averages of 108 and under, with two-thirds handicap allowance.

Margaret Lynn, captain of the Arcade Pontiac team in the Ladies District League, added to her tournament winnings with fourth prize of $8, with a 704 count. Mrs. Lynn rolled 350 and 349, and had four handicap sticks.

Ruth King broke the order of the consistent rolling by pairing 306 and 361 sets, plus a 32 pin handicap for 699 and last money prize of $5.50.

Consolation game prizes went to Juanita Pollock and Virginia Haight, with 141 and 134, respectively, while the high sets out of the money were rolled by Helen O'Dea, 346, and Florence Sabean, 360.

730 Set Leads A.B.C. Tourney

By International News Service

Taylor put together 14 consecutive strikes to make A. B. C. history. His total was the same as that which won the 1939 championship for James Danek, of Forest Park, Ill.

The Schamberger Schlitz quintet, of Chicago, bowled into first place among the five-man teams with a sparkling 2,967 pin count. Anchorman Frank Kartheiser paced the Chicago team with a smashing 691 series.

Other changes sent Vince Lamb and Edward Gramlich of Peoria, Ill., into the two-man lead with a 1,300 series, and Gene Adams and John Holden, of East St. Louis, Ill., into fourth place in the doubles with 1,270.

Maryland Nine Faces Vermont

Maryland's baseball team will be out for an even break for the season today when it entertains the University of Vermont nine at College Park, at 4 p. m.

ing with a heave of 65 feet in the 12-pound shot-put. The distance not only bettered Francis Ryan's indoor record of 60 feet 7⅛ inches but was nearly 3 feet farther than the outdoor mark of 62 feet ¼ inches.

All four weight men bettered the best performance ever registered indoors or outdoors with the 8 pound shot with Blozis setting the new standard of 78 feet 1-8 inches. The old mark of 70 feet 1-4 inch was made outdoors by Bill Watson, of Michigan in 1938.

Chuck Fenske, unbeaten mile champion of the year, galloped a mile and a half in 6:39.4 to better the Madison Square Garden record of 6:39.8 set by Paavo Nurmi in 1925.

Fenske took the lead five laps from home, dropped back to second at the start of the last lap as Ralph Schwarzkopf, of Michigan jumped to the front. The mile king, however, took command on the back stretch and staved off the Wolverine's drive to win by 3 yards. Gene Venzke trailed by another 10 yards with Walter Mehl, of Wisconsin, early pace-setter, in fourth place.

The mile relay, bringing together picked quartets from the East and West, produced a close finish with New York University's Jim Herbert nosing out Charles Beetham, former Ohio State ace, on the anchor leg to give victory to the Eastern runners in 3:19.8.

Teamed with Herbert were Doug Raymond and Dick Gill of the Boston A. A. and Belcher. Beetham's teammates were Jack Sulzman, Ohio State; Frank Ohl, Pittsburgh, and Roy Cochran, Indiana.

Price Holds Eagles Hitless in 5 Frames As Teammates Slug

With Pitchers Price and Loeffler limiting the opposition to four hits, the Washington Cardinal sandlot baseball team trounced the Washington Eagles, 10 to 4, at Turkey Thicket yesterday.

Price hurled the first five innings and held the Eagles hitless, though they accounted for two runs. Loeffler allowed the other two runs on four hits. Meanwhile Cardinal batsmen were pounding out 12 safeties, including three doubles and a pair of home runs by Price and Nuby.

Eagles Defeated In Finale, 5 to 3

ton was obviously playing defensive hockey throughout the final session. After the Orioles scored their fifth goal the Eagles seemed more anxious to prevent further Baltimore scores than to score themselves.

Less than 1,000 fans, including several hundred from the District saw the Orioles flash vastly improved form over their lackadaisical performance in the first two games of the series to beat their chief Eastern League nemesis.

Following the match, Richard Carlin, son of the owner of the Orioles, presented the Jackson Trophy to Coach Redvers McKenzie in behalf of the mayor, who was unable to be on hand. His honor, however, sent his congratulations by telegram, towit:

"Engagement to attend dedication new city hall takes me to Hagerstown today. Hope, however, to be able to be present at 10:15. If not, kindly have someone represent me in presentation of trophy and extend congratulations to winners. Kindest regards all present. Signed, Howard W. Jackson, Mayor."

Although they scored three times in the first two minutes, Washington was still a goal behind at the end of the second period, the score reading, 4-3.

Play in this period was as rough and relentless as if the teams were battling for the Stanley Cup; passing and shooting was at a very high standard. The Eagles tied the score at 1-1 at 1:01 as Partis flicked on the red light on a double pass from Foster and Cairns.

Soon after Grigor, of the Orioles drew a tripping penalty and Washington was quick to capitalize the weakened condition of the Orioles, tallying twice within 10 seconds. First of the two goals fell to Courteau, who pushed one in at 2:00 after collaborating with Burrage on a two-man attack which carried them the lenngth of the ice. Ten seconds later the Eagles boosted their advantage to 3-1 when McTeer pushed in a rebound of a shot from Courteau.

The Orioles came back, however, near the end of the period, scored once while Washington was a player shy and then sent in another trio on great passing to forge ahead by intermission. Riley was credited with two of Baltimore's three goals of the period and Tuten accounted for the other.

Splendid defensive work by Goalies Colvin, of the Eagles and Kelly, of the Orioles, featured the opening period in which Baltimore took a 1-0 lead on Tuten's goal in the second minute of play.

Tuten's shot was a stab in the dark from an extreme angle just inside the blue line as he and Foster, of Washington, were fighting for the puck.

After this goal, at 2:08, both teams had numerous scoring chances but the superb play of the goalies offset all shots. Twice Washington players broke away to bear down on Kelly with no other Orioles to intervene and twice Kelly made great stops.

Florida Paddock Romance Flowers

Fort Lauderdale, Fla., March 31 (AP).—America's first woman trainer, Miss Mary Hirsch, and Charles McLennan, racing secretary, were married today in a romance of the paddocks.

McLennan, 29, is racing secretary at Hialeah, Havre de Grace, Keeneland, Suffolk Downs, Pimlico and Washington Park tracks.

The ceremony was performed by County Judge Boyce C. Anderson. The newly weds left for Baltimore immediately afterward.

Steel Curves Down, Trade Paper Notes

Operations Figures Hint Flattening Due; Now 61% of Capacity

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, March 31.—The magazine Steel said today the industry's downtrend has been resumed, although the operations curve is showing "signs of flattening."

A week ago the decline was arrested, with the rate remaining unchanged, but last week saw a loss of 1½ points to 61 per cent of estimated capacity, the trade publication announced.

"Whatever changes in demand for steel products may be underway, they are too slight to indicate a trend or quicken production," Steel said. "Orders for commoner products have tended to improve recently but the gain has not been significant and has not overtaken the reduction in mill backlogs.

Signs of Flattening

"There are signs of flattening as mill operations at several centers have steadied and finishing mill schedules are more stable. Yet such improvement as there is has not been sufficient to indicate an Export demand, the magazine reported, "is a bright feature and March bookings from abroad are expected to be a peak." February exports, excluding scrap, totaled 436,585 gross tons, bringing the two months' figure to 832,649 tons—"three times those of the corresponding months last year" and as good or better than the entire years of 1931, 1932 and 1933.

"Slowly continued recession in quotations on steel and iron scrap has caused steel's composite to yield further," the trade publication said. "The iron and steel composite stands at $36.81, a decline of three cents from the previous week, and the scrap composite at $16.17, a drop of eight cents. The finished steel composite is unchanged at $56.10."

Decline Is General

A production decline was general last week, though small at most points. The Detroit area showed the only increase—one point to 79 per cent. Unchanged were Pittsburgh at 57½ per cent; Birmingham, 78 per cent; New England, 65 per cent, and Youngstown, 43 per cent. Chicago slipped three points to 58½ per cent; Eastern Pennsylvania, one, to 59; Wheeling, two, to 71; Cleveland, five to 69; Buffalo, seven, to 44; Cincinnati, 5½, to 45½, and St. Louis, 19, to 39. Schedules indicated little change this week "for the most part."

Cotton Closes Week on Upturn; Exports Light

New York, March 31 (AP).—Following moderate losses early in the period, cotton prices turned firmer last week and closed the period with only small net changes.

In the New York Cotton Exchange active old type futures contracts, calling for delivery this season, registered net advances of 1 to 2 points. Active new type contracts, some of which call for delivery this season and others for delivery next season, showed net advances of 3 to declines of 5 points.

In the preceding week the cotton market had recorded net gains of 6 to 21 points.

Coal Exports Up

Exports of bituminous coal during the month of January exceeded 500,000 tons, and coal shipments to European destinations in February were approximately double the January total, according to figures released yesterday by the Coal Exporters' Association, but lack of boats was said to be seriously hampering the export trade.

Working Wives

By Roger W. Babson

A Problem Is Posed for U. S.

Babson Park, Fla., March 31.—The biggest research job ever undertaken by any nation in any age begins tomorrow when the 1940 census starts. Each decade this vast nose-counting project gets bigger, the blanks longer, the questions more personal. However, as long as people want to turn to Uncle Sam for help when they are in trouble they must expect to furnish the information which the Government needs in order intelligently to provide such help.

Notwithstanding all the hullabaloo about "your income," most anxiously awaited reply will be to the question, "Are you employed?" I fear the nation will be shocked when the answers to this query are added, tabulated, published. However, it will be impossible to compare this figure with any previous totals. Our national ideas on unemployment have changed drastically in the past 10 years. We went "unemployment-conscious" during the '30's.

Millions of Working Wives

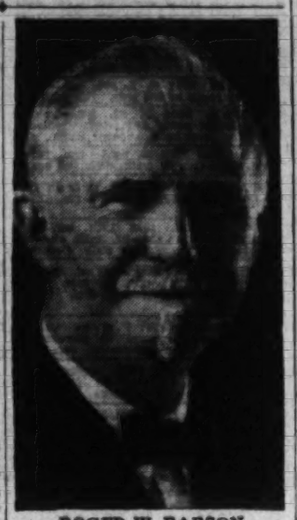
During the last decade business has been unable to absorb the trek of women into industry and find new jobs for the displaced males. It is estimated that there are three to four millions married women holding jobs. Of course, in many cases these wives are the sole support of their own family, of their aged parents, or of some other family. Many people believe something must be done about those cases where both husband and wife are holding down good jobs.

There are millions of men out of work, the Government is supporting upwards of 20,000,000 people, Federal expenses have soared to an all-time peak. At least one-quarter of this money goes directly for relief and another 25 per cent for recovery "aids."

Adding to Tax Burden

Yet, from one end of the country to the other there are glaring examples of wives holding down good jobs while their husbands are doing likewise. These cases cover public jobs as well as private employment. So long as we have to hand over one-quarter of our income every year to meet Government bills, then some type of formal action to stop this practice is bound to come.

A storm of controversy has raged around this subject for years. Protectors of the home have thumped the tub against working wives on the basis that the place for the wife is in the home. I think a lot of words are wasted in arguing along this line.



ROGER W. BABSON

My only objection to married women working is based on cold economic grounds. Working wives take many part-time jobs, they work at lower pay scales than single women, they create a surplus of labor, they fill jobs that unemployed men could handle. The tide of resentment against the practice is rising steadily throughout the nation.

If legislation is to be adopted, I hope it will be practical, sensible, not too restrictive. There are hundreds and hundreds of cases that must be exempt—where the wife must help support her own family, an unemployed brother's family, an aged mother or father. If any legislation is adopted, it should not automatically purge married women from industry. It should merely prohibit both husband and wife from holding certain types of jobs, especially Government jobs.

Should Recognize Trend

Working wives can make out a splendid case for themselves. Yet I believe they would be smarter if they recognized this rising tide of national resentment against both husbands and wives working where there is no need for both to work. They would do far better to resign their jobs now and prevent restrictive legislation.

GMC-Employe Pension Plan Is Proposed

New York, March 31.—A voluntary retirement plan under which employes earning more than the $3,000 Social Security maximum may increase old-age pensions will be submitted tomorrow to stockholders by directors of General Motors Corporation.

Alfred P. Stone, chairman of the board, in announcing the proposal for a joint employe-company fund, said the board's recommendation calls for adoption on April 30, the annual meeting date.

The plan provides that General Motors employes between 40 and 55 will be given an opportunity to begin contributions toward retirement income based on the amount of their salaries above the Federal Social Security Act maximum. The proposed plan is designed to provide proportionate additional benefits for employes earning more than $250 per month, through joint contributions by the employes and the corporation.

This, Sloan said, is in line with current practice among other American companies in supplementing Federal old-age benefits. It was estimated that approximately 5,650 employes will be eligible.

The employes will contribute 5 per cent of their monthly salary in excess of $250 per month up to the age of 60. The corporation will contribute the balance of the costs necessary to provide the retirement benefits.

The plan is not retroactive. No payments are to be made by the corporation on account of the employes service prior to the plan's inauguration.

The monthly retirement benefit will be equal to 1½ per cent of the amount of average monthly salary which is in excess of $250 per month during participation in the plan times the number of years that the employe has contributed, subject to the provision that in no event may the benefit be greater than $1,250 per month.

Religion Called Only Check On Marxism

Oscar Autritt Speaks at Takoma Lutheran Church

A native Russian, with a vivid recollection of the Red revolution, warned from a local pulpit yesterday that a deepened Christian faith is the only safeguard against communism's spread in America.

Speaking at Takoma Lutheran Church's morning services, Oscar Autritt, professor at the Washington School of Languages, said the groundwork of communism already has been laid here, and that a weakened Christian faith would be largely responsible if the Government were overthrown.

He Prefers Church Plea

Autritt, graduate of an American Theological Seminary, told the congregation that he had been asked to testify for the Dies Committee Investigating Un-American Activities. However, he said he thought he could make a stronger impact in the minds of the public through the church. The Rev. J. Adrian Pfeiffer, pastor, presided.

While once a member of the Greek Orthodox faith, Autritt since has accepted the Baptist faith.

Meanwhile, a Catholic priest also made an appeal for deepened Christian faith in his sermon. He was Dr. John K. Cartwright, rector of the Church of the Immaculate Conception, who preached last night over WOL on the Washington Catholic Radio Hour.

"It Takes Faith . . ."

"It takes faith to measure values by Christian standard," he said. "Truth depends upon faith—the faith that is worthy of our nature and falsehood unworthy." Love depends on faith, that faith that makes man's love differ from the brutes, the faith that brings the beauty of devotion to win clear through the mere passion of senses."

The Rev. Joseph E. Gedra presided and gave the benediction and the boy choristers sang under C. A. Benson's direction. The program was broadcast from the church at Eighth and N streets northwest.

Drexel Returns To Investment Banking Field

Philadelphia, March 31.—Drexel & Co. are today returning to the investment banking field, with which they have been identified throughout most of their 102-year history. The firm will no longer engage in deposit banking but will continue all other activities of the existing business.

The firm will hold memberships on the New York and Philadelphia Stock Exchanges and an associate membership on the New York Curb Exchange. Headquarters will be maintained in Philadelphia.

Edward Hopkinson, jr., Arthur E. Newbold, jr., H. Gates Lloyd, Edward Starr, jr., and Thomas S. Gates, jr., will be the members of the firm.

Prior to its retirement from the underwriting business in 1934 under the segregation provisions of the Federal Banking Act of 1933, the firm held a leading position in the origination and distribution of public utility securities. During its earlier history it was identified with the financing of several major railroads.

Railways Buy More Equipment

Capital expenditures for equipment and other improvements to railway property made by Class I railroads in 1939 totaled $262,029,000, the Association of American Railroads announced yesterday. This was an increase of $35,092,000 above 1938.

Of total capital expenditures in 1939, $133,388,000 was for locomotives, freight and passenger train cars, and other equipment.

Tire Prices Rise

Mansfield, Ohio, March 31 (AP).—Mansfield Tire & Rubber Co. announced today a 5 to 7½ per cent increase in prices of all its passenger and truck tires. President G. W. Stephens attributed the increase to rising cost of materials.

Public Invited To See CCC Camps

Director James J. McEntee yesterday invited the public to inspect CCC camps this week during the observation of the seventh anniversary of the Civilian Conservation Corps program.

"I hope," McEntee said, "that all citizens will take time this coming week to visit one or more CCC camps and see for themselves just what the Nation is doing for its unemployed youth, and what these youth are doing for the Nation."

Eire Soldiers Seize 15 I. R. A. Members at Drill

Dublin, Eire, March 31 (AP).—Soldiers and police with revolvers and bayonetted rifles raided Saint Anne's Estate in Clontarf today and arrested 15 members of the outlawed Irish Republican army who were engaged in military drilling.

Saint Anne's Estate formerly was owned by Archbishop Plunkett, of the Church of Ireland. Its heavily-wooded grounds provided an ideal spot for illegal drilling.

The arrested I. R. A. men were taken to Mount Joy civil prison. Authorities refused to reveal their names.

Bids and Proposals

PART I

NOTICE TO BIDDERS.
FORM OF ADVERTISEMENT.

The Housing Authority of the City of Frederick will receive sealed bids for the demolition and general construction, including Plumbing, Heating, Electrical Work and Landscaping, for a low-rent housing project known as USHA Project MD-3-2, at Frederick, Md., until 2 p. m. (E. S. T.) on the 3d day of April, 1940, at 100 North Market st., Frederick, State of Maryland, at which time and place all bids will be publicly opened and read aloud.

The successful bidder will be required to furnish satisfactory performance and payment bond or bonds.

Attention is called to the fact that not less than the minimum wage rates as set forth in the specifications must be paid on this project.

Proposed forms of contract documents, including plans and specifications, are on file at the office of the Housing Authority of the City of Frederick, at 100 North Market st., Frederick, Md.

Copies of the documents may be obtained by depositing $50.00 with the Housing Authority of the City of Frederick for each set of documents so obtained. The amount of the deposit will be refunded to each person who returns the plans and documents in good condition within ten (10) days after the opening of bids.

The Housing Authority of the City of Frederick reserves the right to reject any or all bids and to waive any informalities in bidding.

A certified check or bank draft payable to the Housing Authority of the City of Frederick, U. S. Government Bonds, or a satisfactory bid bond executed by the bidder and a surety company, in an amount equal to five per centum (5%) of the bid shall be submitted with each bid.

No bid shall be withdrawn for a period of thirty (30) days subsequent to the opening of bids without the consent of the Housing Authority of the City of Frederick.

SUPERMAN — Quiet, Please! — By Jerry Siegel and Joe Shuster

GEORGE, SOMETHING SHOULD BE DONE ABOUT THE TERRIBLE SLUM CONDITIONS IN THIS TOWN! AND IF YOU'LL GIVE ME PERMISSION, I'LL ...
IN THE ENSUING WEEKS CLARK WRITES REAMS OF ARTICLES...
SPEAKS DAILY OVER THE RADIO...
INIMICAL INTERESTS ATTEMPT TO BREAK UP MASS MEETINGS AT WHICH KENT SPEAKS..
BOO!
BUT HUSKIES FROM THE DAILY PLANET'S CIRCULATION DEPARTMENT EASILY QUELL THE INTERFERENCE..

Today's Radio Highlights

Lanny Ross, who has been singing to a mid-afternoon audience for the past few months, switches to a new evening hour, presenting 15 minutes of music in the Ross manner—WJSV, 7:15 p. m.

Margaret Speaks sings the aria, "Connais Tu le Pays," from Thomas' "Mignon" as her featured solo this evening. Other numbers include Charles' "When I Have Sung My Songs," "A Heart That's Free," by Robyn, and Schertzinger's "One Night of Love"—WRC, 8:30 p. m.

Pat O'Malley, the cockney dialectician who has caused such a furore here in his radio and recorded monologues, continues to enliven the Alec Templeton Time with another yarn in the "limey" style—WRC, 9:30 p. m.

One thinks particularly of Budapest and the Hungarian Tzigany gypsies in the springtime, so it is only natural that the Contented crew sail up the blue Danube for a little Magyar merrymaking—WRC, 10 p. m.

Raymond Gram Swing, radio's ace commentator, analyzes the news for his vast radio audience—WOL, 10 p. m.

Listen! with Slocum

The trials and tribulations of the Messrs. John Charles Daly and his good friend and severest critic, Bob Baker, make interesting listening over a glass of foaming coco-cola these warm evenings. We hope they make as good reading.

Charles and Robert, each and every day of their crowded little lives, go out into the highways and byways to make "Magic Carpet" records. They visit clubs, meetings, bridge parties, etc., and conduct 15-minute quizzes, which are broadcast a day or so later at 8:30 a. m. You have probably been on a couple of them.

Robert dreams up the questions and combs the corn bins for the gags. Daly asks the questions and struggles manfully against people who think a little smut livens up a broadcast. It seems everybody wants to try that Hollywood technique.

They really don't have much trouble, but they have found the male of the species is more self-conscious in front of a mike than the gals, and therefore tries a little too hard, sometimes.

Daly's happiest moment was with the lady who described that thing Old Man Time carries in one hand as a lawnmower and when Charles promptly identified it as an alarm he carries in the other the lady pdomptly identified it as an alarm clock. I trust you remember the objects are a scythe and an hour-glass.

Incidentally, if your organization would like the affable Messrs. Daly and Baker to call and cut a record for later broadcasting drop him (Daly) a line at WJSV and the lads will be delighted to schedule a show.

Another Nero Wolfe Story

BY REX STOUT

OVER MY DEAD BODY

After Zorka had been found for the second time, debunking her "foreign" origin was a lot more entertaining for Wolfe than turning down the $10,000 which John Barrett had previously offered him. So, finding Zorka didn't help much, after all, in solving the murders of Percy Ludlow and Rudolph Faber. But Barrett had some interest in those "Bosnian forest concessions and Yugoslav credits" and there must have been some connection there with the two Balkan girls, Neya Tormic (Wolfe's client) and Carla Lovchen. They were fencing instructors in Milton's studio, where Ludlow was killed and Faber was found murdered in their apartment. Then, too, there was the mysterious paper (signed by Prince Donevitch and giving his wife certain powers to act in his absence) which Carla had hidden in one of Wolfe's books, which Neya wanted, and which Wolfe wanted returned to Carla if she could only be found. Finally, one of Wolfe's men, listening in on the phone, told Archie Goodwin that a report had reached Inspector Cramer that Carla had been trailed to the Maidstone Building, so Archie started there, sending word to Wolfe that he "had gone to the market for the goose."

CHAPTER 27

I left by way of the front hall, grabbing my hat and coat. Outside was no regiment, but there was a dick on the sidewalk not far from the stoop, and another one across the street, and a taxi was parked 50 yards east. Not to mention Cramer's police car, there nosing the hind end of my roadster. I climbed in the roadster and started the engine, called to Cramer's chauffeur, "Follow me to the scene of the crime!" and rolled. I didn't go far, only around the corner and a couple of blocks on Tenth avenue, and then stopped at the curb, locked the ignition, got out, and stopped the first taxi that came along. I waited a minute to see either the police car or the taxi if they turned in from Thirty-fifth street, but apparently my invitation hadn't been accepted, so I hopped in and told the driver Forty-second and Lexington.

Entering the marble lobby of the 80-story Maidstone Building, I felt fairly sappy. I had come because Wolfe had instructed me that if Fred copped any news about Carla Lovchen I was to follow it up, and the only way I could follow it up was to go there. I felt sappy because, observing the extent and complications of the lobby, with the four banks of elevators and the twisting crowds, not to mention such things as stairways and possibly basement exits, it seemed good for even money that she had moved out and on; and also, even if she hadn't, I stood a fat chance of grabbing her and getting away with her under the circumstances. Apparently the tails had already got their reinforcements; I had easily spotted three of them on one quick survey. It was obvious that the lobby was no place for me, even if she walked out of an elevator right into my arms.

I had had one feeble idea on my way up in the taxi, and I proceeded to use that up. The building directory board was in two sections, on two sides of the lobby, one A to L and the other M to Z. I tackled the first section and went over it thoroughly, a name at a time, hoping for a hint or a hunch. I got neither, and moved across to the second section, and there, nearing the end, I saw Wheeler & Driscoll 3259. It looked slim, but I went to the information booth and told the guy, "I'm looking for a tenant and don't know his firm. Nat Driscoll. Or maybe instead of Nat, Nathaniel."

He opened his book with weary hands and looked at it with weary eyes and said in a weary voice, "Driscoll, Nathaniel, 3259, thirty-second floor, elevators on the——"

I was gone. My heart had started to pump. I love the feeling of a hunch.

I got out at the thirty-second and walked half a mile around three corners, to 3259. The lettering on the door said:

WHEELER & DRISCOLL,
IMPORTERS AND BROKERS.

I opened the door and went in, and right away, even in the anteroom, found myself in the midst of prosperity, judging by the rugs and furniture and the type of employe displayed. She was the kind who without any visible effort conveys the impression that she got a job in an office only because she was fed up with yachting and riding to hounds. Not wanting to frighten anyone into scooting out of any other Wheeler & Driscoll doors into the public corridor, I told her:

"My name is Goodwin and I would like to see Mr. Nathaniel Driscoll."

"Have you an appointment?"

"Nope. I just dropped in. Have you heard about the diamonds? The ones he thought had been stolen from him?"

"Oh, yes." Her lips twitched. "Yes, indeed"

"Tell him my name is Goodwin and Miss Tormic sent me to see him. I represent Miss Tormic."

"I'm sorry, Mr. Driscoll isn't in."

"Has he gone home?"

"He hasn't been here this afternoon."

In the first place, my hunch was still alive and kicking, and in the second place, she wasn't a good liar, even with a common conventional lie like that. I got out my memo pad and wrote on it:

If you don't want the cops busting in here in about two minutes looking for your fencing teacher, let's have a little talk. And don't let her show her face in the hall.
A. G.

I grinned at the employe to show there was no hard feeling, and indeed there wasn't. "May I have an envelope?"

She got one and handed it to me, and I inserted the note and licked the flap and sealed it. "Here," I said, "take this to Mr. Driscoll, there's a good girl, and don't argue. Do I look like a man who would come all this way to see him unless I knew he was here?"

Without saying a word, she pressed a button. A boy entered from a door at the left, and she gave him the envelope and told him to deliver it to Mr. Driscoll's desk. I said, "Deliver it to him," and then, as the boy disappeared, I went to the entrance door and opened it and stood there where I could see the hall in both directions. There were several passers-by, but no sign of any frantic dash for freedom. I must have stood there all of three minutes before I saw, about 50 feet down the hall, the top of a head and then a pair of eyes protruding beyond the edge of a door jamb. I called in a tone of authority:

"Hey, back in there!"

The head disappeared. It had not shown again when I heard the employe's voice calling my name. I turned. The boy was there holding a door open. He said, "This way, sir," and I followed him into an inner corridor and past three doors to one at the end, which he opened.

The room I entered was at least five times as big as the anteroom and six times as prosperous. I realized that in my one swift glance as I started to where Nat Driscoll stood at the corner of a large and elegant desk, telling him: "If you sneaked her out while I was coming in here, the cops will have her inside of a minute."

With one hand gripping the edge of the desk hard enough to bleach the knuckles, he said, "Unh." He looked as bewildered and terrified as a corpulent uncle who had been inveigled into taking a ride on the Ziparoo at Coney Island.

I looked around. "Where is she?"

He said, "Unh."

THERE WERE two doors besides the one I had entered by. I trotted across and opened one, and saw only gleaming tiles and a washbowl and sittery. I closed that and went and opened the other one, and looked into a small room with filing cabinets, a bookcase and a de luxe secretary's desk. The secretary sat there staring at me with big round blue eyes, and a more glittering stare was bestowed on me from a chair in a corner occupied by Carla Lovchen.

She didn't say anything, just goggled at me. My elbow was grabbed from behind, and I was agreeably surprised to find that Nat Driscoll could grip like that. I pulled away, and we were both inside the small room, and I shut the door.

"She's all right. For a while anyhow. You were tailed to this building——"

"Tailed?"

"Shadowed. Followed by policemen. There are a dozen of them downstairs now, covering all the elevators and exits."

Driscoll dropped onto a chair and groaned. The blue-eyed secretary inquired in a cool business-like tone:

"Are you Archie Goodwin of Nero Wolfe's office?"

"I am. Pleased to meet you." I met Carla's stare. "Did you kill Rudolph Faber?"

"No." A shiver ran over her, and she controlled it and sat rigid again.

Driscoll mumbled at me, "You mean Ludlow. Percy Ludlow."

"Do I? I don't." I fired at the secretary, "What time did Driscoll get here this morning?"

"Ask him," she said icily.

"I'm asking you. Let me tell you folks something. I may not be your best and dearest friend, but I'm quite a pal compared to the guys downstairs I mentioned. Otherwise I would have brought them up here. That can be done at any moment. What time did Driscoll get here this morning?"

"About half past 11."

"That was his first appearance here today?"

"Yes."

"What time did he leave?"

Senators Back Hull Rebuke To Wang Rule

Foreign Relations Group For Nonrecognition, Cautious on Embargo

By the United Press

Members of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee agreed last night with the Administration's nonrecognition of the new puppet Chinese government but displayed caution toward proposals for American economic reprisals against Japan.

The policy of nonrecognition of the Japanese-sponsored government of Wang Ching-wei was laid down Saturday by Secretary of State Cordell Hull in a formal statement reiterating this Nation's opposition to the use of force as an international instrument.

Hull's declaration was instantly approved by Chairman Pittman (Democrat), of Nevada, of the foreign relations group, and further praise came yesterday from Republican as well as Democratic members.

Senator King (Democrat), of Utah, suggested that Hull's statement be used as the spearhead of a drive to break off diplomatic relations between the United States and Japan.

Meantime, another phase of American foreign policy was brought up by Representative Woodruff (Republican), of Michigan, who called upon President Roosevelt to "tell the American people exactly what he proposes to do in regard to Europe—now and when peace comes."

Woodruff's remarks, issued through the Republican National Committee, were prompted by Mr. Roosevelt's comment last Friday that information gathered in Europe by Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles "will undoubtedly be of the greatest value when the time comes for the establishment of peace."

"How can the Welles information be of great 'value' to this country if we are determined to keep out of Europe's affairs?" Woodruff asked. "Is not the President's statement advance notice that he contemplates this Nation playing a major role in the settlement of the European quarrel?"

In connection with the nonrecognition development, Senators Thomas (Democrat), of Utah; Capper (Republican), Kansas; Henrik Shipstead (Farm-Labor), Minnesota, and Majority Leader Barkley (Democrat), Kentucky—all members of the Foreign Relations Committee—said that the United States had carried out its moral duty to condemn the latest manifestation of Japanese conquest.

Don't Expect New Move

Although there was some speculation that Hull's action might renew Congressional agitation for an embargo on war materials and other goods ordinarily sold to Japan, the committee members anticipated no new movement along this line in the near future.

In criticizing Mr. Roosevelt's views on the information gathered by Welles, Woodruff said:

"Some may think that I am prone to attach too much importance to this vague statement, but in view of the secret commitments made on behalf of this Government before we entered the World War we should not permit such suggestions from high places to pass unnoticed. . . . Let us have an end to secret diplomacy and place all the cards on the table."

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

Amazing optimism was displayed by two players on these cards, which they bid to a grand slam in clubs when a game at no trump can be made only by pinching.

West	East
♠ A K J	♠ 8 6 4 2
♡ A Q 2	♡ K
◇ 10 8 6 2	◇ A 7 3
♣ A J 5	♣ Q 9 6 3 2

The bidding:

3 ◇	Pass	4 ◇	Pass
4 NT.	Pas.	5 ♣	Pass
6 NT.	Pass	7 ♣	Dbl.
Pass	Pass	Pass

Writes L. C. B.: "We were using the Blackwood convention, but East is not always a stickler for the truth. West, casting discretion to the four winds, bid six no trump. Whereupon East, to the delight of the opponents, said seven clubs, which was promptly doubled. Of course, I, being West, might have bid seven no trump, but at that point I felt enough was enough.

"It was played at seven clubs and the slaughter was terrible. What we want to know is: did East have sufficient strength for a jump raise? Also, we would like the correct bidding."

Although East was short of a jump raise in clubs—he should have two high card tricks instead of one and a half—it seems hardly fair to blame the fiasco entirely upon him. It appears to us that West contributed greatly to to the disaster. He was entirely too hopeful on his cards. The bidding might go like this:

West	North	East	South
1 ♣	Pass	2 ♣	Pass
2 NT.	Pass	3 NT.	Pass
Pass	Pass	Pass

They will be honored by college alumni, including Representative Clarence Cannon and William Nelson, of Missouri, at a dinner tonight

K. of C. Banquet Tonight Ends Celebration

A banquet at the Mayflower Hotel tonight will climax the two-day celebration of the fifty-eighth anniversary of the Knights of Columbus, marked yesterday by a presentation of the fourth degree to 51 candidates of the Maryland and District province.

Main speaker at tonight's dinner will be Representative Charles Kramer, of California. The Right Rev. Peter Guilday, professor of history at Catholic University, will also address the group, anticipated at 500.

Yesterday's ritual was administered by W. Victor McConaghy, master of the Knights of Columbus Maryland and District province. Outstanding guests included Father Eugene J. Gallery, of Woodstock College, Md.; John J. Flannagan, State deputy of the Maryland K. of C. district, and Col. Thomas Carlin, State deputy of the District of Columbia.

Forty-three Washingtonians were among those receiving the patriotic ritual. Grand Knight of Washington Council Robert F. Handley, of 6121 Seventh place northwest, assisted in the ceremony.

Eastern Star Ideals Praised By Minister

The Rev. John Compton Ball, pastor of Metropolitan Baptist Church, spoke on "The Heart of the Star" last night in worship services under the auspices of the grand chapter of the District Order of the Eastern Star, at the church, Sixth and A streets northeast. More than 500 attended.

Mentioning the current slogan of the organization'—"Living, building, smiling together," he declared that "this is a worthy attribute for which the Eastern Star stands." He recounted the Biblical tales of the five women "of sacred memory," each of whom is of symbolical meaning to the organization, and showed the importance of their ideals today.

The Rev. G. Ellis Williams, superintendent of the West Washington District of the East Washington District of the Baltimore Conference of the Methodist Church, gave the invocation.

The choral unit of the Eastern Star sang "The Holy Hour," under the direction of Leonor E. Reed, past matron of Esther Chapter, No. 5. A brief address of welcome was given by Minnie J. Burden, worthy grand matron of the District.

The committee in charge of the religious service included Walter L. Fowler, Charles C. Galloway, Arthur M. Poynton, Charles S. Shreve, Gratz E. Dunkum and Katherine L. Gude.

Moslem Chief Asks Partition of India

New Delhi, March 31 (U.P.).—Mohammed Ali Jinnah, president of the All-India Moslem League, disclosed tonight that he was inviting Mohandas K. Gandhi to a private conference to discuss the partition of India into Moslem and Hindu states.

Jinnah declared that it is useless to criticize Great Britain for being slow in granting independence to India if the leaders of the Indian movements do not present logical and practical plans.

"I am anxious to meet Gandhi soon and discuss plans for two Indias—Moslem and Hindu—which are as unlike as Germany and France," Jinnah said. "I am willing to forget personal differences and go to Wardha myself and meet Gandhi in his own camp. I think the time has come when Gandhi and myself can get together and talk brass-tacks."

Union Purging Communists, Dubinsky Says

Copyright by New York Times

New York, March 31.—Asserting that Communists and "the disgruntled groups that trailed behind them" had been stripped of all influence in the affairs of the International Ladies Garment Workers Union, David Dubinsky, union president, reported that only eight of the 1,147 posts filled through the votes of 100,000 I. L. G. W. U. members in this city had gone to Communists or their "camp followers."

The "total eclipse of the Moscow inspired group" in the union was ascribed by Dubinsky to the Stalin-Hitler pact and the subsequent hostility of the Communist Party to President Roosevelt.

He said the results of the local elections in New York had been duplicated in Chicago, Boston, Philadelphia, Cleveland and other garment centers.

Characterizing the defeat of the left-wing forces as "a most impressive job of spring housecleaning," the union leader said he was confident that Tuesday's primary election would result in an equqally decisive defeat for the Communists "in their attempt to steal the American Labor Party and to convert it into a Stalin sounding board in America."

The union balloting in New York City, according to Dubinsky, resulted in the election of 200 delegates to the union's convention next month, 232 paid officials and 715 local executive board members. Out of this number, he said, the Communist forces elected two convention delegates, two paid officers and four executive board members. Last year 16 paid officials and 40 executive board members were identified with the Communists, Dubinsky recalled.

"The meaning of this overwhelming defeat is quite explicit," he observed. "The great majority of the women's garment workers never had any special love for the preachers of Stalinism, but in the past few years maintained an attitude of tolerance toward them because the Communists put on an act of a 'united front' and paraded with labels of constructive unionism.

"The alliance of Moscow with Hitler and the subsequent invasion of democratic Finland has torn the mask off their faces and our people turned away from them with disgust and anguish. This balloting gave our members a chance to express what they thought of the Stalinites and they said it with an avalanche of votes."

U.S. Presses Inquiry Into Girl's Death

Detroit, March 31 (AP).—Federal authorities pressed their investigation today into the mysterious death of 18-year-old Charlotte Mary Cranson aboard a Naval Reserve training ship after a coroner reported she had succumbed to "something other than natural causes."

The girl was found lying in a pool of blood on the gun deck of the U. S. S. Dubuque early Saturday as an aftermath of an all-night party.

Dr. Albert E. Hughes, Wayne County coroner, who performed the autopsy, withheld his report pending a chemical analysis.

Girl Friend Of Murder, Inc., Member Held

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

New York, March 31.—Evelyn Mittelman, the girl friend of Harry (Pittsburgh Phil) Strauss, Brooklyn gangster indicted for two murders since District Attorney William O'Dwyer's investigation of the Brooklyn murder ring, was held tonight as a material witness after being questioned all day by O'Dwyer and his assistant, Burton B. Turkus.

Miss Mittelman, a pretty 25-year-old brunette, will be held in high bail when she appears in court tomorrow at the request of Turkus. Questioned as to why Miss Mittelman was being held, Turkus said: "She's been going with Strauss for five years and she knows plenty." Strauss is charged with the murders of George Rudnick, in Brooklyn, and Irving Ashkenas, in Loch Sheldrake.

Miss Mittelman said she visited Strauss, under the assumed name of "Eva Steinberg," on March 15, 18 and 19. She said she had received a phone call from an unknown man who ordered her to make the visits. According to Turkus, she had carried messages from Strauss to other members of the murder ring still in hiding.

Miss Mittelman told O'Dwyer Abe (Kid Twist) Reles did "the right thing" when, as has been reported, he started to furnish the district attorney's office a complete history of the activities of members of the murder ring.

"Harry was very stupid," she said. "He had everything to gain and now all is lost."

Turkus said that the girl, who has been watched for more than a week, had put two diamond rings she said she received from Strauss into a bank vault. A few days later she pawned one of the rings.

Evidence that gangsters connected with the ring, but still at liberty, were active as recently as last Wednesday became known today when a victim marked for a murder ride on the South Shore of Long Island managed to escape and sought the protective custody of Brooklyn police.

The intended victim was Joseph (Joe the Baker) Liberto, now being held as a material witness. His death, it was learned, was ordered by a member of the ring under indictment on another murder charge.

Liberto told police that on Wednesday afternoon he was met by the gang's appointed "trigger man" on a Brooklyn street and told that the "boss" had instructed both of them to make a trip to Long Island. Liberto said his suspicions were not aroused until they were passing through a small town on the South Shore. He told his companion he needed cigarettes, dashed into a candy store and then escaped through the rear of the store.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Dorothy Hodgkin Dorsey presents Nelson Eddy in a song recital Sunday night in Constitution Hall, with Theodore Paxson as assisting artist and accompanist.

Nelson Eddy's recital last evening was the occasion for his admirers to fill Constitution Hall in an enthusiastic throng whose applause allowed him little rest during the course of his program. When he was not singing extra numbers, he was bowing his acknowledgment of recalls, and it was well that an intermission and a group of piano solos by Theodore Paxson gave him some surcease. The popular barytone was in excellent voice, save that his high tones frequently sounded strained and weary, and his unflagging energy matched the eagerness of his hearers.

RAY BROWN

With the first half of his program he had taken considerable care to avoid hackneyed material. He began with a new song by Albert Hay Malotte that essayed the difficult task of making Shelley's "To A Skylark" more lyrical than it already is. Either Mr. Eddy failed in the emotional projection or the composer's inspiration was inadequate, for the song fell short of poetic conviction. The music lacked the ecstasy with which the poem is charged, and left the listener unimpressed.

In a group of songs in Spanish the singer offered Joaquin Nin's "Corazon que en prision" and "Pano Murciano," Joaquin Turina's "Las locas por amor" and Fernando Obradors' "Del cabello mas sutil." The last of these was the gem of the group, a delicately patterned and subtly harmonized lyric.

Another novelty was the setting by Marlin Henderson Skiles, of Hamlet's soliloquy, "Oh, what a rogue and peasant rogue am I." This proved to be another case of a composer overreaching himself in an attempt to gild the lily. In Beethoven's time an aria of this type was called a dramatic scena, and a Beethoven could have done justice to the subject. The Skiles setting lacks cogency in themes and in structure, and amounts to little more than a recitation to music.

In his group of lieder Mr. Eddy fell back upon four that were certain to please his auditors, and the reception justified his choice. They were Schubert's "Staendchem," Grieg's "Ich liebe dich" and "Ein Traum" and the "Allerseelen" of Richard Strauss. His final group in English contained George Stock's "Route Marching," Keith Brown's "Canadian Logging Song," Malotte's "One, Two, Three" and the same composer's popular setting of "The Lord's Prayer."

The extra songs included Saint-Saens' "La Danse Macabre," Genevieve Davis' effective "Eventide," Easthope Martin's "Wayfarer's Night Song," Deems Taylor's "Capt. Stratton's Fancy," the stammering song from Smetana's "Prodana Nevesta" and Musorgski's "Song of the Flea." Mr. Eddy's reading of the Smetana excerpt is one of the best things that he does, but he should sing it in English.
